At Radio City Music Hall, they saw the Leslie Caron-Michael Wilding film, "The Glass Slipper" and watched the world-famous Rockettes dancing group perform. They also attended the television show, "Chance of a Lifetime."

Pat said she enjoyed watching the All-American college team play in Madison Square Garden on Saturday night. "It was even more exciting since Buzzy Wilkinson of the University of Virginia was one of the participants," she added.

U.S.S.R. Editors

The State Department and the Institute of International Education deserve praise for furthering international understanding of the free press. Visas recently granted by the State Department will enable eleven Soviet student editors to visit the United States. This invitation has aroused interest on the American college campus.

Student councils, campus newspapers, faculty, and administrative officers at 44 colleges and universities in 23 states and the District of Columbia have invited the Russian delegation to visit them. The U. S. National Student Association has also expressed interest in the tour.

The geographic range of these institutions is wide. It includes New York and New England, the midwest, the deep south, and the far west.

Included in the list are a group of student organizations which banded together last fall to extend a direct invitation to the Soviet editors to visit their campuses. These colleges also urged the State Department to grant visas to the Russian editors. The Swarthmore College Student Council acted as coordinator for this collegiate group. At the same time a number of other colleges invited the editors to visit their respective campuses or endorsed the visit independently. All of these groups welcomed the March 10 decision of the State and Justice Departments to grant visas to the Soviet delegation.

To acquaint themselves with American academic life is the stated purpose of the Soviet tour. The Institute of International Education, which was asked by the State Department to administer the visit, is planning an itinerary that will show a cross-section of American higher education. It should include visits to large private and public universities, a private college under religious direction, a Negro college, and a small private college of good standing. The Soviet student editors will be given opportunities to meet American students and to participate in discussions with them and with their professors.

The editors will arrive in New York City April 15.

The Soviet student editors have been granted entry into the United States by the Departments of State and Justice "in the national interest." Under the McCarran-Walter Immigration Act it was necessary for the Secretary of State to recommend admission to the Department of Justice. The Attorney General granted the recommended waiver of the Act.

Last summer when the Soviet student editors first applied for permission to visit the United States, Soviet propaganda made much of the U. S. refusal to grant visas at that time. The visas were turned down because American universities were not then in session. The Soviets claimed that it was the United States that had the Iron Curtain, not the U. S. S. R. Last year Russia allowed a group of American student editors to visit there.

The visit of the student editors is at the expense of the Soviets. It is in no way a U. S. Government project.

Editorial comment in the nation's press has endorsed the projected visit of the Soviet student editors. A New York Times editorial stated, "If the Russian Government is willing to expose eleven student editors, aged 25 to 39, to a close-up view of higher education in this country, it is wise of us to accept the challenge."

William Randolph Hearst, Jr., editor-in chief of the Hearst newspapers, has advocated the idea of admitting Russian students to the United States so that they may observe American life. Mr. Hearst, who has just returned from a visit to the Soviet Union, made this statement in recent speeches in Washington and Los Angeles.

It is hoped that the Soviet guests may return to the U. S. S. R. with a clear understanding of our freedom of the press and American academic life.

Shoe Fit?

Attention those who have not recently heard that:

America has the destiny of the free world in her hands. The village people of the Near East need education desperately. Today alcohol affects an average of one member of each family.

The later three statements, which were made recently by guest lecturers at Longwood College's assembly programs, fell on deaf ears.

Have you come to college only to gain enough knowledge to graduate? If so, you are cheating yourself of that certain something that distinguishes a college woman. If not, you are deceiving many guest speakers on this campus because it is evident to them that you have no intellectual curiosity.

The subject of a speaker's talk may not be of vital interest to you, but something new can be found in almost any speech if interest is directed toward finding it.

Inattentiveness at a lecture giving information that will affect your future years not only shows lack of interest in the peoples outside of your small circle of associates, but also displays serious dicourtcousness.

A man who is paid to speak to you with your fees must have a message of importance. It is true that some speakers have a better delivery than others, however you can be sure that the material of their talks is of equal value.

For the reasons of politeness and increasing knowledge, attend a lecture program with both eyes open and without stationery and knitting. You may be surprised to find listening interesting!

YWCA's Easter

This is the time of year in which the awakening of nature draws our thoughts closer to God and to the meaning of Easter.

The meaning of the resurrection lies in the fact that Christ has risen from the dead to live evermore. Each Easter brings back that story from which comes now, as it did then, new life, new hope, and joy. Christ is as much alive today as on the first Easter and seeks to fill our hearts and beautify our lives.

For the benefit of the student body, the Prayers Committee of the YWCA has planned again this year, a Pre-Easter sunrise prayer service at 6:45 a. m. on April 5. This service, to be held on the library lawn, is for us! It is our privilege to attend and it is hoped we will all feel the desire and need to do so, this Easter season..

April Foolers Dwindle Low; Loyal Fan Yelps 'Low Blow!'

By JACKIE MARSHALL

See here, all you people! It is one, great big, fat disgrace the way one certain first day of one certain fourth month (April 1, you goon!) is not respectfully observed to the fullest-est. You wear green on Saint Patrick's Day, you send mushy endearances on Valentines Day, some few throw surprise birthday parties on birthdays, but how many full-fledged, unwavering, devoted April fools are there in existence? Ver-ry few, very few. Personally, it's one of my favorite days. It's a day of idiot's delight and dignity's distress, a day of "What are those two strings hanging from your skirt? April-fool, they're just your legs!", a day of legally raising the very devil. Yesireebob, I wouldn't trade April Fool's Day for a trip to Europe, an interview with George Gobel, or one minute alone with Rock Hudson—(make it two minutes and I'll talk to you outside the dining hall).

We're all just getting too prissy to enjoy it, that's all. Honestly, I'm scared to April-fool anybody for fear of that mature, "you silly child" look, which when cast upon your innocent fun-making, render you worth two cents — wholesale. I can dream though. Yep, I can dream of all the "April-fooling" I'd pull if I were an individualist and didn't give a happy hoot what my dignified playmates said. Just for kicks, here are some of my pet ideas.

1—I'd send Mary Rogers Button a letter declaring a fault in her recent wedding ceremony thus rendering her whole wedding illegal and sign it "The Preacher."

2—I'd compliment Sally Cecil on how much better her legs fit the horse than normal people's.

3—I'd call Dot Vaden before Government.

4—I'd wake up former editor of the Rotunda—Shirley Ward—at 2 a. m., and tell her she had forgotten to edit the next day's paper.

5—I'd send Mary Hundley a letter from Alexandria saying the fabulous teaching contract she just signed was all just an April fool's joke.

6—I'd tell Jane Blake that her fiance had elop d with somebody else.

7—I'd send the junior class monotone, Muriel Boswell, a contract to star in MGM's "Song of the Nightingale"

8—I'd give all the freshmen "F" on their term papers.

9—I'd cut Charlotte Fudge's hair right smack off while she was asleep.

10—I'd speak French to Miss Barksdale and Spanish to Miss Draper.

12.—I'd go to the tearoom and order fishroe.

13—I'd have four fire drills one night r ght in a row.

14—I'd tell Dr. Lancaster that we just will not accept his resignation.

15 I'd quarantine the whole campus this week end.

Well, these are just a few of my ideas. I had some more but they won't let me print them. Anyway, see how much good clean fun could come from April Fool's Day?

by JOYCE GILLCHREST

Since the big three meeting of Churchill, Stalin, and Roosevelt at Yalta in 1945, the word Yalta has become one of the most explosive political issues in the history of the United States. Last week, ten years and 33 days after the close of the conference at the one-time Crimean resort, the State Department issued a censored bulk of papers consisting of notes, summaries, stenographic reports, top secret letters, messages of ambassadors and generals, and a coverage of conference table talk.

The justification of the Yalta decisions has been debated for ten years and, no doubt, will be a debate for the ages. The publication of the papers by the State Department has only set off another issue — should the papers have been released? Though the State Department has been working on the papers and had promised their release in the future, they had not intended to release them at this time. Last week the Department consented to give copies, confidentially, to key members of Congress. The Democrats objected and while the State Department debated what to do, a copy leaked out to the "New York Times." The "Times" intended to publish the report, so without choice the edited text was sent to the entire press.

Eight LC Swimmers Finish 30-Hr. Instructor's Course

Eight Longwood students, under the supervision of Miss Eleanor Weddle, recently completed the swimming requirements for the Red Cross Safety Instructor's Badge. The requirements for completition of the course include completion of a preliminary swimming course, the senior lifesaving course, fifteen hours of practice in the water, and a fifteen-hour testing period.

The girls who achieved their instructor's requirements are Janice Collins, Patsy Hamner, Hilda Hartis, Ann Jeter, Katharin Krehbiel, Loretta Kuhn, Nancy Richardson, and Lucy Thwing. Completion of the course enables these girls to teach any Red Cross swimming course in any of the 3,752 Red Cross chapters.

Mr. E. Camp Howard, representative of first aid and water safety service for the American National Red Cross, supervised the testing period, which lasted from March 14-18. Mr. Howard, who has previously supervised the course at Longwood annually, will return to Longwood in the future every other year.

Orchesis To Combine With Dance Classes In Rhythmic, Creative Production, April 1

by MRS. EMILY K. LANDRUM

Forty-five students of modern dance will take part in a program of dance, at 8 p. m. April 1 in Jarman Hall.

Orchesis, the modern dance clubs, and students from the second semester modern dance class will dance, with many performing on a stage, as theater dance, for the first time.

Orchesis, led by Mary Cowles and Pattie Parker, will present three compositions. "Greetings," to music by Schmidt, will open the program. Mary Cowles, Mary Mayo, Pattie Parker, and Evelyn Rowe will dance in a light extravaganza of the shy one coming to a college where everyone is very friendly.

"Preview," to Moussorgsy's Pictures at the Exhibition will portray through movements, that which may be termed as kinetic, pantomimic and balletic similar to what the Longwood student sees when she visits the modern museum in New York City for the first time. Patti Parker is the featured soloist. Gnomes literally crawl out of the enlarged picture frame. Linda Chambers, Ann Jeter, Jan Kuyk, and Nancy Richardson are the dancing Gnomes.

Chicks in many hues from white to yellow, rust and black try their wings in a typical barnyard squabble. Barbara Benedict, Dinny Coates, Faye Greenland, Nancy Lenz and Lucy Thwing will dance here.

"Degas Dancer" will feature June Strother as the ballerina come to life for the eager viewer, who completely loses her identity and becomes a dancer, too.

"Image," the third presentation of Orchesis, is a two part work applicable to our day and time, which is one of restlessness and uncertainty. Movement delineation is clearly stated by Dinny Coates, Mary Cowles, Mary Mayo, Pattie Parker and June Strother in a theme of youthful restlessness, which creates a similar feeling of empathy to the spectator. Tension is heightened in the slower moving second part, which makes use of body contour and the contraction as the impulse for movement delineation. Mopper's Sonatina is used for this evocative study of youth.

The second part of the program of dance for everyone stems from an anonymous poem entitled, "Grammar in a Nutshell." Nancy Lenz is the narrator. Students from the second semester modern dance class will perform. The whole has been a class project in which everyone has had a part in trying a hand at dancing, staging and chorography. It is still in a formative stage where everyone has much fun "doing."

It could be stated academically, as being in the process of creating for the first time, of finding one's own way of doing, moving, speaking, thinking, and feeling, or of identifying one's self with the idea or with whatever the group is doing. Longwood College life and particularly that often nebulous spirit pervades the whole into a pulsating teeming fiasco of life through four years at Longwood College.

Using the parts of speech as, articles, nouns, adjectives, pronouns, verbs, adverbs, conjunctions, and prepositions, as ideas, dances or compositions become "We Learn," "We Play," "Week End Blues," "In Love," "Any Night," "Monday Morning," "Summer Vacation" and "In and Through" in consecutive order.

Pantomime and movement become identical in the nursery rhymes of "Hey, Diddle Diddle," "Miss Muffet," and "Humpty Dumpty" in "We Learn." It is difficult to say who is featured because each character stands out. A non-typical Red 'n White —Green 'n White game is featured in "We Play."

An LC favorite song, "The Man I Love" is used for mood music in "Week End Blues." A typical "In Love" scene follows showing the bench frequenters and the ivy twiners as duets in the modern idiom are shown.

"Any Night" is typical of any dorm, but perhaps particularly during the Freshman and Sophomore years. Dancers here rely on their own accompaniment through the voice in exclamation, in song and in laughter.

"Monday Morning," using the adverbs of slowly, quickly, ill, and well is a group study based on a prank, or perhaps the truth of not wanting to go to classes that day.

"Summer Vacation" will conjure a mirage of the seashore as undulating rhythmic waves lap into the shore line, where one lonely LC junior or senior looks into the penetrating blue-green foam.

The satire is brought to a sentimental climax in "In or Through" as "greeny" green freshmen are caught by the rating sophomores to watching the familiar procession at Senior Chapel in which everyone will join in Alma Mater.

Joyce Clingenpeel and Shirley Hayden will accompany for both groups, respectively. Dottie Rector and George Ann Reynolds will supervise costuming.

American Friends Service Committee Announces Projects For College Students To Work, Study In U. S. and Abroad

The American Friends Service Committee today announced summer work and study projects in the United States and abroad that are expected to enroll nearly a thousand youth of college age.

Several years ago a Longwood student, the former Ann Willis, worked with an ASFC project in Mexico.

The Quaker organization will send young people to a dozen countries of Europe as well as to Mexico and El Salvador. A few will go to Japan and possibly to Haiti and India. Others will work on factory assembly lines in the U. S., assist social agencies in slum areas, and learn firsthand about conditions on Indian reservations.

As always, participants will include members of most races and faiths and many nationalities; customarily only a minority are themselves Quakers. Students who enroll as internes in industry or social agencies and those who work in mental hospitals and reformatories pay summer costs out of their earnings. Scholarships are available for other projects.

Work Camps Overseas

About 75 volunteers will attend work camps in Algeria, Israel and 13 countries of Europe, and a few may join a work camp and seminar in Japan from mid-June to mid-September. Those interested should be at least 20, able to speak a foreign language and must apply by April 1. Costs for Japan: $800; elsewhere, $470. A work camp in Haiti is also probable.

Work Camps in the U. S.

Six work camps are planned. Three will work with Indians—at Nett Lake, Minn., on the Chippewa reservation 200 miles north of the Twin Cities; at Crownpoint, N. M., with 15 Navajo communities; and at Bellingham, Wash., with the Lummi tribe. Another will be with migrant workers in Pennsylvania and a fifth at a settlement house in a blighted area of Richmond, Va. A work camp—probably short term in late summer — will provide the first interracial experience to an Alabama community, where a college has voted to accept both Negro and white students.

Work Camps in Central America

Up to nine units are planned in Mexico. Men's work will include digging wells and constructing sewage systems; women will help public health nurses, organize recreation and teach crafts and English. Dates: June 29-August 21. In addition, summer volunteers will be accepted at a year-round project in Mexico and longer-term volunteers for two year-round projects in El Salvador.

Internes in Industry

Students will learn about industry first hand by hunting for jobs and working on assembly lines in five cities: Atlanta, Ga.; Chicago, Ill.; Louisville, Ky.; Lynn, Mass., and Philadelphia, Pa. They will live cooperatively in industrial areas where they can meet minorities and observe problems of urban living. Dates: June 10-August 26.

Internes in Community Service

Summer volunteers will be accepted at year-round projects in Chicago, Ill., and Oakland, Calif. Participants live together, are assigned individually to agencies working on housing, broken homes, juvenile delinquency and fitting newly-arrived Mexicans, Negroes, Puerto Ricans or Indians into the community. Dates: June 17-August 26. Cost: Volunteers get board, room, and health and accident insurance, and funds to cover incidental expenses in return for their services.

Institutional Service

Volunteers will be assigned to mental hospitals in Waterbury, Vt.; Chicago, Ill.; Las Vegas, N. M., and Phoenix, Ariz.; and in Indiana and Missouri. They will work at a boys' reformatory in St. Charles, Ill., and possibly at one for girls in New Jersey; and at a school for mental defectives in Pownal, Maine, and possibly one in Washington. (Volunteers must be at least 21 for reformatory work.) Cost: Volunteers will pay about 10% of their pay (which runs to $100-150 a month plus maintenance) to meet project costs.

Seminars

A half - dozen American students, 21 to 35, will be accepted at each of four seminars which enroll about 30 foreign students apiece from 10 to 20 countries. Three four-week seminars, costing $130 each, are planned: opening in the Southeast, June 18; in New England, June 25; and on Orcas Island, Wash., August 13. An $80, two-week seminar is planned at Oberlin Ohio, beginning August 27. Students going overseas this summer may enroll in similar seminars in Europe and Japan.

Institutes

Thirty-five students will meet in Washington to explore the problems of government June 11-18 and about 60 will attend an institute in world affairs at Spencer, N. Y., June 9-18.

313 Apply to College

The Longwood admissions committee has announced that to date there is a total of 313 applicants for the 1955 fall session at Longwood. 157 of this number have already been accepted.

At this same date last year, 185 entrance applications had been received. These figures therefore show an increase of 128 applications in comparison with last year's figure.

know exactly what did happen at Yalta as a means of dissolving the myths and legends associated with the conference. Others feel it is better to concentrate on the present and future rather than something that happened ten years ago. They feel it is too late to atone for all the damage done.

Without reserve, it can be said that the effects of the papers will be felt in this country and abroad. Some fear a breach in relations with our European allies while others are more concerned with the unpredictable results in our own country. An ultimate result of the publication would be confirmation in the minds of Americans that diplomacy should be "open covenants" openly arrived at."

Horton Gives Key of Master Bedroom In LC Alumnae House To Lancasters

A key to the master bedroom of the Longwood Alumnae House was presented to Dr. and Mrs. Dabney S. Lancaster during the formal Founder's Day program Saturday. The room will be known as the Lancaster Room. The couple will use the room when they return to Farmville after their retirement. The key was presented by Miss Frances Horton of Roanoke, outgoing president of the Alumnae Association. Miss Horton hammered the key from aluminum herself.

During another meeting, Mrs. Margaret Simkins, wife of Dr. Francis B. Simkins, professor of history, was elected as the new president of the Association. Five hundred alumnae returned for the activities.

Known as "Dr. and Mrs. Lancaster Day," the seventy-first celebration was in honor of the Lancasters. The president will retire July 1. Three tributes from the alumnae, faculty and student body were made to the couple. The alumnae presented them with a hand-made drop leaf table and sideboard for their Bath County home. The key which Miss Horton presented was given "as a symbol of the high esteem in which Dr. Lancaster is held and an indication of the desire that he return to the campus as often as possible."

On behalf of the student body, Dot Vaden, president, announced that the students were establishing a Dabney S. Lancaster scholarship fund, with a gift of $200.

The faculty spokesman, Miss Helen Draper described the advances that the college has made in the nine years that Dr. Lancaster has been president. She expressed "thanks for his leadership, service, and friendship." She added that he came "nine years ago as the unanimous choice of the faculty and no member has wished to repudiate that choice." A few weeks ago, the faculty presented the Lancasters with a television set during a banquet at Longwood House.

During the afternoon business meeting, a report was made on the plans for the Alumnae House. Work has begun and it is hoped that the house will be ready for occupancy in September. The brick walls which have stood since 1835, have been reinforced. Excavation of the basement so that it will be deeper and the addition of concrete floors there has been completed. The exterior of the house will be re-painted.

The architect's plans have been drawn up for the interior and exterior of the house. The addition next to Jarman Hall will be removed and French doors and windows will be added there. A new kitchen is planned where the sun porch presently is located. The door between the living and dining rooms will be enlarged so that the two rooms may be used for receiving guests. The large room on the left hand side of the hall downstairs will be used as part of the Alumnae offices.

A new bathroom is planned for the upstairs which will also have three bedrooms. The rooms will be used for visitors during the year, executive and council meetings, and on Founder's Day, for the Alumnae officers.

The house was purchased by the college on July 2, 1917 from the DuVall family of Farmville. The project is being financed entirely by the Association.

The Jarman Cup for attendance was won by the class of 1905. Eleven members of the class including Mrs. Lucy Anderson Ward of Sandston, president of the January class and Mrs. Edith Dickey Morris of Charlotteville, president of the June class helped their 50th reunion win the Cup.

Mrs. E. E. Hundley of Farmville, Class of 1888, was the earliest member present. Mrs. Janie Staples Chappell of Richmond, was the lone representative of the Class of 1894. Mrs. Susie Fulks Williams, '78, of Richmond, gave her class the distinction of being the oldest reunion class represented. This was Mrs. Williams first visit on Founders Day since her graduation 60 years ago.

Issues Review 2 Productions Of Longwood

Two productions at Longwood College of last year have been listed in national publications. The opera "Suor Angelica," by Puccini has been noted in the compilation of operatic productions in the United States published in "Opera News," publication of the Metropolitan Opera Association. The performance, in Italian, was directed by Mr Charles A. Attix, former instructor in music.

The Longwood Players' spring production of "Romeo and Juliet," directed by Dr. C. L. S. Earley, is noted in the winter issue of "The Shakespeare Quarterly," which makes an annual listing of Shakespearean plays performed in the United States.

Nat'l Honor Society Bids 4 New Members

Betty Lou Jefferson, Loretta Brooking, Shirley Wilbourne, and Charles Winfree are new members of Kappa Delta Pi, national honor society in education.

To be bid to Kappa Delta Pi, a student must be in the upper quintile of his class which at Longwood is a cumulative 2.25 average.

At the next meeting of the society the new members will be initiated. Officers will also be elected, and plans will be made for the annual tea in May.

Professor Writes For CEA Release

The leading article in the March issue of "The CEA Critic," a publication of the College English Association, is by Dr. R. C. Simonini, Jr., head of Longwood College's English department.

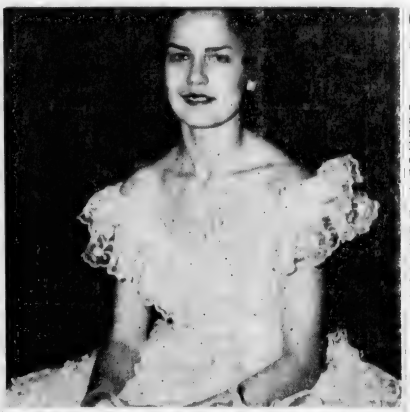
Club to Stage French Play Friday, Ap. 29

"Cyrano de Bergerac" will be presented by Le Cercle Francais in Jarman Auditorium on Friday, April 29 at 8 p. m.

Dr. C. L. S. Earley will direct the play which will be presented entirely in French. A summary in English will precede each scene and will include a translation of some of the most famous lines. Since the drama is quite long, the club has condensed it into three scenes. These include the theatre scene in which Cyrano speaks his noted "nose soliloquy," a balcony scene in which Christian makes love to Roxanne with the words of Cyrano who feels that he is too ugly to express his love himself, and the scene in which Cyrano is dying and finally reveals that it has been he, not Christian, who has been writing the love letters.

Rostard wrote the play for Coquelin, the famous actor of the latter nineteenth century. It was an immediate success. The translation of the drama starring Walter Hampden met with acclaim in America.



Dr. Earley's play production class is in charge of the sets, and Michelle Bodo, student assistant from France, is guiding the students on pronounciation. Records, tape recordings and research have aided the students with their work and rehearsals for the play.

James Parker will give the summaries before each scene. Cyrano de Bergerac will be played by Sally Wilson, while Florence Blake will portray Christian, the good looking lover who lacks the brilliancy of Cyrano. Nancy Nelson will be seen as Roxanne.

Minor roles which mainly include the noblemen of the court will also be played by the French students. Nancy Lenz will appear

Organ, Harp Duo To Complete Series

The final program of the 1954-55 Longwood Artists Series will feature a recital by McCurdy and Greenwood, an organ-harp duo at 8 p. m., April 26 in Jarman Hall.

Alexander McCurdy and his wife, Flora Greenwood, have made frequent tours throughout this country. Dr. McCurdy, having played in public when he was 9 years of age, is organist and musical director of the First Presbyterian Church in Philadelphia. He is also head of organ departments at Curtis Institute, Pa., and Westminster Choir College, Princeton, N. J.

Born in Eureka, California, Dr. McCurdy had his first music lessons from his mother, an organist, as soon as he was big enough to reach the pedals. At 15 years of age, Dr. McCurdy was organist for one of Oakland's largest churches. Two years later he was called to San Francisco where he held position of organist and choirmaster at St. Luke's Episcopal Church.

Studying in New York with the distinguished Lynwood Farnum, one of the foremost organists of his time and a great authority on Bach, McCurdy made his New York recital debut at Town Hall. He later served as organist and choir director at the Church of the Redeemer in Morristown, N. J., and gradually increased his concert activities as his reputation spread throughout the East and the rest of the nation.

Continuing study with Farnum who became head of the organ department at Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia, Dr. McCurdy became organist at the Second Presbyterian Church in the Quaker City where he prepared and conducted major works of Bach, Handel, Mozart, and many other composers of the past and present. This church merged with two other churches, and Dr. McCurdy was placed in charge of music for all three.

Flora Greenwood began as a pianist and entered the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia. Developing the ambition to play the harp, she began instruction under Carlos Salzedo and later became harpist of the Philadelphia Orchestra under the direction of Leopold Stokowski.

Root Of All Illiteracy?

Some say that money is the root of all evil. However, if immediate action is not taken to increase teaching salaries, money may instead become the root of all illiteracy.

Today, Virginia is facing one of the country's most serious educational problems—an inadequate supply of teachers to meet the demands of public school systems.

Present teachers have appealed to county school boards, state boards of education, and city newspapers' "Voice of the People" columns. The cry of these educators is just! They should not be expected to support dependents (which many have) on the salaries that they are now receiving.

There are states functioning with approximately the same cost of living as Virginia's, but teachers of those states are well rewarded for their efforts.

Comments made by today's students preparing to teach should make Virginia realize that she should act now to increase salaries. Many students who in their freshman year prepared to major in education, have by their junior year found fields offering more opportunities for advancement and adequate salaries. Others who have remained in the education course have stated that after graduation they will either not teach at all, or will teach for only one year at the most.

An increase in salaries would bring teachers now employed in other fields back into the profession. More young people would become interested in teacher training. In general, the quality of teaching in Virginia would rise. At present there are 136 teachers in the State with only a high school education.

We agree with President Lancaster, who said in a recent newspaper interview that the belief of many that just any girl will do as an elementary teacher is "a tragic error in thinking." It goes without saying that this is also true in regard to high school teachers.

The Virginia Education Association has been supporting a salary increase for many years. If you, as a future teacher, want to receive a higher salary, support the VEA or appeal to your delegate to the General Assembly.

The "push" that's needed should come from you!

Blue Monday!!

Monday morning! Eight o'clock classes stare Longwood ladies smack dab in the face. But just a minute—let's take another look at these faces! Hm! Not so good. Yeah, we understand—great weekend — parties, laughs, the No. 1 man, and parties.

Where do they go from here? Well, if you're not careful, you'll get caught in the stampede to the infirmary. Monday usually finds an influx of patients who have "dropped in" to recuperate from the stress of Saturday and Sunday. Their complaints vary from nausea, headache, and fatigue to cancer.

The wards overflow and the sick list really does look impressive at the faculty mail box. Dr. Ray Moore, however, being the father of ex-college students, is "hep to these fakes" and diagnoses them all as "weekend casualties."

Several hours later when all of the lost sack time has been regained, the population in the infirmary thins out considerably. The most interesting thing to note is that by Thursday and Friday, the wards are void of girls. Where are they? The answer is simple. Most of them are in the dorms packing to take off on another glorious weekend!

Smokey's Report

Just the flick of a finger from a speeding car! A glowing cigarette lands in a clump of sun-dried grass. In minutes, the roaring blaze of another fire races across the land.

Last year there were 155,000 forest fires in the U. S.—over 400 a day! They burned 10 million acres of valuable timber, an area larger than Masschusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island combined. Cost of these fires was one billion dollars, three times that of the famous San Francisco holocaust.

In Virginia alone, about 2,490 fires destroyed approximately 16,800 acres last year. The damage of these fires has been estimated at $504,000. George Dean, State Forester at Charlottesville, estimated 550 woods fires had occurred so far this year.

And the most tragic part of this shameful waste is that 9 out of 10 of these fires are preventable! Fire reports show that 90 per cent of all our wood fires are caused by everyday, well-meaning people who were careless for a fatal moment with cigarettes, matches, campfires, brush and trash fires.

On drives through the country this spring and especially while on lake parties, make sure your fires are out! Break your matches before throwing them away and drown all campfires.

Carelessness is costly!

Salk Releases First Results From Vaccine

By JOYCE GILLCHREST

Dr. Jonas E. Salk, medical researcher at the University of Pittsburgh, along with Dr. Thomas Francis, Jr., director of the polio evaluation center at University of Michigan at Ann Arbor, have released the results on the effectiveness of the Salk antipolio vaccine. In April 1954, the vaccine was approved for public use at which time a controlled experiment was begun on some 440,000 children. By November 1954, the task of compiling the data for results began. The report of Dr. Francis and his staff is that the vaccine is 80-90 per cent effective. Dr. Salk hopes to perfect the serum so as to completely wipe out polio.

As wonderful as this new medical discovery is, it does present a problem to the National Polio Foundation. The Foundation has become the nation's biggest volunteer health agency. In the event that the Salk vaccine should wipe out polio, it is probable that the Foundation will shift its attention to some other major health problem. Nevertheless, it would take several years for the Foundation to halt its present activities in research and education. In addition, a major responsibility of the Foundation is its many polio victims whose care wouldn't be discontinued suddenly.

In efforts to perfect the Salk vaccine the Foundation will be able to support the continued efforts of Dr. Salk and his colleagues.

Some other diseases which could utilize the success which the Foundation has attained are tuberculosis, cancer, heart disease, cerebral palsy, arthritis, and rheumatism.

Oh, Give Me B'ars, Guns 'n Crocketts

By JACKIE MARSHALL

I just looove Davy Crockett! It's gotten so that his name is on eevrybody's lips and when a guy's name is on everybody's lips, that's pretty dawgone well-known.

I used to love Tom Corbett, but how much can you take of jets, atom pills, and rocket-blast indigestion? I used to love Joe Friday, too—but it's just not good for me to face facts all the time. I even had a crush on Dick Tracy but "Neki Hockey" just ain't my language. So, now Davy Crockett has been revived. We sing about him being born on a mountain top in Tennessee which just goes to show how hep he was on the out-of-doors. We read of his exploits in history which goes to show how educational he is. We even see the son of a gun on TV which goes to show how versatile he is. Yep! I just looove Davey Crockett.

He's a down-to-earth sort of person and it's downright amazing how he rose from the back country into the limelight of a nation. I admire him for several things. First of all, he spent a grand total of four days in school. Think of that! Why, if I had it to do all over again, I'd go to school for four days at the end of which time, I'd sling my trusty rifle over my shoulder and go shoot b'ars!

Then, history says that Davy ran away from home due to an argument with his old man over why he couldn't use the horse one Friday night. What a man! If I had it to do all over again, I'd have run away from home the last time I couldn't get the car.

Davy went back to school at the age of 18 in an effort to impress his lady love, but he quit again six months later when she jilted him. Now, if I had it to do all over again, I'd have gone back to school, too to impress my man love and if he jilted me—I'd have slung my trusty rifle over my shoulder and gone out and shot the man!

They say that Davy was brave, generous, frank, had a good disposition but was lazy and shiftless. If there's anything I like, it's a man who is brave, frank, has a good disposition but is brave, generous, and frank!

Davy served in Congress and heroically defended the Alamo—where he was killed.

Now, where can you find a man like that today? He was the roughest, toughest, cussin'es shootin'est, male'ea man I've ever heard of! Yep, I could really go for Davy Crockett in a big way. He really can influence people with the escapades he's lived through. If you'll excuse me now, folks, I'm gonna sling my trusty rifle over my shoulder and go shoot a b'ar!

Cecil Explains Riding Here; Describes Hungarian Couple

By PAT JONES

It took little encouragement to launch Sally Cecil, senior, into an enlightening discussion on the riding school now holding forth at Longwood Estate. The demanding sport of horsebackriding is apparently a favorite for Sally, who explains that riding may be described as "demanding" because one must skillfully combine coordination, balance, timing, and alertness to ride well. As Sally says, "A good rid r makes it look so easy."

Sally was quite enthusiastic about the Count and Countess Gyurky who direct Longwood's riding school. The Gyurky's are from Hungary and have been here in the U. S. for six years. When Sally asked the Count one day if he were contemplating returning to Europe, he replied, "I have spent the first 50 years of my life in Europe. I shall spend my next 50 years here in America; then I might return to Europe."

The Count's nickname is "Dollar," and when a student asked Countess Gyurky if "Dollar" spoke any other languages, she answered, "'Dollar' speaks seven langages, and none of them well."

Count Gyurky was, during his military career, a teacher in the calvary in Hungary. Sally praises his ability as a teacher, especially in the practice end of it.

"The Countess writes many magazine articles about horses," said Sally. She added that she writes often for the magazine, "National Horseman," and is the author of the book, "Mark of the Clover."

The Countess is an artist, having an avid interest in ink sketching. She uses her sketches to illustrate correct riding positions.

Sally speaks of the Countess, or Aunt Judith as her pupils call her, an an excellent cook, and says she has eaten with the Gyurkys on a number of occasions. Countess Gyurky's specialty is homemade soup, but Sally says her Hungarian goulash is wonderful, too.

According to Sally, the Count has one of the best strings of any riding school. Sally has studied under two other riding professors and has seen many other schools of riding. Here, the Gyurky's classes are composed of ten college students and ten town students whom they teach on Wednesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays at Longwood Estate. Sally has helped teach throughout the year at various times. At present she is helping with the town students on Saturdays from 10:30 a. m. to 12:30 p. m. As she says, "I haven't help them as much as they've helped me. It is through helping others that we ourselves learn."

Sally's favorite horse is a chestnut named Funny Face. Originally, he was trained as a gaited horse, but when the Gyurkys bought him they found he has the confirmation and spirit of a jumper, and so this year they have been trying to teach him an easy, natural pace and also to teach him to jump.

May Festivity To Take Trip Into Fantasy Land

An author's dream to carry adults back to a land of fantasy will come true at 3 p. m., Saturday when the college will open its May festivities in the Dell of Longwood Estate.

"Alice In a Land of Wonder," Longwood College's 1955 May Day celebration will carry the audience back to their dreams and simple childhood love for the land of Fairy Tales.

Exploring the land of Beauty and Truth, Alice, played by Dottie Rector, will enter a land of make-believe where life is beautiful and fantastic. In this land, faith and hope, blossoms and dreams become reality.

Crowning the Queen of May, Beth Kent, of Richmond, Alice presents a symbol of spring when life all over the world begins to blossom.

Matron-of-honor will be Nancy Tanley Masters, of Newport News. Court attendants are Joan DeAlba, Nancy Nelson, Martha Donaldson, Patsy Abernathy, Molly Harvey, Joan Darnell, Diane Acree, Bonnie Paxon, Suzanne Faison, Peggy Dickerson, Carol Stroupe, and Libby White.

James Parker and Freddie Stables, author and narrator respectively set Alice on her journey. They represent the author who dreams of bringing the world a gift of enchanment through the girl, Alice, in whom life most beautifully exists.

Encountering the white rabbit, played by June Strother, Alice joins in the dance of the rabbits. Shortly she meets Tweedle Dee and Tweedle Dum, who present a lively dance. Alice loses the white rabbit and runs after him. But in Fairyland Alice has many treats.

The Mad Hatter and hatters dance for Alice. The mock turtle, played by Carol Wolfe, and the griphon, played by Phoebe Warner, dance with Alice who is now lost. Alice, never having lived under the sea, is introduced to the delightful Lobster Quadrille, including fish, snails, and turtles.

At last Alice finds the white rabbit and runs with him through the clover. She meets the Court of the Queen of Hearts. She views the traditional Maypole Dance by the dragonflies and flowers. Alice dances among the flowers while the rabbit crowns her to crown the Queen of May. Thus ends Alice's journey to that magic spot known as Fairyland.

May Day is under the direction of Mary Ann Ward. The dialogue was written by Carolyn Stanley and the songs were composed by Sally Wilson. Poems selected from "Alice in Wonderland" will be recited by a choral group.

Committee chairmen are as follows: court Patsy Abernathy; costumes, Loretta Brooking; dance Jane Blake; music Mary Ellen Hardbarger; program Elsie Macon; properties, Lou Wilder; transportation, Barbara Whitehead; and publicity, Ann Thaxton.

Business manager for the presentation is Martha Donaldson.

More Than A Coke

A plan for serving cafeteria style breakfasts may be the difference between arising on the wrong or right side of the bed. Breakfast, to some extent, regulates dispositions and if this plan, being studied by members of the Student Standards Committee, is put into effect, many Longwood girls may find their dipposition improved.

The main purpose of this change in service is, of course, not to better students' dispositions, but to offer a more healthful beginning to the day for those students who at present skip breakfast because of the early hour at which it is served.

Tentative arrangements for this change in serving affects only the morning meal. If accepted, the students will be able to obtain breakfast from 7:15 to 8:45. Many girls who do not have 8 a. m. classes do not attend the present breakfast because it is served only at 7:15. Under the proposed system, those students will be able to sleep later and still eat breakfast before their 9 a. m. classes.

A trial breakfast will be served on some Sunday this month. This will be done to test the operations of the kitchen staff, rather than the students' reaction to the change.

A report of this plan was made recently at class meetings and there was a general voice of approval from the students.

It must be understood that this transition will be slow. The students should be patient with any bottlenecks that develop.

If arrangements can be made to adopt this system, it seems probable that many girls will have something more substantial than a Coke before lunch time.

On The Beaten Path

Spring on Longwood College's campus has revealed the laziness of us—the students. From any place on the paved walkways which link building to building, there can be seen the eyesore evidence of those who have gotten off the paved path and beaten one of their own for the sake of saving a few extra steps.

There are walkways provided to and from, behind and before, beside and between every building.

This is the time of year when every effort to make our campus greener is being made. Only by the cooperation of all can this be achieved.

We are not a herd of cattle—therefore, prohibiting ropes should not be erected to keep us off the grounds. Neither are we without pride when it comes to the appearance of our campus.

It is hoped that in the future, the sidewalks will be used as they were meant to be and that the grass will be allowed to grow.

Write-Your-Congressman

(Editor's Note: The following was written by Harry Lancaster as a representative of Tau Theta Pi, men's social fraternity.)

If a young man stops you in the hall and asks you to write your congressman expressing your views on some topic of current interest, don't shrug it off as a unique approach to get a date for next Saturday night. Tau Theta Pi, the men's social fraternity, is sponsoring a Write-Your Congressman campaign in connection with its spring initiation of new members. The two fraternity pledges, John Roberts and Derwood Guthrie, must obtain the signatures of twenty persons who promise to write their congressmen concerning an important issue; but participation in the campaign is not being limited to these two men. All of the members have been urged to solicit promises to write to congressmen.

The fraternity feels that since the members of the student body will soon be eligible to vote, their opinions should be voiced to their congressmen. It also hopes to stimulate a greater interest in current events among Longwood students. Several topics which may be suggested are: universal military training, the racial problem, farm parity, and federal aid to schools; but the choice of the topic as well as the opinions expressed on it will be left to the discretion of the individual student. The members of Tau Theta Pi ask you to participate in this campaign by writing to your congressman and telling him how you feel on a certain issue even though you may not be approached directly by one of the members or pledges of the fraternity. Remember, a vigilant public is the best deterrent to a careless government.

Of Interest

By JOYCE GILLCHREST

In the seventeenth century, philosophers were of the opinion that all of the universe could be explained in terms of motion; hence everything could be reduced to physics. However, at that time there were some phenomena which contradicted this belief. One of these was the working of the human brain. Newton's Laws and Kepler's Laws expressed conveniently the motion of plants and stars. But the functions of the brain were so abstract to the sages of this century that they could not reduce thoughts to a mechanical level.

Since then man's increased knowledge of physiology and mechanics has enabled him to develop machinery capable of carrying out most of the processes which are performed by the human brain.

Remington-Rand's giant computor Univac, stores data in mercury tubes thereby having a mechanical memory. Whole problems which are placed on magnetic tapes in the form of electrical impulses take the place of thoughts in the human brain. Many scientists will argue today that the workings of the brain are actually electrical in nature. In solving the problems the machine uses a type of reasoning. None of these functions of electronic computors, memory, thought, reason have reached the relative perfection that they have in the human brain. But science is striving to improve its machinery until it reaches the human level or even surpasses it.

Art Group Stages Auction of Works

By CARLOYN STANLEY

Who'll give me twenty-five cents for this beautiful, freshly painted Blake original? I have one large interesting something straight from the brush of Dot Douglas—who'll give me $1.00, $1.25, $1.50—sold

Such were the familiar sayings that were heard at the annual art auction at 3:00 p. m. last Friday afternoon. Art classes in oil painting, water color, crafts and ceramics submitted articles to be auctioned off by James Parker, Florence Blake and Carolyn Stanley.

Townspeople and students were on hand for the occasion and practically all of the articles were sold during the afternoon. It was agreed by the art contributors that one-half of the proceeds

Pedagogue Report Card Patter

The following is a bewildered parent's translation of a teacher's comments on report cards.

"Michael does not socialize well."

"John is progressing very well for him."

(Don't feel so happy, Pappy—this means Johnny is a dope. He's 12 years old and has just learned 2 and 2 makes 4, which, as teacher points out, is progress—for him.)

• • • • • •

"Frank's personality evidences a lack of social integration."

• • • • • •

"Oscar shows a regrettable lack of self-control."

(This means Oscar doesn't do what teacher wants. Self-control means how much control the teacher has over Oscar.)

• • • • • •

"Harry seems emotionally immature for the first grade."

(Get out little Hank's birth certificate, Mother—this means that teacher thinks you lied about his age to get him in school.)

• • • • • •

"Jerome participates very fully in class discussion."

(This may be good or bad. It means that Jerry never shuts his big yap. Perhaps he'll grow up to be a salesman.)

• • • • • •

"James is an individualist."

(Nice way of saying Jim is a trouble maker.)

• • • • • •

"Richard's work indicates a lack of mastery over the upper ranges of the fundamental combinations necessary for arithmetical computation."

(Don't rush to a psychiatrist—just teach Dick his 7, 8, and 9 times tables—he doesn't know them.)

• • • • • •

"Nathan's lack of muscular co-ordination prevents him from participating fully in body-building activities."

(Cut down the calories, Mom—Nat's too fat to play games.)

• • • • • •

"Robert is a well-adjusted, wholesome integrated individual."

Nat'l. Educator Sees Ways To Increase Teacher Supply

EDWARD M. TUTTLE
Executive Secretary
National School Boards Association, Inc.

1. Remember first, last and always that the education of children and youth is dependent on the character, ability, and dedication of their teachers more than any other single factor in the school system.

2. Keep local standards high. Establish the reputation of employing only fully qualified teachers. Never let the bars down.

3. Pay salaries which will attract and hold top quality teachers and reduce turnover to a minimum. No investment will pay bigger dividends.

4. Treat Teachers as accepted members of the community, entitled to genuine respect and appreciation for their public service.

5. Be generous in the provision of working and living conditions which will remove handicaps to effective teaching and give to teachers a sense of well-being and genuine accomplishments.

6. Establish a policy which will give competent and qualified teachers asurance of support and freedom to teach without fear of unjust criticism and reprisal.

7. Provide maxmium opportunities for teachers at all levels of tenure and experience to grow in service so that year by year their effectiveness increases.

8. Encourage admistration-staff relationships which will result in welding the professional personnel into a loyal, smooth-working and cooperative team.

9. Inaugurate a system of guidance which will include the early discovery of students in the school who appear to possess the charact.. eristics of successful teachers, and provide for their consistent encouragement toward such a career, to the end that the local community may contribute as many or more excellent recruits to the teaching profession as it requires fully certified teachers to fill positions on its instructing staff.

10. Stimulate community provision of scholarships for promising candidates to the teaching profession who might otherwise be unable to pursue their educational preparation.

World's Professional Typist Dazzles Audience of 500 Here With Dexterity

Within the next ten years 85% of the typewriters used in business will be electric models, George L. Hossfield, told five hundred college and high school students at Longwood College Thursday, April 28.

Mr. Hossfield, ten times winner of the World's Professional typewriting championship, gave a typing demonstration and lecture which was sponsored by Longwood's Department of Business Education.

Author, lecturer, and consultant on typing methods and techniques, Mr. Hossfield spoke on "Modern Training and Teaching Methods to Develop Typing Skill" to students of Longwood College and the Farmville, Pamplin, Worsham, Cumberland, Buckingham Central and Amelia High Schools.

He stated that 95% of the students taking typewriting are capable of typing at a speed of 100 words a minute provided they improve thier techniques. Improvement should be made in the position of the hands, feet, and eyes; continuity in stroking; insertion of paper; and changing the paper.

Mr. Hossfield, who established a record of 143 net words per minute for one hour to win his first world's professional championship, typed during the lecture at speed varying from forty words to one hundred forty words a minute. He has the distinction of being the only person to win the world's professional typewriting championship ten times.

As director of the Underwood Corporation's Teachers Advisory service, Mr. Hossfield has lectured in schools, colleges, universities and conventions of business teachers throughout the United States and Canada. He is a present on a lecture-demonstration tour. He told the business teachers here that the Underwood Company has prepared a new kit of teaching aids to be used in class room instruction.

In speaking of the trend toward the use of electric typewriters, he said that more letters can be produced each day on an electric typewriter than on a conventional typewriter, because less energy is expended in using the electric keyboard.

DeSica Touch Produces Lasting Film

By MARGARET DRYDEN

A man gets a job pasting up movie posters on the walls of Rome. Someone steals the bicycle he needs for the job. With his little son he goes looking, through a city overrun with bicycles, for the one which means to him steady work, food for his family, and a chance for self-respect.

Around this simple story, "The Bicycle Thief," one of the most beautiful films which I have ever viewed is built. It is beautiful through its handling by Italian director Vittorio De Sica. Hollywood directors would have overplayed its sentiment. Such scenes as the meal of the father and son in the restaurant devouring food which they can ill afford while people of an upper class at another table are enjoying the same kind of food with the difference being that it is habitual for them. The scene in which the son becomes angry with his father and refuses to walk on the same side of the street with the older man is memorable. And the fear that the father feels when he realises that his son may have drowned, only to find him safe on the bridge is outstanding. One of the most sentimental scenes in the movie, perhaps one of the best displayed in any film, was in the last scene, in which the boy slips his hand into the hand of his broken-hearted father.

But one of the most beautiful things about the movie was that it found time for humor — not comic, but human relief. It was universal in that it could have been anyone's story.

The scenes showing the old stone sidewalks, walls, and buildings of Rome were realistic—they signify that "For centuries the unknown lives of men now buried, touched and wore these stones and when we see them, something stirs within our hearts."

Perhaps the film was enhanced by the fact that its actors were not professional; De Sica picked them from the sidewalks of Rome. The father, Ricci, was portrayed by Lamberto Maggiorani, who is in real-life a metal worker. Bruno, the child, was played by Enza Staiola. De Sica taught him to give one of the best performances that any child actor has ever given on the screen. As the sturdy little ragamuffin son, he was tragically older than his years in that he had never known the irresponsibility of an American child, yet the light of youth was still present in his face. The tough yet tender mother was played by Lianella Carrell.

De Sica is a former Italian actor. His career changed, however in 1946 when he produced his first film, "Shoe Shine." "The Bicycle Thief" was his second film but, no doubt, he will direct scores more. Whatever "Shoe Shine" missed, "The Bicycle Thief" caught.

Rene Clair voted "The Bicycle Thief" as "The best film for 30 years." "A masterpiece of pathos" was the description given by Life magazine. New York critics voted it as 1949's best foreign-language film. Like Everyman, it is a story that will live forever.

Seato Greek To 51 Per Cent Of Nation's College Students

(From the RPI "Proscript")

How many know the meaning of those strange initials: SEATO? SEATO is the NATO of the Pacific. It's a group of eight nations dedicated in part—at least—to prevent the further spread of Communism in Southeast Asia.

And yet: Less than half of the college students in the United States can say they've ever heard of SEATO!

The Associated Collegiate Press asked college students throughout the country this question:

Have you ever heard of SEATO—the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization?

The answers were:

Yes	47%
No	51%
Undecided	2%

Here's something to think about: More college men than women said they'd heard about SEATO. The figures went like this:

	Yes	No	Und.
Men	58%	41%	1%
Women	33%	64%	3%

Not everyone who said he has heard of SEATO knew much about it, though. ACP asked those who had answered yes to the question, a sort of check-up question:

Would you name as many of the SEATO Pact nations as you can, please.

And this is the way the answers ran:

Percentages

Those who could not name any ...	Tl. Men	Wom
of the nations	21 14	40
One nation correctly	14 12	22
	T.. Men	Wo.
Two nations correctly	13 12	16
Three nations correctly	8 11	3
Four nations correctly	14 19	3
Five nations correctly	13 14	8
Six nations correctly	8 10	3
Seven nations correctly	4 5	0
All nations correctly ..	5 3	5

The eight nations belonging to SEATO are: Australia, France, New Zealand, Pakistan, Philippines, Thailand, United Kingdom, and United States.

Even though a lot of students don't know much or anything about SEATO, one of the important bulwarks against Communism, ACP has found that they have some definite ideas about certain things the United States should do in the "cold war," or whatever it is.

For one thing, they think the United States should do a better job of putting out propaganda than it has been doing.

The Associated Collegiate Press asked them:

It has been stated by certain sources that the United States is losing the "cold war" because the Russians are producing more and better propaganda. Regardless of whether this statement is true or not, do you think the United States should spend more money on overseas libraries, Voice of America radio stations, the Point Four program, etc.? And here is how they answered:

66% say yes, we should spend more.

24% say no, we should not spend more.

Student Reviews Rostand's Drama

By PAT WALTON

On Friday, April 29th, Le Cercle Francais gave an exceptional performance of three scenes from Edmond Rostand's "Cyrano de Bergerac". The choice of scenes was very fine as they were the best-known of the play, and they maintained the continuity of the story. The audience knew what was happening even though they didn't understand the French dialogue. Together the lighting, costumes, and sets, which were simple, were effective and added much to the play. In the first scene, the mob seemed to be very much at ease and quite natural. The supporting roles were well done, and Sally Wilson as the dashing Cyrano was outstanding. Her performance gave the play much lustre. In every respect, the presentation was a success.

STC Educator Dies

Dr. Samuel Page Duke, a former member of the faculty of Longwood College, passed away Monday, April 25.

Dr. Duke, who served on the Farmville State Teachers College faculty from 1914 to 1918, was also the first principal of the Farmville training school.

Following his work here, Dr. Duke served as the state high school supervisor, after which he became president of Madison College until his retirement in 1948.

Indonesian Students No Longer Apart From Major National Social Problem

(From the Sweet Briar News)

(Editor's Note: The following article, writen by the president of the Indonesian National Union of Students, was released by the U. S. National Student Association. The author recently visited schools and communities through out the U. S. as a guest of the USNSA.)

Nationally and internationally, Indonesian students no longer live in "splendid isolation" from major social problems.

Once trained as an educated "elite" apart from our fellow-countrymen, we are now intimately concerned with broadening the base of popular education, increasing participation in national elections and other means of developing our status as an independent country.

Nearly 70 per cent of us in college serve as part-time teachers. We feel this essential to bring educational opportunities to our nation as a whole and to train the specialists necessary for its development.

Like students the world over, we have great concern in the economic and social problems facing students. Our National Union of Students regularly discusses scholarship, dormitory construction and health problems with the Ministries of Health and Education. Agencies like World Universities Service have helped us relieve our most acute economic needs.

This year, in cooperation with the government, we hope to encourage students to instruct citizens in their home communities on democratic voting procedures. This will be done on a non-partisan basis in preparation for our first nation-wide election.

Internationally, our National Union dis-affiliated from the international Union of Students last year and participated in the International Student Conference with fraternal observer status. We are interested in broadening our contacts with students from all over the world, however, and will continue to cooperate with IUS on any programs of practical cooperation which do not serve partisan political ends.

In the near future, we hope to promote cooperation between students in Asia by sponsoring a conference on our common educational problems. We believe conferences run on a non-partisan basis can be helpful in developing practical programs of cooperation to meet these problems and remind us of the community of interest which exists among all students.

VOLUME XXXIV | Longwood College, Wednesday, May 18, 1955 | No. 17

Mrs. Pollyanna Martin Foard chats informally with her examiners prior to their oral examination of her Honors paper.

Foard Completes Honors Course As Board Examines Study of Gould

For one hour last Thursday afternoon at Longwood College an examining board composed of Dean Margaret Roberts of Westhampton College of the University of Richmond, Dr. Walter Harding of the University of Virginia, and Dr. C. H. Quenzel of Mary Washington College questioned Mrs. Pollyanna Foard concerning her recently completed research paper "Wallace Gould; A Critical Study."

Pollyanna, a member of the 1955 graduating class of Longwood College, compiled her paper for an Honors course in English.

Gould, a poet born in Maine, resided in Farmville from 1920 until his death in 1940.

The oral examination, opened to the faculty and students, began with an introduction of Pollyanna to the examiners by Dr. R. C. Simonini, head of the English department at Longwood and sponsor of Pollyanna's research.

Dean Roberts opened the questioning by asking Pollyanna how she became interested in doing research work on Gould. Pollyanna explained that her work concerning Gould began during her sophomore year as a critical essay for the Colonnade, the College's literary magazine.

Pollyanna established her writing style in the manner of the "New Biographies" such as those recently written of Shakespeare, F. Scott Fitzgerald and the Brownings. This explanation was followed by criticism from Dr. Quenzel, who felt that in some points her statements were "presumptuous" without footnotes to indicate her sources. In answer to Dr. Quenzel's criticism, it was explained that Pollyanna was attempting to write an interesting study that would be widely read and it was further explained that her documentation was appended to the text in a classified bibliography and a calendar of letters.

Dr. Harding asked Pollyanna, "Do you consider Gould a worthwhile poet?" "Yes," answered Pollyanna, "I feel he is worthwhile, however, his popularity as a poet has declined since the 1920's."

Dr. Harding added, "Would a revival of Gould's writings be worthwhile, and if so, why?" Pollyanna replied that Gould's grasp and choice of materials, such as local color, and classical Greek works would, in her opinion, make a revival of his writings worthwhile.

It was pointed out during the examination that Gould's subject matter was often unconventional and Pollyanna was praised by Dr. Quenzel for her "finesse" in handling such subject matter.

All three judges complimented Pollyanna for her "extremely interesting written style."

Pollyanna described Gould's poetry as essentially "good prose" with "some poetic devices." Dr. Harding wished to know if Pollyanna feels Gould has added any new values to modern poetry. The student author replied that she feels Gould's style offered "more leeway to express emotions."

Pollyanna also stated during the examination that she feels Gould may be classed as more than a minor poet.

Following a private discussion of the Honors paper between Pollyanna, Dr. Simonini and the examiners, it was announced that Pollyanna, work had been unanimously accepted for Honors in English.

Each examiner asked for copies of the paper for their college and university libraries, and it was their suggestion that she investigate the possibility of having her work published to be sold.

College Adds New Painting To Collection

The fourth selction in Longwood College's collection of paintings by Virginia Artists has recently been purchased. "The Edge of the Marsh" by Mrs. Jean Craig Jones of Hampton will be delivered to the college during the first week of June.

Mrs. Jones, a graduate of the Moore Institute of Art and the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, teaches with her husband in a Hampton studio.

"The Edge of the Marsh" was selected from this year's Virginia Biennial Exhibition now showing at the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts.

Already included in the college's collection of paintings by Virginia Artists are: Greta Matson's "Kathy with Pearls," in the Virginia Room; Edith Peford's "It Started Early This Morning" in the Rotunda; and Jack Clifton's "Chesapeake" in the Student Lounge.

Longwood College has also been the recipient of a water color painting "Weeping Willows in Spring" by Miss Adele Williams. Miss Williams is the aunt of Mrs. W. M. F. Bayliss of Richmond. Mrs. Bayliss selected Longwood as one of the schools in Virginia to receive a painting left by her late artist- aunt.

Dispatch To Note Versatile Seniors In College Feature

Nancy Nelson has been selected to appear in a Richmond Times-Dispatch feature on the most representative members of graduating classes in Virginia colleges and universities. Nancy, an English major from Newport News, will be featured as "the most representative senior" of Longwood College.

Nancy has been actively associated with various campus organizations in her four years at Longwood. She was a member of the Y. W. C. A. sing chairman her sophomore year, and served on the Freshman Commission. Besides being a member of Student Standards her senior year, she worked on the Virginian staff for three years as literary editor her junior year, and photography editor her senior year.

She was tapped into Alpha Kappa Gamma, an honorary leadership fraternity, her junior year and was bid into Alpha Psi Omega of which she served as president her junior year, and Beorc Eh Thorn of which she was secretary her junior year. During her junior and senior years, she was also a member of Kappa Delta Pi and Pi Delta Epsilon.

As an English major, Nancy held membership in the Future Teachers of America Association. She was a four year member of the French Club of which she was vice-president her senior year.

Active in church activities, Nancy was a member of the Westminister Fellowship for four years and was vice-president of the religious group her junior year.

Also active in the dramatic department of Longwood College, Nancy was a member of Longwood Players for four years and was vice-president her sophomore and junior years.

Socially, she was a four year member of the Cotillion Club and Sigma Sigma Sigma social sorority.

Nancy appears in the 1955 "Who's Who" in American Colleges and was on May Court her senior year.

She was Circus chairman her freshman and sophomore years and acted as general chairman from AKG her senior year.

Next year Nancy plans to do graduate work in English at the University of North Carolina.

President of College Attends Board Meet

Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, retiring president of Longwood College, recently attended the annual spring Board meeting of Sweet Briar College in Lynchburg.

Dr. Lancaster has been a member of the Board of Sweet Briar since 1942.

At the recent meeting, plans for attempting to raise a sum for a new auditorium and science building were discussed.

"Thief" Admits Guilt

Austin, Texas (ACP) — The University of Texas' honor system revealed an honorable thief in the class of Dr. Norris G. Davis assistant professor of journalism. In a recent quiz, one student signed his pledge like this:

"I have neither given nor received any aid on this quiz, nor have I seen anyone doing so. However, I stole the paper on which it is written."

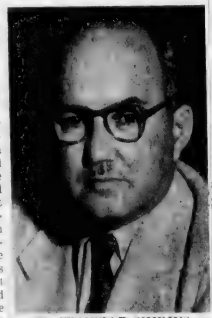
Not How Many, But How Well

"Too many extra-curricular activities" is a constant cry from faculty and students alike on the Longwood campus, and especially from Student Standards, a college organization which acts as a clearing house between the student body and faculty or administration. Students who find themselves dashing from one meeting to the next with little or no time left to spend on studying are beginnig to realize that their extra-curricular life is catching up with them. Professors, too, are teaching classrooms filled with students worn out by their rugged schedule of activities and offering these activities as excuses for not studying or preparing assignments.

At present, the College boasts (?) approximately forty recognized organizations not including social sororities, and denominational organizations. That the campus is over-organized is obvious, but a solution to the problem is far from clear. The majority of these organizations are worthwhile and contribute to the College materially and socially.

The only solution to the problem lies in the ability of the students to say "no," and to recognize that their clasmates are human and only capable of doing a good job in a limited number of fields. Annually freshmen are counselled to choose one or two fields in extra-curricular life in which to specialize. During the year the majority of them are then asked to join several organizations; all of them are expected to contribute to the Circus stunt, class production, May Day, and athletic contests. The merry-go-round of organization membership usually spins at an increasingly hectic rate until the senior year when the student no longer ponders over finding time for these activities but vainly tries to sandwich in a few moments of study between meetings, social events, and athletic contests.

The student must realize that the primary purpose of a college is an academic education and socialization is merely a by-product. Despite the acclaim given now to those who participate in a myriad of organizations, as adult students we surely know that no one person is so versatile that he can excell in all the campus activities. By specialization in one or two fields, competent leadership can be developed from a much larger portion of the student body. We also must recognize the fallacy of expecting our classmates to take part in every extra-curricular phase of college life.



Over-organization is not the crux of the situation, but over-participation certainly is. Perhaps by taking a little more seriously the counselling that was given us as freshmen and choosing our activities wisely, we can be assured at the end of our fourth year of being well rounded—and graduated.

History Journal Publishes Article By Longwood Prof.

By MARGARET DRYDEN

You'll find it worthwhile to take a little time out to read an article "Tolerating the South's Past" by Longwood's own Dr. Francis B. Simkins. The article was published in a recent issue of "The Journal of Southern History".

Dr. Simkins begins his article with a reflection of past and present concepts that have been proved and then disproved and then goes on to make this same comparison with the South and its history. He emphasizes that the South is one of the few provinces that has not succeeded in ironing out their provincial differences. He points out that one of the reasons that the Negro has never gained social equality is that he has never made a determined demand for this equality. He (the Negro) has allowed the white man to take business and residential opportunities away from him.

DR. FRANCIS B. SIMKINS

Quoting Dr. Simkins, "The historian of the South should accept the class and race distinctions of his region unless he wishes to deplore the region's existence. He should display a tolerant understanding of why in the South the Goddess of Justice has not always been blind, why there have been lynchings and Jim Crow laws, why the legend of the Cavaliers exists, and why, as William Alexander Percy puts it, "Even today from Virginia to Texas ten thousand crepuscular old maids in ghostly coveys and clusters' seek to trace their ancestors. Our historians should stop trying to prove that the maiden of the Old South did not always have wasp waists and stand on colonnaded porches attended by bandannaed mammies who did not have wasp waists."

In short, Dr. Simkins feels that southern historians should give out the real facts about their region. "The historian of the South should join the social novelist who accepts the values of the age and the section about which he writes. He should learn to identify truth with legend and with faith as competently as he has learned to identify truth with facts. By mixing sympathy, understanding, and a bit of kindness with his history, he might attract the people about whom he writes to read his books. And this could be done without sacrificing scholarly integrity.

Groups Hold Discussion on Study Abroad

Should American students be selected for study abroad on the basis of scholastic proficiency or for the promotion of international understanding? Is orientation needed for American students going abroad? What is the role of the foreign summer school? How will the predicted bulge in U. S. college enrollment affect the country's foreign student population.

These were some of the questions raised and discussed in the workshop sessions of the National Conference on Exchange of persons recently held in New York under the sponsorship of the Institute of International Education.

According to Kenneth Holland, Institute President, "This last year has in many ways marked a turning point in the exchange of persons. After a decade of rapid growth exchanges have leveled off." It was at this turning point, coinciding with its thirty-fifth anniversary, that the Institute called a National Conference to focus national attention on the field of educational exchange and to provide a useful forum for the institutions, organizations and individuals working in the exchange field.

"Programs for U. S. Students in Foreign Countries" was the subject of one of the Conference's eight workshops. President William E. Stevenson of Oberlin College, in a paper presented to the discussion group, stated, "Probably 6,000-7,000 Americans are enrolled in foreign universities for the current academic year: nearly 3,000 being supported by the G. I Bill; approximately 1,000 by U. S. Government grants under the Fulbright and Buenos Aires Convention programs; probably 600 or more on grants given under such programs as the Rhodes Scholarships, the Guggenheim, Rotary International, Marshall, American Association of University Women, the Institute of International Education, and from 300-350 on "Junior Year" arrangements.

"The U. S. Students" workshop devoted considerable discussion to the goals of student exchange. Are American students abroad chiefly "unofficial ambassadors" whose most significant role is promoting goodwill and mutual understanding between the United States and other nations? Or should U. S. students be selected for foreign study on the basis of scholarship, since this will be the student's primary goal and also the goal of the foreign university in which he en-

The controversy raging now over control of the Salk vaccine should not lead people to jump to conclusions about its effectiveness. The Poliomyletis Evaluation Center has never claimed that the vaccine is 100 per cent effective. From the 5 to 6 million children inoculated only 52 cases of nollo have been reported. Some of the children were probably carrying the virus before they received the shots. Parents have become so concerned that they have demanded their Congressmen to initiate investigations of procedures used in distribution of the serum and even to investigate prominent individuals such as Dr. Leonard A. Scheele, Surgeon General and Mrs. Ovta Culp Hobby, Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare.

Pre-Dawn Blaze Sunday Destroys Fraternity House

Personal Effects, Furnishings Alone Valued at $15,000

A pre-dawn blaze on the Hampden-Sydney College campus and the inability to get through a call for aid, resulted in the complete destruction of a college fraternity house Sunday morning.

The Theta Chi fraternity house, occupied by six students, burned to the ground in the fire which according to reports, broke out in the rear part of the two-section house at about 3:15 a. m.

Most of the students were awake at the time the fire occurred, celebrating "Party Weekend," an annual event which is held just before exams. All but one of the students living at the house were on other parts of the campus.

The student, Bob Lee, who discovered the blaze told a Herald reporter that two of his friends had returned to the house at about 3:15 a. m. Lee said that the other students roused him out of bed and when he went into the rear part of the house to "get some cigarettes," found that section aflame.

Lee said that he ran back to tell the others and then attempted to call the Farmville Fire Department. When he failed to get an answer from the operator Lee directed other students to call from other phones, thinking the house phone was out of order.

When all attempts to reach the operator failed, student Dave Meleney drove to Farmville to summon aid at approximately 3:45 a. m.

Circuit Out

W. D. Crafton, local manager of the Virginia Telephone and Telegraph Co., said today that at the time the fire occured, a main fuse on the trunk circuits from Hampden-Sydney to Farmville had blown out through some undetermined cause. Crafton said that up until approximately 2:15 a. m., Sunday, the circuits were in operation and two calls had been placed before the time of the fire.

"The operator on duty hadn't had any indication that the circuits were out of order," Crafton said, since no calls were made to the college during the approximate time of the fire.

Little Saved

Only a small part of the furnishings in the front section of the house were saved before flames reached that point. Fraternity President, Bob Dennis, estimated the loss of furnishings and personal belongings at some where around $5,000. Dennis added that he thought the house was insured for $10,000.

Dr. Francis Ghigo, faculty advisor, for the fraternity said today, "We hope we can rebuild as soon as possible, but we won't know for sure what we will do for several weeks."

All residents of the house have been moved to other quarters on the campus.

Sessions Debate Education Problems

rolls? Recent research suggests that conflicting goals may be reconciled, but that primary consideration must be given the student's educational aims. Unless he successfully accomplishes his purpose, other goals of exchange programs cannot be realized.

In discussing the Fulbright program, the workshop group suggested that scholarship be considered the primary factor in selection, with adaptability and ability to represent the United States a close second.

It was also recommended that more orientation courses be provided for American students going abroad. These courses should consist of language instruction, instruction in the life and culture of the country to which the student is going, information on the politics of that country, with special reference to its political relation to the U. S. The merits of orientation after arrival in the foreign country were discussed.

The workshop group recommended that selection and orientation processes be continually reviewed, that efforts be made within American colleges to stimulate the interest of students in foreign study and to provide preliminary preparation for study abroad—especially for language training. They suggested constant re-evaluation of foreign study programs and their possible extension to wider groups of qualified participants.

A need for more information on foreign education was stated. It was felt that American advisers need fuller information on the content of foreign courses, and on the foreign professors conducting these courses.

"Junior Year Abroad" programs were considered. Participants in such programs, who leave their campuses for a year of study in a foreign university, are expected to bring back to their American classmates interpretation of their foreign experiences. It was noted that supervision while abroad is important for younger students. But American faculty should not require the adaptation of foreign education to American collegiate requirements. This would negate the value of foreign cultural experience and could antagonize foreign educators. Problems of readjustment were mentioned, but it was felt the values gained more than offset any difficulty in getting back into the swing of the senior year. More scholarship funds are needed for "Junior Year" programs.

"Teen-Age and Summer Foreign Experience" were discussed in another workshop. It was pointed out that the problems of adjustment to foreign summer schools have not been given much attention. American students at foreign summer schools may not be adequately "received." The European institution takes no responsibility for relating the student to the community. No responsible U. S. agency is now giving sufficient attention to the problems of community integration faced by American students in summer schools abroad. It was recommended that attention be given this problem.

Another workshop, which considered "The Foreign Student on the Changing American Campus", gave much attention to the problem of the impending "tidal wave" of college students and its effects on the foreign student population. The future bulge in enrollment in American colleges and universities will make it difficult for foreign students to be admitted, especially in scientific and technical fields. Dr. Albert J. George, Chairman, Department of Romance Languages, Syracuse University, suggested that steps be taken to maintain the status quo and perhaps reserve a percentage of enrollment for foreign students. Their place in the American scene should be emphasized and made more meaningful, he insisted.

Other suggestions were for the wider geographic distribution of foreign students in American institutions, for special curricula for foreign students, for rapid English teaching courses. It was suggested that the inflexible American educational system (hours, credits, and prerequisites) may be frustrating to a student from abroad. The freedom of the European university contrasts oddly with the rigidity of American requirements.

Other workshops at the National Conference on Exchange of Persons discussed: "The Exchange of Teachers, Researchers and Professors"; "American Business Overseas and Exchange of Persons"; "Leaders, Specialists and Trainees in Exchange Programs"; "The Community and the Foreign Visitor"; and "Studying the Results of Exchange."

Colonnade Plans Issue Style, Size

Next week the Colonnade will present a take-off on one of today's popular magazines. It will be in a separate, 12-page edition rather than in the form of an insert, as it was last year.

One week after the parody goes to press, the usual literary edition will make its first appearance in its new size. An 8½x11" magazine, this issue will only consist of 12 pages, due to the extra publication of the parody.

Next year, the Colonnade will resume its regular number of pages, but will keep the next size format.

'The Play's The Thing' Through Efforts of Dr. Earley

As Will Shakespeare once said, "The play's the thing" and certainly Longwood College through the fine efforts of our own Dr. C. L. S. Earley and the Longwood Players has had its share of "Magictime", as we like to call it. Since the fall of 1951, when the present class of '55 were just freshmen and Dr. Earley became our drama director, the college and townspeople have seen ten fine major productions and innumerable well - done one - act plays. The Players have sponsored the Barter Theatre of Virginia with The Virginian, Curious Savage, Macbeth, and The Merchant of Venice. This spring, their efforts brought us a fine production of Pygmalion by the famed Abbey Players of Ireland. Through their enthusiasm on the Better Films Committee, six foreign films have been made available this year. Several New York trips have been sponsored. This year, they have toured Virginia high schools with Anton Tchekov's, "The Boar" which has been seen by 4000 students. Technically, thousands of dollars have been spent by the Players in lights and equipment for Jarman Hall. An interest in drama has arisen among the student body, probably one of the biggest contributions.

With all of these facts in my head, I called on Dr. Earley for some of the "inside dope" praticularly wanting to know about the plays he had directed here. Dr. Earley, who always seems to find time to talk theatre, told me first, "Doing all of the productions was fun but for each I have a special fondness, without which I would never have done them." Perhaps right here we should make a special note of tribute to our director. Students often remark, "How does he ever find time, it seems as if he's always doing a play." And that's very true. It is correct to say that he is interested in presenting the theatre to students and not just any sort of drama, but intelligent and enjoyable productions that will serve to enrich our intellectual growth.

Dr. Earley came straight to the point about the productions. "When I look back on "Ladies in Retirement" (1951), I wonder how we ever managed to produce it. The organ was being installed in the auditorium, we had no lights, the people were all new to me and I was new to them, it was definitely our most hectic show. Through the efforts of such fine student actors as Cleo Holliday, (who has since advanced to the professional stage) Ed Stanfield, Sarah Wilson, and Nancy Nelson we managed to bring 'Ladies in Retirement.' And in spite of all of our drawbacks, the students loved it."

In the spring of 1952, the Players gave "Light Up The Sky." "This was our biggest failure," Dr. Earley said, "for we tried to present a comedy of theatre folk and misjudged our audience's interpretation. However, it was our first play with a large cast and the performances of Cleo Holliday, Betsy Hankins, Harold Hutter, and Madison McClintic were outstanding."

"Our best shows have been Romeo and Juliet, Dark of the Moon, and The Glass Menergie. It was pleasant working with a large cast in Juliet and it was valuable in that we brought Shakespeare to the students and gave many a chance to perform. There is a great deal of pleasure in remembering Nancy Nelson and Nancy Tanley Masters as Juliet and the nurse."

" 'Dark of the Moon' was another experience in working with a large cast. Technically, it was one of our best. The play will always be remembered because of its interesting story and dramatic intensity. It was a pleasure to work with Fred Stables, Jim Parker, and dozens of others who helped make it a success."

"But 'The Glass Menegerie' has a special place because of its charming story and small cast. Sarah Wilson's Amanda Wingfield was one of the best characters ever revealed on the Longwood stage."

Dr. Earley then went on to say, "Perhaps the most popular success in regards to student enjoyment was the romantic 'Death Takes A Holiday'. Here again, Ed Stanfield and Nancy Nelson made a first-rate romantic team. 'The Importance of Being Earnest' was a great deal of fun. As a summer show and as a production of the winter season, the whole cast worked together with much enthusiasm."

"Doing a melodrama and again carrying the audience was fun and a delight in 'Love From A Stranger 'and 'Angel Street' although 'Blythe Spirit' received good audience reaction, I was never quite satisfied with the final results of the latter mostly because we were pressed for time."

Dr. Earley paused here for a moment and then went on to say, "I don't want to forget our many one-act plays. They were important in that they gave many the chance to appear in a production. Neither do I want to forget to mention the fine work done by the back-stage crews — lighting, scenery, music, tickets, advertising —we couldn't have done one play without them."

"It was with a great deal of sadness that we brought the curtain down on any show, but immediately, we looked ahead to another one. We have strived to present plays that are challenges and plays that would offer new characters," Dr. Early said. And we might add, that that purpose was certainly realized in a fine way.

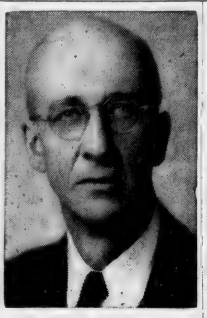
AACTE Cites LC Project For Teaching

Longwood College's intensive four-year project aimed at better teaching was cited this week by the American Association of Colleges Teacher Education.

In a letter to Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, president of Longwood, the association commended the college for participation of its faculty members in a unique nation-wide study program designed to improve the quality of teachers for the nation's schools. AACTE is a national voluntary association of colleges and universities with members in 48 states. Dr. L. D. Haskew, dean of the College of Education of the University of Texas serves as president of the group.



In his letter to Dr. Lancaster Dr. Haskew pointed out that "As a result of the project—the college programs for educating teachers are already beginning in dramatic fashion.

"College organization, faculty preparation, student personnel services and teacher education curriculum were among the problems which came under the microscope during the study which started in 1951.

"Each participating institution now has available for its guidance a written report based upon study by local faculty committees as well as recommendations prepared by visiting authorities from other institutions.

"The results," according to Dr. Haskew, "are unparalleled in American higher education."

"The improvements," he added, "will provide even better teachers for the boys and girls of the nation.

Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, retiring president of Longwood College, was honored yesterday by the Virginian staff when it was announced that the 1955 Virginian, college annual, was dedicated to the President.

Dr. Lancaster accepted the first annual to be released from Donnie Devine, editor of the 1955 edition.

'Tippy' Recalls Changes Here In 25 Years

By MARGARET MILLER

"Tippy-Toes," the name that has been affectionately tagged on Mrs. John Harrison Tabb, has become almost a by-word on the Longwood campus. Rounding out her 27th year at the college, she claims she has seen a great many changes occur.

Originally from Chatham, Mrs. Tabb assumed duties in the Tea Room which served five meals a day at that time. "My menus used to boast of a lunch consisting of T-bone steak for $.40—and with dessert $.50. When the second World War came along, the rationing of food and the scarcity of help forced us to raise our prices and cut down to two meals a day.

After furnishing meals for the townsfolk as well as for Longwood College and Hampden - Sydney banquets, Mrs. Tabb turned over the Tea Room to the supervision of Mrs. Louise Dugger, and became the hostess in Cunningham Hall.

During her years here, she has seen various kinds of conventions held on this campus—from AA to mortician's convention, she said. Her unofficial duties have included some unusual tasks. Among these are retrieving diamond engagement rings from where they had been dropped down sink pipes, and serving as a sort of bouncer when that Junior-Senior curfew strikes.

The class of 1950 dubbed her "Tippy Toes" when her attempts at sneaking up on unsuspecting students failed. She still remembers the years when at the end of the term, she baked and presented a cake to the girl who had kept the neatest room. It was also through her effort that the two small dating parlors in Junior Building were obtained. She especially enjoys making flower arrangements, crocheting, playing bridge, and making the famous mints which Miss Gleaves taught her to whip up in '28.

"TIPPY TOES" TABB

An unforgettable character, "Tippy" remains in the memory of Longwood girls many years after they leave the domain which she helps supervise.

Graduates To Receive Degrees At Commencement Exercises; Dr. Nelson To Address Seniors

Dr. Lane Installs Weather Station In Science Building

Dr. Charles F. Lane, professor of geography, has installed a complete weather station in Stevens Hall, the science building.

For the first time complete records of weather conditions are being kept. Dr. Lane said the instruments alone will not enable him to forecast weather, as a forecaster has to have information on conditions in other areas.

He hopes that some day he can have a teletype so that he can exchange information with weather stations in Virginia. In that event, he will be able to forecast.

In a shelter on the roof, a hygrothermograph now continuously records the temperature and humidity, and a maximum thermometer and a minimum thermometer register those two temperatures each day as a check on the hygrothermograph. The relative humidity can be checked by means of a sling psychrometer.

A wind dial on the roof, which looks like a model airplane, registers the velocity and direction of the wind on two dials in a small box, similar to a small radio, in one of the science labs.

Group to Examine Honors Students

Dorothy Douglas of Roanoke and Herbert Goodman of Farmville will take oral examinations on the biology honors courses that they have been taking at Longwood College, in the Honors Room from 3 p. m.-5 p. m. tomorrow.

The subject of Dot's paper is "The Fern Prothallium as a Subject for a Morphogenetic Study." Dr. Robert T. Brumfield, professor of biology, has assisted Dot with her research.

Herb has completed an honors paper entitled "A Limnological Study of a Farm Pond." Mr. Robert Merritt, assistant professor of biology, has served as Herb's sponsor.

Both students will be examined by Horton H. Hobbs of the University of Virginia, B. F. D. Runk of the University of Virginia, and R. G. Martin of the Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries.

The examination is open to members of the faculty and student body.

Srs. Plan Class Day

Saturday afternoon, June 4, at 3 p. m. Class Day exercises will mark the opening of the 1955 commencement program.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 25, 1955

Dear Dr. Lancaster

As the last edition of the Rotunda under your administration goes to press, we wish to say good-by from the student body and especially the Rotunda staff, and wish to you and Mrs. Lancaster health, joy, and God's blessings in your future.

The Rotunda staff is looking forward to your news of the fishing in Bath County when you pay us a visit next year, and the student body will be anxious to see you again, also.

Both your contributions material and intangible to this college will be long remembered by your students and faculty, and the success of your Presidency will serve as a guide to future administrators.

It would be impossible to express all of our sentiments for your personal interest in each and every one of us, so we will close here with our most sincere "We'd rather have Dr. Lancaster than anyone else we know!"

The Rotunda Staff

Time Has Come

Each May it becomes the privilege of a Rotunda editor to bid adieu to the graduating class of the college. In saying farewell from all the students in the remaining three classes, we wish you success in your future years, and an abundance of happiness in life.

During four years at Longwood you have greatly contributed to the academic and social life of the college, and have initiated new procedures in organizing and directing activities and organizations.

It is our desire to follow your patterns of initiative in both the classroom and the "playroom." It is our responsibility to continue on the level which you have reached and it is our hope that we may do so in a manner that will bring pride to the "Seniors of '55."

* * * *

Editor's note: The Freshman class has written the following letter to the 1955 graduates:

Dear Seniors,

As your last year at Longwood is about to come to a close, we, the Class of "58," would like to take this opportunity to bid you a final farewell. We, perhaps, don't know you quite as well as the other classes do, however, we have learned to love you in the one short year that we have been here.

We will always remember you as a class, whose high ideals and achievements, have really given us goals toward which we may strive in our three remaining years. We congratulate you on your winning "Circus," the song contest, and all of the other honors that have been bestowed upon you through the years. We find it very hard to say "farewell" to a class whose memory will live with us forever. We wish each and every one of you all of the possible success, luck, and happiness in the world.

Comic Books As Literature

The popularity of comic books with the up and coming generation is a difficult problem facing the teachers of today. It has been found that in comparison to the money invested in public and private libraries, up to four times that amount is spent by children purchasing comic books. This means children are turning more to the ten cent pages of adventure packed trash than they are to the educationally recommended stories of the most able and well known authors.

As future teachers, it is to our advantage to view this problem with the realization that we will soon be facing it in the classroom.

Will the classroom of tomorrow discuss the villianous characters in the life of "Hazel the Harrassed" instead of Robinson Crusoe or "Gertrude Gorilla and Bar Room Buddies" instead of Tom Sawyer? We know very well it won't, but the fact remains that children are probably better read in this form of literature than in the chosen classics of the past days.

Comic books aren't to be condemned, but when the startling figures of researchers show an over-indulgence in them, it is time for someone to do something to correct or control the situation.

The facts and figures have been presented. The answer to the problem lies in the school and in the home. The object is to halt the falling culture level of reading and throw it back again to the further development of good taste and enjoyment in literature.

OF INTEREST

By JOYCE GILLCHREST

With the leisure hours of summer approaching, you can be sure that the television sets of the country will increase their student audiences considerably. The viewing students, the potential tomorrow TV owners, could profit from critical observations of what TV has to offer in its present capacity. Their satisfaction or dissatisfaction should be a guide to the stand they take on pay-to-see television. The Federal Communications Commission is studying the public's feelings on the matter through a letter campaign which will end this summer. A surge of interest pro and con has resulted from a much publicized campaign by both sides. There are three systems worked out for pay-as-you-see TV Phonovision, developed by Zenith, would issue each viewer a decoding device and a decoding number. A bill would be paid at the end of each month on the basis of the number of programs watched. Subscribervision, manufactured by Skiatron Electronics and Televis.on Cooperation, would issue a punched card to each subscriber which when inserted in a slotted box would unscramble the picture. The last system, Telemeter, would require viewers to drop coins into an attached box to unscramble the picture. Coins may be removed periodically by Telemeter representatives.

The argument offered by those in favor of the idea is to improve the quality of programs available. Those against it feel that the initial cost of a set is enough and to pay for individual programs is robbery.

Trial runs by Telemeter are currently underway in two cities. Though any FCC action is months away, now is the time for people to decide what they want and make these decisions heard.

Exam-Week Jitters Epidemic Spreads

By ELLA CARTER

The week before exams at Longwood College the students find their final testing at the corner instead of around it. Even though students say that every week is just like the week before, they'll all agree that the week before exams is very unusual.

The little "Busy" signs which have been slightly ignored all year take on a new meaning. As you pass the door with a "Busy" sign on it, you feel sorry for the poor girl and wonder what subject she is slaving over. Chances are it'll scare you a bit, and you'll hurry to the books also.

You walk a little faster in the halls as you go to class. Somehow the professor looks a little different. You begin to wonder if he's human as he recalls what the examination will cover. You listen more closely now than you have all year. There's nothing like making a good impression now.

All your notes come together for a reunion, but there's no picnic on the list. People have probably insinuated that you weren't so clever at times. Now you know it. "Oh, why didn't I start on this in April," you ask yourself. "Certainly, I can't remember all of it. "Oh, why didn't I start on this dig in and surprise! You remember some of it.

At home your parents receive a short letter in telegram form. It was written in three minutes on a half sheet of paper. You tell them how hard you've been studying and secretly hope they feel sorry for you.

You get together with the girl next door and sneak in several games of bridge even though you feel a little guilty. The record player is accidentally noticed. Your favorite record hadn't been played all week. It doesn't get a second look because resistance is low.

Finally Sunday comes. This is the day before your first exams. The church is packed with students seeking more faith in themselves. Why did they have to bring such a good movie here the weekend before exams, you say. Three o'clock finds the State Theatre swarming with students absorbed in a movie.

That night you get to bed early because everyone has said sleep is an all important factor during exam week. You dream that exams are over and you're on the train going home. You awake and think for a moment. Then you realize the clanging noise wasn't the train at all but the last bell for breakfast.

Suddenly it occurs to you you'll soon be going home. Your face brightens up with a big smile as you realize exams won't be so bad after all.

Club Elects Officers

At the April meeting of Longwood's Northern Neck Club, officers were elected to serve during the 1955-56 school year.

Margaret Ann Hudnall was elected to serve as president of the club. Vice president will be Emily Fallin.

Virginia Lee Hinton and Joan Coakley will serve as secretary and treasurer, respectively.

Callcott to Receive Fund Grant for Book

Mr. George Callcott, instructor in history, has been awarded a Southern Fellowship Fund grant to enable him to write a book entitled "The Philosophy of History in the United States During the Romantic Period."

College Presidents' Butler Retires After Years in Job

By JACKIE WALL

Robert Evans retires on July 1 after more than 40 years of service to the State of Virginia, 26 of which were spent as full-time butler and handy-man to the presidents of Longwood College. He and his present boss, Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, bow out of their respective jobs at the same time, both taking with them the fond gratitude of all they served.

Robert says he is going to feel right strange at first. For many years now he has filled his working days from 7 a. m. to 5 p. m. by doing the cooking and housecleaning chores, aiding Mrs. Lancaster with the cultivation and grooming of the garden up at 608 High Street, butlering at entertainments, stoking the furnace, and even occasionally baby-sitting when the Lancaster grandchildren come to call.

Born In 1885

Robert was born on January 6, 1885 about two miles East of Worsham. He attended a country school for a few years until his father died and he had to go to work. His first jobs at 25 cents a day were on farms around the county, and he passed several years this way before he settled with Mrs. W. G. Dunnington at "Poplar Hill" for three years straight. He followed this with a year of butlering in Connecticut, came back home again in 1909, worked in the Dunnington tobacco factory for another year, and in 1910 he came up to the college, applied for a regular job, and has been on the State payroll ever since.

It was not until 1929 that Robert started regularly at the stately white president's home. During the intervening years he had worked around the college as janitor, helping out at 608 High Street in a part-time capacity. But when Mrs. Jarman died and the president's children were all married, he was called up there to keep house for Dr. Jarman until the latter's death in 1946, and he stayed on after the new president, Dr. Lancaster, moved in.

Breakfast Habits

For an insight into college presidents' breakfast habits, Robert can help out. After his wife's death, Dr. Jarman usually had breakfast in bed. Robert recalls he liked buckwheat cakes with the usual accessories and sometimes a slice of bacon. He didn't care for eggs and toast.

Dr. Lancaster has never given him occasion to serve breakfast in bed, because says Robert, "he has to get up so early to feed the pony and the chickens, when he had the latter, and see about Briar (the dog)."

(For a wifley insight into presidential breakfasts one should see Mrs. Lancaster, who says the above is true, but confesses that Robert left off the part about presidents liking to return to bed with the morning newspaper and not wanting to get up for the second time).

Dr. Lancaster's pet dishes, muses Robert, are corn batter cakes which "I think he could eat three times a day," waffles "for breakfast on Sunday morning, or any morning he can get 'em" and apple pie, which "he likes as well as anything."

"Yankee Hash" used to be a favorite of Dr. Jarman's. This, says Robert, "was nothing in the world but white potatoes, creamed, and corned beef mashed up together."

Upon his retirement, Robert has in mind plenty of work he can do around the house and garden he owns on Hill Street.

In his own words: "I don't know of anything 'idlesome' that I like. I don't hunt and I don't fish. I just have always liked to work."

The Lancasters wanted to take Robert, a widower, along with them to their place in Bath County after his retirement, but Robert said he didn't want to leave Farmville. He's going to be missed, say the Lancasters, who have often carried Robert with them on their week ends in the country.

Favoritism

The Lancaster ladies have noticed a slight favoritism on Robert's part toward the male side of the household. They report that whenever Robert is bringing in two plates already served, he always looks very hard at both, and then gives the one with the biggest helpings to Dr. Lancaster, whom he calls "Doc".

A couple of Christmases ago, Robert gave Dr. and Mrs. Lancaster each a present. To Mrs. Lancaster he gave a glass knife he had bought at the World's Fair. To "Doc" he presented a cherished possession which today resides in a conspicuous spot in the Lancaster living room. It is a large white china cup and saucer decorated with gold trimmings and bearing on the reverse side the following legend: "Remember Me." Robert has already found the right-sized box for packing the cup. When the Lancasters leave, it will go with them to their place at Bath, where Robert hopes it will serve as a pleasant reminder of years past.

He need have no fear. A man that has worked as long and as faithfully as Robert has needs no reminder to be remembered.

Sports In Retrospect

by LINDA GARRISON

As graduation draws near, another successful year of sports at Longwood is brought to an end. Let's take a look back over the major athletic events of 1954-55.

The varsity hockey, captained by Helen Waitman, was defeated for the first time in several years by Westhampton. Otherwise the season was successful as Longwood triumphed in three game and lost one.

The class hockey games were brought to a climatic end when the freshmen took their game with the sophomores by the close score of 1-0. The juniors tied their game with the seniors 1-1.

Riding was offered this year under the direction of Count and Countess Aladar Gyurky. Ten Longwood girls enrolled for the instruction.

The annual water pageant, under the chairmanship of Patsy Hamner, was presented on December 9. The theme of the pageant was "Christmas Around the World."

Hilda Hartis, Helen Waitman, Mary Ann Ward, and Virginia Burgess received blazers for their outstanding athletic participation.

The varsity basketball team, captained by Mary Ann Ward, ended its season with five wins and one loss.

The red and white teams came out on top in the class basketball tournament, whereas the green and whites won the most games in the volleyball tournament.

The annual Orchesis recital was presented on April 1. Pattie Parker and Mary Cowles led Orchesis and nine new members were initiated this May.

Eight Longwood students successfully completed the instructors course in swimming. It was announced that a new course in synchronized swimming will be offered next year.

Patsy Hamner, Loretta Kuhn, and Audrey Owen were elected as officers of H2O for the coming year. Fourteen new members were initiated into the club.

Jane Lohr was elected to replace Mary Ann Ward as president of the Athletic Association for the coming year.

The tennis team journeyed to William and Mary to tie them, and lost to Westhampton this season. The tennis tournament has been completed. The singles tournament was won by Carol Wolfe and the doubles tournament was won by the red and white team. Linda Chambers, Pearson Grymes, Anne Snyder, and Carol Wolfe won their final matches.

The men-faculty defeated the physical education majors in a softball game played last Friday. The score was 20-5.

With the presentation of the color cup to the red and white teams, the 1954-55 sports story at Longwood is just about finished. If the next year in sports is as successful as this year, Longwood students have much to look forward to!

Prof. Answers Card From Class Quizzer With Surprise Reply

In search of an obvious mark, a friend of ours rhymed on a return-with-mark postcard to his prof:

"In class you were steadfast,
you never did sway,
For your mark in Advertising,
you receive an . . "
But the prof (a wily one) replied:

"In class you were steadfast,
you never did sway,
I've never seen anyone sleep so soundly that way,
But when for finals, we roused you from slumber,
By dint of sheer guessing,
you from slumber
Your poet-ent 90 didn't win the class wreath,
But you did make an 'A' by the skin of your teeth."

Red 'n White Gain 1954-'55 Color Cup

For the school year 1954-55 the Color Cup was awarded to the red and white teams. Georgia Jackson, president of the incoming senior class, and Marodith Nichols, president of the incoming sophomore class, received the cup on behalf of the present junior and freshman classes. The red and white teams collected forty points from the athletic events this year out of a possible seventy points.

The red and white teams triumphed over the green and whites in hockey, basketball, tennis singles, tennis doubles, and swimming competition. The green and whites came out on top in volleyball, softball, and wisket.

The Color Cup is awarded to the class color winning the majority of the athletic events held on the campus. Sister classes, freshman-junior and sophomore-senior, support each other and strive to win each event contested. Each year the Cup, which is placed on the mantle in the Home Office, bears the colors of the classes winning the most points during the preceding year.

Seniors Read Laaast Paper At Longwood

JACKIE MARSHALL

Well, now! This is the laaast Rotunda for this school year. This being the laaast Rotunda means that this is the laaast time the senior class will read this laaaast Rotunda which includes my laaaast feature for this laaast school year. Awwww! Pretty sad, pre-t-ty sad!

Seeing as how I'm in a real "Contented-cow" mood and feeling extra special kindly towards my sethren (feminine for brethren), I'd like to make a corny step in the direction of expressing farewell to that group of "Greta Graduations" who will in the near future gallop down Jarman's steps clutching their sheepskins in their grubby, little fists and go roaring away in their many red cars.

Therefore, I hereby dedicate this here feature to all you interested seniors who may scan this facetious phraseology with doleful eye.

Now, I've been thinking—and I rarely ever think, just what could I write that would show the seniors how much we've all enjoyed their sympathetic companionship these past years. They have had a prophecy, a last will and testament, a fond farewell,—in fact, they've had everything but a decent burial! What choice do I have? So, with the mournful strains of "Green and White" floating through the air, and placing a withered buttercup on each buz, I now complete the ceremony ending the saga of the Senior Class of '55 with an unoriginal, nevertheless worked-up-on version of an oft sung Longwood ditty.

'Twas June the sixth evening,
The gang was all leaving.
Alfrieda was closing the bar.
Screamed an underclassman,
You're mean,
All you seniors in green,
You leave here with a hardy-har-har!"
"It's unfair to us all,
For you to have such a ball
When we'll miss all you folks next year,
We'd like to believe
That you hated to leave
The campus and us people all here.
Didn't your mothers ever tell you,
The things all young girls should know?
About the good old college days
And how they come and go?—
How fast they go!
Soon age will wither your beauty
But sin won't leave a sad scar,
'Cause you're the Class of '55
And we know how good you are.
(har, har)
So, 'till chance or intention
Shall work its way,
I end this little rhyme.
To you best wishes, love and ye olde spirit,
Until—the next time.

Girls Ignore Alarms As Fire Breaks Out In College Dormitory

Burlington, Vt.—(ACP)—Thirty-four University of Vermont coeds were routed out of their beds early one morning recently during a two-alarm fire at the Old Mill dormitory, the Vermont Cynic reports.

Although the damage was slight, firemen had difficulty in convincing the girls there was an actual fire. Some thought it was only a drill. One sleepy-eyed lass stumbled into the bathroom, carefully washed her face and then demoaned later: "I thought maybe we were going to have an inspection, or something."

Firemen finally had to return for the umpteenth time to make sure all girls were out. They weren't. The thirty-fourth occupant slept soundly, through all the excitement, glared for a moment at the firemen who shook her soundly, then rolled over and went back to sleep. When finally aroused she staggered out of the building and into the nearest police car, where she fell sound asleep again.

Many of the girls rushed into the night clad only in shortie nightgowns, and two heroic (ahem) men offered their services by putting their arms around the girls to keep them warm, the Cynic related.

Only a few girl tried to save their belongings. But one young miss seemed perfectly content although clad only in her pajamas. She had thoughtfully pinned her fraternity and sorority pins on the pajama tops.

As All Good Things Must Come to An End, Seniors Leave Much Loved Possessions

By CAROLYN STANLEY

All good things must come to an end. We all have to go sometime. Wealthy as we are at the end of four long toilsome years—we will and bequeath our dearest possessions to you, the following:

Nancy Tanley Masters leaves her eyebrow pencil, two sticks of make-up, one left over pack of blonde rinse, and the tops to her green and white pajamas to Dottie Rector.

Shirley Ward bequeaths 1000 corny jokes to anyone that can put them over as lousy as she does, and a special formula bottle of "No-Doze" to Gail Leonard, who will need them desperately.

Bobbie Southern, with deep regret, wills to Molly Ann Harvey, and Bootsie Miller 10,000 old papers of rough copy and her copyright on her latest novel "I Married a Sponsor."

Jane Bailey leaves to Georgia Jackson her regular subscription to the "Convention Daily."

Joyce Quick bequeaths her book "One Thousand Ways to Win James Parker" to anyone who has legs long enough to catch him!

June Manlove leaves to Sarah Hackworth one slightly used Pi-KA pin, and her new game "Kissy Face" for those special weekends!

Barbara Mitchell, tears in her eyes, leaves to the Freshman Class her love and devotion.

Nancy Nelson bequeaths to anyone who needs them, any air mail envelopes she might have—as she won't be needing them any more.

Ann Wendenburg Silver leaves to Liz DeHaven her V. P. I. spirit while Joan DeAlba leaves weekend trips to MCV to Fannie Scott, who can have them!

Sally Wilson wills to Joyce Clingenpeel one worn out phonograph needle.

Mary Hundley leaves her daily mail "The Suffolk Herald" to Dale Brothers with the one provision that she does not contribute to the swimming pool fund. And Billie Miller leaves her many long distance phone calls to all those who might ever be so lucky.

Dot Vaden bequeaths to Lou Wilder her "Appointments for the Week." Donnie Devine leaves all romance with Mr. McClung and a pair of arch supporters to Carolyn Stoneman.

Galax leaves all the misery of May Day to whoever breaks the most rules next year and deserves capital punishment.

And I leave all my talent of writing these wonderful features to Jackie Marshall, my Handley Booster Club pin to Nancy Quarles and my convertible, three corner senior cap to Jeanne Saunders for being so horribly patient.

My last space-filler dahlings! For the latest thing in journalism, I refer you to the Alexandria Gazette next year.

United States Marine Band To Present Concert Friday

Brass section of famed Marine Corps Band rehearses for one of their many performances.

The United Staes Marine Band now on its tour of 15 states will appear here in Jarman Hall at 8 p. m. and 8 p. m. Friday.

This group is being sponsored by the Farmville Lions Club. The Longwood Artist Series committee has purchased tickets for the student body from the Lions Club in order to include it on its Artist Series schedule.

The Marine Band, presently under the direction of Captain Albert Schoepper, has played for every inauguration since Thomas Jefferson took his oath of office. The musical organization also performs for official functions in the nation's capitol and many history-making events.

The band, oldest military symphonic musical group in this country, will play works by the world's finest composers and stirring marches which have brought the Marine Band acclaim from almost every country in the world.

One of the musical features of the evening will be a rare instrumental combination—a solo pianist with band accompaniment. Staff Sergent T. Irvin Reday will play a modern American classic, George Gershwin's "Rhapsody In Blue," using a piano and symphonic band arrangement. This selection will represent the band's departure from conventional instrumentalism. The personnel of the Marine Band include musicians carefully screened and selected from some of the nation's leading symphony orchestras, high school and college bands.

Slayter System

Enough cannot be said in praise of the introduction of the Slater System to the Longwood campus. This outstanding catering service has not only brought about a change in the quality and quantity of food served in the dining room, but it has also caused a noticeable difference in the overall attitude of the student body towards mealtime.

Heretofore, meals were a challenge to many. Students tried to see how little food they could eat and yet have their appetites satisfied.

For several years the dining hall has been a sore spot at Longwood—a college service that upperclassmen ignored during tours to impress would-be students.

However, today with so many added services, the same spot has become a pleasure not to pass by.

To be specific, the students have applauded desserts for lunch, milk served in individual containers, and packaged cereals.

In general, the students praise the system's policy of serving greater quantities of food without being wasteful.

All members of the administration and special dining hall committees who were concerned with initiating this new method deserve the thanks of every satisfied customer—and customers the students are! Perhaps acceptance of this fact alone is the underlying reason for such a change in service.

As the Slater System manages the dining room on a business basis, it follows more closely than did previous managements the time-old, but often quite true slogan in the eyes of a good businessman, that the customer is always right!

Weak American Male

By ALICE-LEONE MOATS

(Miss Moats is author of such best-sellers as "A Violent Innocence," "No Nice Girls Swears" and "Blind Date with Mars." Her latest, "Lupescu," is slated for early Fall publication.)

A cliche that has almost become an article of faith with both Europeans and Americans is the one about the poor, downtrodden American male, so meek, so easily pushed around. Like most cliches, this one is nonsense.

Anybody who doubts that need only study the articles and advertisements in magazines and newspapers, noting the frequency with which the "how to hold a man" theme is harped upon.

The fact that this is not true of publications in other countries, indicates that the American woman is far more obsessed with the fear of losing her man than is the case with her foreign sisters.

In actual fact, the American is the most difficult man in the world for a woman to manage. That's the real answer to the question that seems to trouble people over here: "Why do American women fall so easily for Europeans?"

It's not the suave approach of the Frenchman, the romantic allure of the Italian, the flowery compliments of the Spaniard that are so irresistible — it's simply that, with them, a girl can take it easy, relax, be herself.

To begin with, the European has been brought up in the tradition that any male is superior to any female, a belief which lends him a self-assurance lacking in the American, who is not quite convinced that belonging to the stronger sex automatically sets him above the weaker one. As a result of his doubts, his ego must be perpetually built up. The, "Oh, you great big wonderful man," routine has to go on 24 hours a day.

Abroad, a major feminine weapon in the war between the sexes is migraine. On this side of the Atlantic, a man either doesn't know the meaning of the word or he doesn't care.

He is undoubtedly as sympathetic as a European with any serious illness, but headaches and other minor ailments bore him. The last way for his wife or girl friend to attempt to break down his resistance is by retiring to a darkened room with a cold compress over her eyes. He expects her to be a good sport, vivacious, ready to fall in with his plans. Should he catch the point that he's supposed to be responsible for the migraine, the consciousness of guilt only makes him irritable.

Tears are not much more successful than headaches because they embarrass him. That makes him feel inferior and we are right back at the problem of his delicate ego.

Scenes of jealousy or temperament amuse Europeans who look upon them as important ingredients of any love affair, part of a complicated and delightful game. They just scare an American, who takes them seriously. Sometimes he will fight back; sometimes he will be cowed by a scene. But the day inevitably comes when it strikes him that he's had it, and he walks out. Although it may require time for him to reach such a decision, once he's gone, he's usually gone for good.

The American male may be more difficult to manage than any other, but just because he is so difficult, he presents a challenge that makes him more exciting and interesting.

Welcome

You freshmen have had the same cordial welcome that Mrs. Lankford and I were given when we came to Longwood in mid-summer. Soon you will feel as much at home as we do and I am sure you already share our enthusiasm over the pleasant prospects ahead at Longwood. Resolve now to include hard work and wholesome play in your schedule and these prospects are sure to become a reality. Please let me help, whenever you think I can, to make your years at Longwood as enjoyable and as profitable as possible.

Green Color...Green Song! Green Gals..Am I Wrong?

By JACKIE MARSHALL

Well, now, I wish you'd take a gander at the freshmen. I declare, roomie, I never saw such green freshmen. Well, what if they did use to say the same thing about us when we first came, these freshmen are still quite green, you know. My goodness, there are so many things they do that are so green. For instance, do you remember those freshmen at whom I growled at breakfast? Why did I growl, you ask? Roomie! You know perfectly well that such extreme gaiety as a smile at seven O'clock a. m. is unheard of at Longwood!

Yes ma'am, 'tis a green, green class.

You know, I went to see a freshman the other day. Well, I hate to overwork the word but, ... green! Just listen to this, kid. This freshman had a room that was simply spotless. Clothes all hung up, no dust anywhere, trash cans empty, and all that junk, and dig this . . . . . she had absolutely no bills at Baldwins (here a whole week and still no bill, have you ever?), she hadn't eaten in the tearoom, and she had gotten three whole letters in the moring mail! If that's not the greenest thing you ever heard of! There's more yet. This freshman introduced me to this other freshman and we got to talking. I asked to see the pictures in her billfold and as I did, I noticed a slight bulge in her coin purse. What did I do? I sneaked a look inside, of course. This bulge definitely called for invesigation.

Do you know that I discovered fifty cents in her wallet! Here a week and still has a whole fifty cent piece in her wallet.

Roomie did you go to the juke box dance last Saturday night? No, neither did I, but I hear our brother college was swarming all over the place. Yep! If nothing else will prove you green . . . . . that first visit from H. S. will. Why, I'm willing to bet that those green freshmen date all year long. Green? Green as grass, eh, roomie?

Have you noticed how well dressed this freshman class is? Honestly they dress to go to class as if they actually enjoyed it, don't they?

And the spirit they've got! You'd think you were hearing ten thousand people sing when they bleat "Green and White", silly song isn't it?

It really is a laugh! Don't you think so, roomie? . . . . . Hey roomie! I said it really is a laugh. What? . . . . . well, sure I enjoyed my junior year. But what's that got to do with how green the . . . . . what? Yeah, those sophomore days were great. But a freshman, a real green freshman . . . . . I'm glad I'm not. Confidentially though, roomie, I'll bet we use to be the same way . . . . . always smiling at people, dressing real nice, not owing bills, dating, having a little money in the pocket and all that green, green life.

Roomie, ... I wish I wuz a freshman again!

Life at MWC Not So Rosy For Lone Male

Fredericksburg, Sept. 19—(AP) A quiet and serious young exmarine is the lone male student among 1,600 girls enrolling this week at Mary Washington College.

Dennis C. Moriarity, 23, a former New Yorker, is the last of the war veterans admitted to the women's college of the University of Virginia. He was a student here last year, but so were some other veterans.

Now facing two more years of the solitary sort of study under GI rights earned in the Korean war, he finds it "not as wonderful as most people imagine. You feel very self-conscious," he said, "you just have to live with it."

Longwood's Business Manager Retires From College Services

By JACKIE WALL

Mr. Sam Graham, as Samuel Lyle Graham, II, is widely known, retired Thursday, September 1 as business manager of Longwood College. Chances are, however that he will spend half his retirement in the very place he has passed the last 26 years.

It's notthat Mr. Graham plans to continue active participation in college affairs. But with friendships and habits formed, it's more than likely he will be right there watching Longwood grow in the future as it has in the past quarter century.

A few days before Mr. Graham's retirement became effective, he stated: "I have been here a mighty long time, and it makes a mighty short history!"

In terms of cold statistics and the physical results of that quarter century, it is a short history, but also a mighty important one.

Came to Farmville

When Mr. Graham came to Farmville as business manager and supervisor of grounds and buildings, the student overflow from the existing dormitory space filled five college-owned cottages and five rented cottages. Since that time, a main Senior dormitory and annex have been constructed. In his years here, the swimming pool has also been built; so has a new power plant; the library; the new auditorium an dthe science building.

Longwood's growth does not end here. More buildings are in prospect, for as Mr. Graham says, "the planed expansion will serve the increasing student enrollment which we anticipate."

The job of keeping these buildngs in top condition and seeing to the physical needs of the college now falls to Mr. Graham's successor, J. H. (Jake) Wamsley, in whom Mr. Graham expresses the utmost confidence.

Mr. Sam's own job now is to shape up his new home on Fourth Avenue. There's lots of work to be done there, he says and he is particularly interested in landscaping the lot into a garden.

In 1929 when Mr. Graham moved into the college-owned house on Pine Street, he came with more than twenty years of business experiences behind him. He says he kept books for a merchantile concern for a good number of years, and has also had a long association with the tobacco business. These two fields combined to give him both plant and office management, qualifications desirable for the business manager opening then available at Longwood College.

Besides all the reasons that usually make a person take a new job, Mr. Graham had another important one. Farmville was near to Hampden-Sydney, and he had three boys to educate. If Lyle, his oldest son, had entered the Hill College, he would have made the fourth in the Graham family to take his schooling there. Mr. Graham's father was born at Hampden-Sydney, where his father's father had been a professor at the Union Theological Seminary founded on the Hill.

Born In 1897

Mr. Graham was born on October 17, 1897 in Mecklenburg County, oldest of the ten children of S. L. Graham, II, and Anne Maria Eppes Graham. His father, a bright tobacco farmer and superintendent of schools for 16 years in that county, died when he was quite young. Mrs. Graham passed away at the age of 97 this year to be folowed shortly there after by one of her sons, the only one of the ten to be no longer living.

As a child, Mr. Graham had two years' attendance at public schools with the remainder of his education received privately. For four years before entering Hampden-Sydney Colege, he attended Warrenton Academy in Warrenton, N. C. Being the oldest son in the family, he wanted to get his own colege education. He found his finances in poor shape midway through his sopomore year at Hampden-Sydney, and decided he had to quit. He entered King's Business College in Raleigh, N. C., instead, and there he took a course in business administration.

Had Four Children

The Grahams had four children, three boys and a girl. Lyle, the oldest went to the University of Richmond and not Hampden-Sydney.He is now personnel director for part of the Davidson-Paxton chain working out of Atlanta, Ga., Tom, the next in line was graduated from the Naval Academy. He was killed in an airplane crash in 1945 while serving as exeuctive officer of the destroyer "Hutchins".

Their third son, Louis, the only one to attend Hampden-Sydney, received his bachelor's degree from the University of Virginia and his Master's from the University of Louisville. He is working as a chemist in Parkersburg, W. Va. The only girl, Sarah, attended Peace College and was graduated from Longwood College. She is now married and lives in aurel, Miss.

Pet Interest

Sports have always been one of Mr. Graham's pet interests. He recalls that each of the boys who played football with him at Warrenton Academy and entered college after finishing there made a letter in their first year. At Hampden-Sydney he served as a utility man on the team and even played tackle, though he was light for the job.

In addition to enjoying hunting and fishing in Farmville, he has taught golf to Longwood students for the last three or four years. Since his recent bouts with sickness, however, he has been forced to cut down on his game. He says, "my present score would never indicate I was ever an instructor.

After living in one place for 26 years, Mr. Graham says it was unthinkable to retire to any place but Farmville. The Grahams love the place. And Mr. Graham loves Longwood. He's going to be rooting from the specator's bench for many years to come.

From the Bleachers

By LINDA GARRISON

As the new school year gets underway, another varied and active sports program also begins. For the benefit of the freshmen and those students new to Longwood I would like to highlight the athletic events and opportunities here during the year.

A big event in the college each year is the winning of the Color Cup. This is awarded to the class color wining the majority of the athletic events held during the year. Sister classes, freshman-junior and sophomore-senior, support each other and strive to win each event contested. Each year the Cup, which is placed on the mantle in the Home Office, bears the colors of the classes winning the most points during the preceding year.

The fall ushers in the hockey season, when both the varsity and class teams hold practices and schedule games. Tryouts for the hockey teams will be held in the near future and everyone is invited and urged to go out for hockey or to support the teams at their games.

Recreational swimming is offered all during the year. Swim suits will be available to new students for a small cost. The highlight of the water activities is the water pageant in December. Centered around a main theme, with beautiful and appropriate scenery, the pageant attracts many spectators. A swimming meet is held in February, when members of the different classes compete for points towards the color cup. During March, Red Cross Life Saving is offered.

Color rush is in November. This is a running competition between classes.

December sees the beginning of basketball, when both the varsity and class teams practice and have games through January, February, and March. Again everyone is urged to participate, especially in the class games.

Volleyball also begins in December, with both varsity and class games continuing through January, February, and March.

For recreation during the winter months there are shuffleboard and ping pong events, with the tournament taking place in February.

April brings the outdoor sports—archery,—tennis—golf—and softball. The archery tournament comes in May, as does the softball tournament. Tennis doubles begin in May also, following the singles which are held in the fall.

Finally, at the end of the year, the coveted Color Cup is awarded to the Green and White or the Red and White teams. The best way to make sure your class wins it is to participate and support as many of the athletic activities as you can!

VOLUME XXXIV | Longwood College, Farmville, Va., September 28, 1955 | NO. 2

New Student - Instructor From France Confirms Veracity of College Catalogue

Genevieve Joatton, Longwood's latest student—instructor from France, declared soon after her arrival in Farmville that the college catalogue she saw at home had not misled her.

"The whole scenery is very pretty, and just what I had expected," she said. "I was not deceived."

This is Genevieve's first trip to the United States. She has already visited England, spending a month on two occasions as a family exchange with English girls. At Longwood she will spend this coming school year as part-student, part-instructor, and for her assistance in French classes she will receive a salary.

Although Genevieve speaks excellent English, she hopes to improve it greatly before the year is over. Besides speaking it all day long with the students and teachers, she plans to take a course in English. Her other classes will probably include music education, Spanish and some kind of sport.

Now 21 years old, Genevieve attended private school in Lyons, where her father is manager of an insurance company. After graduation, she spent two years at "professional school" learning to be a kindergarten teacher. Although kindergarten teachers are not usually university graduates, Genevieve was obliged to take a number of courses at the University of Lyons. She now holds her diploma and expects to enter this field upon her return to France in June.

She wants to visit the kindergarten in Farmville some time to observe American methods, and she believes her course in music education will help too.

Genevieve's first interest is music. Until she left France two weeks ago, she was still receiving instruction in piano, and she says she studied about an hour every day. Before she left, she had begun working on Ravel's "Sonatina" and Chopin's second Concerto. She knows how to play a Spanish guitar, but recently has had little time for this. At professional school, she learned how to conduct a chorus and received some real experience in leading a group.

Her work as a Brownie Scout leader in Lyons interested her very much, but she feels she will have no time for such activities in Farmville. At home, she had charge of 12 leaders and spent this past summer as counselor at a Scout camp. Genevieve indicates people are just as hard to find as leaders in Lyons, as they appear to be in Farmville.

Genevieve's greatest desire is to travel while here. The trip across, arranged by the Fullbright exchange commission, enabled her to catch glimpses of a few interesting places since the ship bringing her and nine other exchange students came the long way over. She stopped in London, Liverpool and Quebec. The train carrying her from Canada to Virginia was changed in New York, and the resulting one hour wait she passed with a flying visit to the Empire State building. From now on, however, limited finances and lack of convenient transportation are going to curb many further attempts to travel.—(Farmville Herald).

Marine Band Salutes South With 'Dixie'

2,400 Persons Hear Precisioned, Uniformed Players

The United States Marines landed in Farmville Friday much to the delight of 2,400 persons. This was the musical branch of the fighting corps, and the gun and caisson branch suffers not a whit by association with Captain Albert Schoepper and the 50 musicians of the United States Marine Corps Band.

The 2,400 persons were those who filled Jarman Hall of Longwood College for matinee and evening concerts, reportedly the first occasion the spacious hall has been filled for a program of entertainment. The Marines did it twice in one day.

In full band numbers, in solo performances and in ensemble arrangements, the uniformed musicians showed musical precision, phrasing and interpretation that left two packed audiences in delighted admiration.

Many Encores

Appreciative of the evening audience's evident approval, Capt. Schoepper, the band director, turned a formal nine-number program into an 22-number musical treat. Two soloists, Sgt. Bramwell Smith, on the cornet, and Sgt. T. Irwin Redcay, couldn't take their places without three encores each at the incessant demand from the audience.

Perhaps the band's outstanding quality is the range of its repertoire. The same precisioned skill was evident in a Sousa march, and just as present in the scores of Sir Arthur Sullivan or Hector Berlioz.

Certainly another musical highpoint of the band's presentation is its work in restoring to proper perspective the greatness of the master composers of the military march. Whole generations of Americans have heard these only from the instruments of well-meaning but immature, fumbling high school and college bands. The Marines gave them back in full majesty of phrasing.

Varied Repertoire

In interpretation, the band performed splendidly. Morrissey's subtle to raucous passage in the tone picture, "Carnival Day In New Orleans" were faithfully captured; the lilting, saucy tunes from "Oklahoma" were certain and the haunting power of the "Witches' Sabbath" with its woodwind emphasis, was musically caught.

The band's choice of the best of popular music, and its ability to give it original and melodic arrangement proved not the least of its accomplishments.

Sgt. Smith's cornet solo performance of "Dark Eyes" and Carmichael's "Star Dust" and Sgt. Redcay's piano solo passages from Gershwin's "Rhapsody In Blue" and "Body and Soul" brought vehement clapping from the audience.

In its "Southern Rhapsody," a delightfully played arrangement of familiar southern airs, the band found wide appeal. The audience arose with the strains of "Dixie", and no one could say with certainty whether it was that particular music or the musicians behind it that produced so spontaneous a reaction.

It was typical of the whole concert and the sponsoring Lions Club must be credited with an outstanding success in presenting so fine a musical treat within the price willingness of so many people —young and old.

Sophs Reveal Rules To Freshmen 'Drips'

Frosh Choose Circus Heads

At their first class meeting, last Monday, the freshman class of Longwood College held an election for their Circus chairman.

After nominations and discussion, the freshmen elected Barbara Odom, of Suffolk, and Louise Norman of Richmond as their Circus co-chairmen for 1955. Joyce Sedivy of Midway High in Church Road was elected float chairman and Dorothy Boswell of Stafford High in Palmouth will serve as booth chairman.

Being among the outstanding seniors of Suffolk High School, Barbara served as president of the student body and was voted "Most Likely to Succeed" and "Most Athletic." She held several offices in the Tri Hi-Y Club, was captain of the basketball team, served on the school paper, and was a representative to Virginia Girls State. Upon graduation Barbara was awarded the General Excellence Medal, Girls Athletics Medal, DAR Citizenship Medal, and the B'nai B'rith Scholarship.

Louise, a graduate of Hermitage High School, was treasurer of her senior class, president of the Y-Teen Club, and a member of the Student Council. In addition, she was a member of the Dramatic Club, the basketball team, and served on the staff of the school paper. Because of her sense of humor, Louise was named "the wittiest" in her class.

'58 Class Predicts Red 'n White Rain For 1955 Rat Day

The Sophomore Class has released its rules for Rat Day 1955 and recommends that all freshmen attempt to fit the plans into their daily schedule.

The Rotunda staff wishes to console the freshmen by reminding them that although Rat Day officially opens at 6:30 a. m., October 1, it does close at 4 p. m. the same day.

Rats will be dressed as drips for Saturday. The costume will include a red crepe paper skirt worn over blue jeans and an old white shirt with 58 red paper rain drops about one inch in size attached to the shirt. There must be a sophomore's name written on each drop and the freshmen are expected to find the various names when asked to do so.

A nameplate of red paper including the rat's name and home town must be fastened to the back of the skirt.

Rain hats made of red paper with a red ribbon that ties under the chin must also be worn.

Tennis shoes will be worn and each rat must also carry a red umbrella made of cardboard or a similar material.

Rules

The following rules are to be followed:

1. Each rat must know the sign-off and be able to repeat it upon request.
2. Rats must not spend more than fifty cents for costumes.
3. Rats must have at least five appointments. Every rat will be checked for appointments the night before Rat Day.
4. Appointments will be made the day before Rat Day. No rats may promise to save appointments before then.
5. Rats will clean Sophs' rooms, entertain, sing "Red and White" to the tune of "Singing in the Rain," give sign-off, and shine shoes.
6. All rats must obey the Sophs and address them as Miss — —.
7. All rats so honored will be notified to go to Little Rat Court. All rats will attend Big Rat Court wearing red and white.
8. All rats must report to the gym at 6:30 a. m. No appointments can be scheduled for any time before this hour.
9. Meals must be attended. Ratting is confined to the campus.

Sign-Off

"I (name of rat) from (home town) am a seditious, socialistic freshman and seem to sense that the sensationally sagacious sophomores stand stable, steadfast, and staunch since stratosphere started. Such singular stamina surely speaks splendid success. Sophomores should really sever all connections with silly, shallow freshman, since they are scraping in a scramach. PRAISE 58!"

Rector Announces Fall Play Tryouts

The Longwood Players will present as it's fall production "Ring Round the Moon," President Dottie Rector announced today.

The popular three-act comedy by Jean Anouilh will be produced November 17-18 in Jarman Auditorium. Mr. Tom Wiley will direct the play.

Try-outs will be held in the auditorium Monday and Tuesday, Oct. 3 - 4 from 3 to 5 p. m. Roles are open to members of all classes.

On Friday, September 23, Mr. Wiley met with Dottie Rector, president of the Players; George Ogburn, technical director; and heads of the departments—lights, scenery, programs, front of the house, wardrobe, make-up, concession stand, and publicity—to start the wheels rolling on this first production of the season.

At the first regular meeting of the players on Thursday, September 29, each department head will explain briefly the work of her department to all those who wish to become apprentices. Mr. Wiley stressed that there are many important jobs to be done in addition to acting.

Also at the Players meeting on Thursday night, Freddie Stables, president of Alpha Psi Omega, will talk to the group about the honorary dramatic fraternity.

All students who would like to become apprentices to this group are urged to attend this meeting.

Virginia Legislators To Visit LC Campus

Virginia legislators will visit the Longwood campus October 7 to study the needs of the college.

The guests will arrive at 12:45 p. m. for a luncheon in the Tea Room. At 3:30 p. m., the legislators will complete their tour.

Dr. Boggs Attends Principals' Meeting

Dr. Earl R. Boggs, Jr., professor of education, attended a meeting of District D principals today in Hopewell.

At this final meeting of the year for the group, Dr. Boggs served in his new position as consultant to the principals in the Virginia Education Association's District D. schools.

LC Adds Painting To Art Collection

Longwood College has added another painting to its newly begun art collection. This painting is called "Edge of the Marsh," by Jean Craig Jones, who is now residing in Hampton, Virginia.

Mrs. Jones is originally from Philadelphia, where she attended high school, and has since studied art. She graduated from Moore's Institute in Philadelphia., and the Philadelphia Academy of Fine Arts.

While a student at the Academy, she was awarded the Guson Scholarship which provided her with study in Europe, Guatamala, and Mexico.

The Virginia Museum of Fine Arts owns one water color by this artist.

Mrs. Jones and her artist husband, Allen Jones, came to Hampton in 1942. Mr. and Mrs. Jones conduct art classes together in their studio.

Works by Mrs. Jones are being exhibited in Norfolk, Richmond, Baltimore, Washington, Philadelphia, and New York. At present she is having an individual showing at Sweet Briar College, and has borrowed "Edge of the Marsh" from Longwood for this exhibit.

175 Students Gain Awards To Aid Study

State teacher's scholarships have been awarded to 175 Longwood students from the freshman to senior classes.

All who qualified received scholarships which may be renewed each year, depending on the individual's past record.

Only freshman and sophomores who are elementary majors may apply for the scholarships. However, a scholarship given to a freshman or sophomore is valued at $400. Juniors and seniors majoring in secondary or elementary education may receive $300 scholarships.

In return for each year a student receives a scholarship she must teach one year in the Virginia State schools or cancel her scholarship by repaying with interest the amount awarded her.

These scholarships were set up by an act of the Virginia General Assembly.

Magnusson Voted Men's Secretary

Harold K. Magnusson was elected secretary of the Men's Student Government Association at the organization's first meeting on September 26. He replaces John Roberts who did not return to Longwood this year. Magnusson, who retired as a commander from the U. S. Navy, served as president of the Association last year.

Dr. C. G. Gordon Moss, who has served as faculty advisor to the Association for the past two years, resigned.

Mr. M. Henry Bittinger was elected to replace Dr. Moss.

A cordial welcome and a brief explanation of the purpose and activities of the Men's Student Government Association was given to the new students by President Fred M. Stables. George Ogburn and Bob Mason were appointed co-chairmen of the Activities and Athletic Committee. The time for regular meetings of the Association was set for the fourth Wednesday of every month at 12 noon. The other officers of the Association are Eugene Noel, vice-president and Rev. Charles L. Winfree, treasurer.

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 1955

For Frosh and Sophs

Rat Day at Longwood has become an established custom of initiating the freshman class into the life of the college. It is no more than a ceremonious acceptance of the freshmen by their schoolmates — the sophomores.

Suppose there were no Rat Day. Some would feel that there would be no more "maltreatment" of the freshmen, no shouting, ordering, or pouring "goo" in someone's golden locks. To these it would mean no more punishment, whereas to others it would mean the end of a lot of comradely poking of fun as is traditionally observed, even to a more detailed degree, by other colleges all over the country.

Rat Day is as much fun or as much punishment as both the frosh and the sophs strive to make it. If ratting is performed with sportsmanship and accepted as such, it is a Rat Day befitting the campus activities of Longwood College. If it is performed in the "holier than thou" manner, it is only human nature to rebel, protest, and quite justifiably object to the treatment.

The juniors and seniors have experienced Rat Day and found this philosophy to be true. They have not only survived it, but the majority derived benefits which have lasted through the years. Friendships, amiability, sportsmanship, and school spirit can be derived—whether or not they are, depends upon the character of those involved in ratting.

Our campus by-law is "behave as Longwood ladies at all times." "Longwood ladies" are girls who are completely and devotedly associated with this colleg'es life and activities.

We recommend to all students that they behave as "Longwood ladies" on Rat Day, any day,—at all times, and we further recommend to all freshman that they read the following article written by a member of their class in regard to their position this Saturday.

* * * * *

The long-awaited Rat Day is just around the corner! (Understatement?) It's that one day when we will be the Supreme Sophomore's supple servants. Come now, remember that song which says, "Keep your head up high and don't be afraid of the storm." Whoa now! That's not the end; it also says, "At the end of the storm is a golden sky." Now, isn't that better. Remember, we must be good sports about this thing.

Hasn't it been fun though, honestly, running back and forth to the Rec every night being serenaded and then on that night of all nights when we were capped the Class of 1959. "Run, Rat, Run!" was the echo. The funny thing about it was that we didn't have to run. As long as you got as far as the steps, the erst of the mob saw to it that you reached the top of the stairs without showing the slightest effort of running—just pushing.

When the sophomores reached the Rotunda we were all quite surprised to hear a serenade. How pretty it was with the red and white pinwheel running around Joan of Arc.

Now, Freshmen, this is all to be a part of your vivid memory of being a freshman in college. It is doubtful that you can forget such good times easily. After all, it is all in fun and we, the Class of 1959, want to prove that we can be just as good sports as any preceding freshman class.

Let us see now. How about some friendly reminders. Do you all know how to sing "Red and White." Come to think of it, it might not pay to learn its original tune because we might be singing it to "Shake, Rattle, and Roll," "Ain't That a Shame," or even better, us pioneers mite ev'en git to sing it ta . . . "Davy Crockett." Oh, and don't forget to practice how to climb a Saturday Evening Post, scramble like an egg, bunch like a grape, and most of all, that new little number they call the "Turkle." Real punchy, boy, punchy!

How about those "Rat Caps." Are they worn out yet? Most everybody has a little soft spot on her head where the hat fits. Others have found unique ways of wearing their caps, such as under their shower caps when they are taking a shower. Have you tried wearing them to bed yet?

Well, that's about all the advice for now with the exception of this. You know "RATS" spelled backwards is STAR. When it comes time for us to look back on it all, we want to be sure that we showed "STAR" sportsmanship.

—Mary Ellen Moore

"Over-Crowded"

If you are a freshman, sophomore, junior, or senior member of Longwood College, you are no doubt complaining about the "over-crowded conditions" in the dormitories. We realize that this situation is a first for many students here, however it is not unusual to many other campuses.

We would like to point out that when a state supported institution does not operate at full capacity, it is wasting the taxpayers' money. If many members of the present senior class, who withdrew or transferred, had returned to Longwood this fall, the college would not have been able to accept as many new students as it did. When all the dormitory space is put to use, Longwood can provide far more opportunities to the entire student body.

This situtation is not unique among colleges. In fact, during the early 1940's, Longwood itself had an enrollment of 1,000 students.

The understanding of these facts, plus the cooperation of all involved will enable the conditions in the dormitories to be more readily accepted.

Welbon Finds Sounds Vary For Japanese

By BETSY WELBON

(Editor's note: the following survey was written by Betsy Welbon, a Longwood senior who has just returned from a year's study in Japan.)

To the Japanese, the sound of a clock ticking or a horse neighing never sounds quite the way it sounds to an American ear.

The sounds go in the same way, but here is how they come out in English and Japanese:

Dogs bark "bow wow" in English and "wung wung" in Japanese.

Cats "meow" in the U. S., but in Japan they always come out with "niajago niajago."

A clock may "tick tock" in New York, but in Tokyo it goes "rachi rachi."

And the rain, which may either "pitter" or "patter" in Los Angeles, always sounds like "parra parra" to the people in Kyoto.

The faithful horse may neigh in the movies, but in Japan old dobbin always sounds like he is saying "hee hee."

Thunder "rumbles" to the American ears, but goes "gorogoro" to Japanese ears.

The telephone "rings" when you are in the tub, but if you are in the ofuro (Japanese bath) it merely goes "rrin rrin."

But old man crow, who blackly calls "caw caw" over American corn fields, still has almost the same complaint to lodge in Japan where he screeches "caa caa" over the fields of rice.

From the Record Whirl reviewing staff come these five star discs:

"Summertime in Venice" —Rossana Brazzi (Victor 47-6201).

"Where Is That Someone for Me?"—Joni James (MGM K 12,020).

"Young Ideas"——Tony Martin (Victor 47-6209).

"A Room In Paris" — Ralph Young (Decca 9-29629).

Early in the summer, Johnny Desmond got a crack at a key role on the Philco Television Playhouse. He parlayed his dramatic performance and his treatment of the title song, "Play Me Hearts and Flowers," into the biggest break of his 15 years as a show business professional.

Now he's under contract to Philco, whose big bankroll will get him plenty of television exposure in the coming years towards a strong identification with the company's products. And, as another outgrowth of his television triumph, Johnny goes into rehearsal in October for his first legitimate show, a Broadway musical tentatively titled "Amazing Adele." Recordwise, his Coral waxing of "The Yellow Rose of Texas" is still riding high on the charts.

"I've had big breaks before—plenty of them," Johnny says, "but I was never really ready for them. With 'Hearts and Flowers' I think I was ready on all counts. I had had a great opportunity to score after my hitch in the Army, when they were billing me as the 'G. I. Sinatra', but I wasn't up to it."

Johnny was referring to the Victor recording contract and the two network radio shows that were thrown his way after he gained prominence as vocalist with the late Glenn Miller army band. Before that, when he was just a youngster Johnny had been a featured singer with Gene Krupa.

After the war he had soared to a $3,600 per week performer, but Johnny in his own words, "laid a bomb." The Victor contract and the radio shows went out the window as quickly as they had come in.

He retreated from New York to rebuild the confidence that had been kicked out of him when he failed, and he moved his family to Chicago. There he became the singing star of Don McNeil's "Breakfast Club," earned himself a Coral recording contract, and was productive of at least a couple medium-sized hits per year.

About a year ago, when he felt he was ready to try New York again, he gave up the security of the "Breakfast Club" and made another stab at the big time. And this time, of course, he made it.

HANDS!

When grandma was asked to put out her hands it was to have them smacks with a ruler for some infraction of the rules.

When dad was a schoolboy and was asked to put out his hands, teacher was inspecting them for cleanliness.

But, when daughter is asked to put out her hands, teacher is looking for an engagement ring. How times have changed!

Recent Journal Publishes Article by College Professor

By R. C. SIMONINI, JR.

For several years now scholarship students from foreign countries have been coming to American colleges in increasing numbers. Almost without exception these students from aboard do well in their studies, and the particular success of a German student at the University of Illinois, who completed work for a degree in economics in 11 months, and a Greek student majoring in chemistry at Sweet Briar College, who has finished three years in two, has recently occasioned nation-wide comment. Such comment, however, usually includes an attack on American public schools and often shows a lack of understanding of the essential differences between the American and European system.

It is true that from the standpoint of traditional academic learning European elementary and secondary schools are notably superior to ours. Languages, history and the sciences, for example, are taught as subjects per se. Classroom procedure is highly professional. Students stand when teachers or visitors enter the room, stand when spoken to, wait attentively until dismissed, and speak with a courtesy that would be considered degrading in some American circles.

Instructors (high school teachers are called "professors") generally lecture for part of the class hour and then orally quiz the students on a prepared assignment An impersonal relationship is maintained between students and teacher and little effort is expended during the class hour to encourage the stupid or to reform the indolent. Students may ,however, get help after regular hours from teachers assigned to study halls.

Under such a system which is not undemocratic but is simply traditional and normal procedure in Europe, discipline is rarley a problem. The professional if not the economic status of European teachers is high, and they are accorded considerably more respect in society than is the case in America. They speak with an authority and influence seldom known in this country.

Parents, moreover, are necessarily interested in the schools because the burden of the child's progress and promotion is on them and not on the schools. In this country where the responsibility for the educative process is shared by the family an exam of maturity is a crisis for the household as well as for the student.

Foreign schools also show little interest in methods and materials designed to promote citizenship education or social adjustment. To the contrary, modern educators made such projects the core of the curriculm in many American school and consider these intangibles more important than subject - matter divorced from practical or immediate application.

European Students More Mature

It is, of course, impossible to make any objective evaluation as to the relative advantage of the European emphasis on traditional academic learning and the American emphasis on developing social sensitivity and vocational competence.

One can only record a few personal impressions that the European student seems more confident because he is more adaptable; that he has a greater sense of responsibility because he has matured earlier; that he has a highly developed imagination and intellectual curiosity because his brain has been more carefully nurtured than his body or his temperament; that his outlook on life is more realistic, perhaps even cynical; and so on.

But the fact remains that the European student is definitely farther advanced in those areas of knowledge generally considered "fundamental" and "measurable," and thus the gulf between what is accomplished in high school and what is expected in college is not so great as sometimes is the case in this country. Graduation from a European high school (lyceum), in fact, is usually equated with two years of work in an American college.

Foreign school systems, moreover, are highly competitive. Educational philosophy and policy have not responded to the idea of individual differences and the "child-centered" school. A lyceum graduate has been throughly screened and conditioned for further study by an endless series of course examinations, exams of maturity (for completion of elementary, middle, and higher schools), and exams of admission (for entrance into middle and highe schools.) Some of these exams are administered by the State and are conducted by a committee of visiting teachers in order to insure uniformity of achievement through out the country.

In short, European schools are scholastic institutions in the old tradition; in America schools have become social institutions in response to changes in our environmental pattern.

Emphasis on Selectivity

In recent years, some European countries have tried to broaden the democratic basis of public education. In Italy, for example, the Constitution declares with a Jeffersonian ring that 'the capable and meritorious, even though they be without the means, have the right to enter the hightest levels of instruction." However, the emphasis is on selectivity and there is no attempt to emulate the American passion for mass education.

Finally, there is a clear articulation between the aims and policies of the European high schools and those of the university. Only graduates from certain types of high schools, usually the classical and scientific lyceums, are admitted to the university faculties. In Italy, graduation from a classical lyceum represents 13 years of intensive schooling: 5 years of elementary, 3 years of lower middle school, 2 years of the superior gymnasium, and 3 years of the lyceum. Graduates from schools of commerce, industrial arts, domestic arts, crafts, and agriculture are not admitted to the university. Perhaps if more of our American coleges had selective admission standards, there would be less misunderstanding and fewer recrimimations heaped on the high schools.

So it should not be surprising to us that an 18 or 19 year-old graduate of a European high school can come to this country and finish college in one or two years. Indeed, it would be surprising if he or she could not. American schools are, however, superior in at least one respect and that is on the graduate level of instruction. Graduation from a European university can be roughly equated with receiving an M. A. or M. S. degree in an academic subject from a first-rate American university. Continenal university faculties are highly specialized and do not pretend to deal with 'general education" which is assumed to have been covered in the lyceum. They are not residential institutions and have little of the "college life" so beloved in America.

But beyond the European university there is nothing. There are no well-organized graduate schools of the American type, and Europeans today look ever westward for the highest level of instruction which in America is usually completed with the Ph.D. degree. The superior facilities and resources of our great graduate schools have made America the Athens of the modern world in this respect.

Nine LC Girls Attend Hockey Camp

Nine Longwood girls and Miss Eleanor Weddle attended the annual Hockey and Lacrosse Camp August 31 through September 7 at Taxganna, Pennsylvania in the Pocono Mountains. The camp was started and is still operated by Miss Constance Applebee, who founded hockey in the United States in 1900.

Those from Longwood who attended were seniors Mary Davis, Patsy Hamner, Jane Lohr, Ann Snyder, Joan Willard, and Shirley Blankenship, and sophomores Annie V. Weaver, Nancy Richardson, and Ann Jeter.

The camp's daily schedule for hockey consisted of two hours stick work, one hour coaching, and two hours of games. There were also coach classes at night.

The girls had the privilege of seeing in action several All-American hockey and lacrosse players who were members of the staff. Miss Elizabeth Burger, of the Longwood faculty, was one of the instructors on the staff.

The Longwood team was successful in its hockey games against the other colleges and schools at the camp.

From the Bleachers

By LINDA GARRISON

Last Saturday saw five major Virginia college football games. Unfortunately only one of the Virginia teams came out victorious, when Virginia Tech trounced over Clemson, 33-0. During the game, which was played in Philadelphia, 32 of the 33-man Tech squad saw action.

William and Mary pulled the largest upset when they lost to Navy by the narrow margin of 7-0. This was especially surprising after their defeat of 27-0 last year to the Middies and 59-7 the year before. The Indians look ahead to the Tech game this week end, when the entire V. P. I. Corps will travel to Williamsburg for the game.

The University of Richmond gave way to the hardy West Virginia team by a score of 33-12. However, the Spiders, who played in Morgantown, West Virginia, gave the mountaineers a scare during the first half by trailing them 14-12.

Virginia carried off a 7-6 lead over the Clemson Tigers at the half time, but at the final whistle the score stood 20-7. The Cavaliers play again on their home field this week end when they meet George Washington.

The George Washington Colonials defeated the V. M. I. team 25-6 in a Roanoke stadium. The Keydets travel to Richmond this week end for their next tilt.

Weddle Instructs Precision Course

Synchronized swimming is one of the many classes being offered this year in connection with the Physical Education Department of Longwood. Miss Eleanor Weddle instructs this one semester, one credit class. At the present time sixteen students have enrolled and the class is still open to all who are interested.

The qualifications required to participate in this class are proficiency in swimming skills and an average health record according to the school's physical examination.

Synchronized swimming is created when one or more persons time their swimming movements. The mood and framework of a musical selection or idea is interpreted when skilled and proficient swimmers modify and arrange their techniques.

This class will be the foundation for the synchronized swimming pageant in the spring. Several of these swimmers will also participate in the annual Christmas pageant.

'Rec' Swim

The pool will be open for recreational swimming on Wednesday nights from 10 p. m. until 10:45 p. m. Students may also swim on Friday afternoons from 4 p. m. until 5 p. m. "Rec" swim will begin after all physical examinations have been completed.

Annual Pictures

The photographer began taking pictures today for the 1956 Virginian. Lower classmen have signed up, or may sign up for pictures Thursday and Friday of this week. Seniors may not have their individual pictures made until Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday or Thursday of next week as the drapes will not arrive until then.

Hamner, Davis Gain Blue Jacket Awards

Five Longwood seniors received blazer awards following the Athletic Association demonstration today.

White blazers were awarded to Jahn Lohr, Lou Wilder, and Ann Snyder. Patsy Hamner and Mary Davis received the blue blazers.

Blazers are awarded to the seniors who have been outstanding in athletics during their college careers. The awards are based on sportsmanship, varsity participation, and scholarship. White blazers are given to those who have participated and been outstanding in a variety of sports and the blue blazers are awarded to those who have been outstanding in one or two sports. A point system is used for sports participation, each event awarding a certain number of points.

Jane ,a physical education major, is president of the Athletic Association this year. She has participated in varsity hockey during all four of her years at Longwood. She has attended the annual Hockey and Larcrosse camp in Pennsylvania for the past three years. For the past three years she has played varsity basketball Jane became a member of the Athletic Council her sophomore year and has been a member ever since. While she was a junior, Jane added the varsity swimming team, the H2O Club, and the Monogram Club to her athletic activities and achievements.

Lou, an elementary education major, has also participated in varsity hockey for four years. For the past two seasons she has played varsity baseball and last year she was manager of the team. She became a member of the Athletic Council during her sophomore year. While she was a junior, Lou received membership in the Monagram Club.

Ann is a physical education major and has played varsity hockey for all of her four years at Longwood. She attended the annual Hockey and Lacrosse camp in Pennsylvania for the past three years. Likewise, she began playing varsity baseball during her freshman year. Also during her freshman year she participated on the varsity swimming team and during her sophomore year she became a member of the H2O Club. "Snyder" became a member of the Athletic Council while she was a sophomore. She added tennis to

Longwood Alumnae Own Memorial

Famed Lee - Grant Bed Being Readied For Guest Room Use at Alumnae House

A prized historical possession of the Longwood College Alumnae Association—the famed Lee, Grant bed—is being readied for use in the Alumnae House, soon to be opened.

The bed is one piece of a bedroom suite of Florentine design presented to the Association as a memorial to the late Jessie Whitmore Booker, Class of 1904, by her children, Mrs. Harriet Booker Lamb and Elliott Read Booker, Jr.

The popular bed, still with its orginal paint including artistic scrolls and a circular scenic view on the top of the headboard, is being reconditioned at the Clawson Furniture Company here.

In Guest Room

Along with its companion pieces, the bed will be used in one of the guest rooms at the Alumnae House, the former Duvall Home, which adjoins the college library, now being repaired and restored as headquarters for college alumnae activities.

The suite—the bed, a marbletop dresser, two marbletop tables and a washstand, belonged to the donors' grandfather, Colonel Richard Anderson Booker, who was the proprietor of the Randolph House—the present Prince Edward Hotel—at the time of the War Between the States.

The furniture passed down to his son, the late E. R. Booker thence to the children who presented it as a memorial. The gift presentation stipulated that the furniture should always remain in Farmville and in the possession of the Alumnae Association.

Age Estimated

The bed, estimated by Mr. Clawson to be from 90 to 110 years old, is closely associated with the visits to Farmville of Generals Lee and Grant as the opposing armies swept through Farmville on April 6, 7, and 8, 1865.

Lee is supposed to have rested briefly at the Randolph House on April 6, and Grant spent the following night in the hotel, according to historical tradition, rather well authenticated in historical papers.

It was in the privacy of the Randolph House room, and on the very table which is part of the suite that Grant is supposed to have written the draft of his first surrender proposal which reached General Lee near Cumberland Church.

The Alumnae House was originally built about 115 years ago and it is the birthplace of Miss Minnie Rice, a Latin teacher here many years ago.

After completion, the Alumnae House will become a residence of Alumnae officers, their offices, and guests. There will be three large bedrooms and one small bedroom at the disposal of the visiting alumnae. Two large parlors will be available for social functions of the college and may be rented for business use by the town organizations. The old kitchen has been equipped with new kitchen facilities.

'Fifi'

(Editor's Note: The following poem was written to Freshman Fay Salmon by her mother, Mrs. Evelyn M. Salmon. A similar poem was written to Fay's older sister when she entered Longwood. We feel Mrs. Salmon's words express the thoughts of many mothers as their daughters leave home for college life and the days that follow.)

"FIFI"

Dad called you Fifi, though your name is Fay,
And often in our hearts we'd pray,
A prayer of gratitude to God above,
For your precious face and form of love.

Like irridesent pools of green,
We've looked into your eyes and seen
The love of Christ that lingers there
And thus we know you are His heir.

Though you walk through lonely paths someday,
Should you lose the path along the way,
Be still and know that where you are
Is the Love of God, like a shining star.

Lift up your heart and seek anew
The touch of His hand as He beckons you
To higher realms of truth and light
That you may sense through the darkest night.

"As you sow, so shall reap", so
Let your thought be pure and deep
That this truth within your heart may reign,
"To live is Christ, to die is gain."

French Club Sponsors Religious Drama Film Friday in Jarman Hall

Critics Say Plot Offers Enjoyment

"Best foreign film in at least a year," says Time Magazine; "a film of rare and simple beauty," states the New York Times. Such enthusiastic praise heralds the arrival of the stirring religious drama: "Dieu a besoin des Hommes" (God Needs Men). The film, sponsored by Le Cercle Francais, will be shown Friday at 8 p. m. in Jarman Auditorium.

The absorbing tale has been created from a true story of the hardy islanders of Sein, off France's Brittany Coast, who used to pray for shipwrecks to augment their bare susistence from the sea.

"Pierre Fresnay," offers Genevieve Jottan, Longwood's pert French informant, "is one of the most famous contemporary actors in France." Madeline Robenson and Daniel Gelin whose performances are excellent, are also reknowned."

Genevieve added that "the film is deeply emotional and that the drama is made even more poignant by the theme itself."

"God Needs Men" is a full length motion picture film. The dialogue is in French with English subtitles. The critics promise a rewarding performance and an evening's enjoyment. Tickets are on sale for 35 cents.

Music Department To Present Opera

"The Old Maid and the Thief," a grotesque opera in 14 scenes, will be presented by the music department of Longwood in Jarman Hall, November 3.

Appearing in this opera by Gian-Carlo Menotti are Joyce Clingenpeel of Roanoke, as Miss Todd, contralto; Nancy McLawhorn of Norfolk, as Laetitia, soprano; Gay Allen of Newport News, as Miss Pinkerton, soprano; and Joel K. Ebersole, assistant professor of music, as Bob, baritone.

These students are music majors and are among the college Marigal Singers.

Gian-Carol Menotti has produced several successful operas on Broadway including, 'hTe Consul," which won the Pulitzer Prize for Music in 1950.

President to Speak At Varied Programs

Three speeches are on schedule for President Francis G. Lankford, Jr.,, during the next three weeks.

The mathematics teachers of Danville will hear an address by Dr. Lankford on October 20.

The following day, October 21, Longwood's president will speak at a meeting of the Buckingham County Womans Club. His topic is "Encouragement of Young People to Enter the Teaching Profession". Junior and senior high school students and parents from neighboring counties have been invited to attend the program.

12 Americans Win Privilege To Go Abroad

The 1955 Marshall Scholarship Award Winners—12 young Americans, both men and women, who have won place in American universities—will soon be gathering in New York prior to their departure for England.

Before embarking for England on the Queen Elizabeth they will be entertained in New York by the British Consul-Gen., Mr. F. B. A. Kundall, C. M. G., O. B. E.

The students sail on September 28th and will be embarking between 12:30 and 3:30 p. m.

Applications are now being received for next year's scholarships. These must be in by October 15, 1955.

Instituted in May, 1953, when it was approved by all parties in Parliament, the Marshall Scholarships scheme was conveived as a gesture of appreciation for American's Marshall Plan (ERP) Aid which had come to an end in 1950.

It provides for 12 two-year scholarships for American students to be awarded annually. These are granted on a regional basis to the best qualified men and women graduates. Attention is paid to personality and character as well as intellect in choosing the winners.

For purposes of selection the U. S. and its territories have been divided into four regions each having a committee of five prominent Americans headed by the local British Counsul-General, to whom applications should be submitted.

Review Boards

When three applicants have been chosen by these boards (and another three listed as substitutes) the names are sent to a seven-member "distinguished persons" board in Washington, D. C. The board, headed by the British Ambassador, reviews the names and passes on the final choice to London, where approval is made by a Commemoration Committee under the chairmanship of Sir Oliver Franks, former British Ambassador at Washington.

The lists close each October for the next year, and announcements of award winners are made the following April.

Qualifications

Applicants must be under age of 28 when they take up their scholarships and in possession of a First degree from an American University.

As part of the awards, sea passages for the scholars are paid by the British Government. Each scholarship is worth 550 pounds ($1,540) a year, an ample sum for student life in Britain. Married students receive an additional allowance of 200 pounds ($560).

Magazine Reviews Longwood College

By LINDA DOLES

Longwood College is featured in the just released Autumn issue of "The Iron Worker," the quarterly magazine of the Lynchburg Foundry Company.

The well illustrated article gives a very complete and concisive history dating back to 1939, the very beginning, of what is now Longwood College. That the college is the fifth oldest institution for women in the United States is one of the many interesting facts in this article.

The author, Meade L. Shackleford, Longwood director of public relations and instructor of journalism, has used a very interesting style and made the article well worth reading for everyone connected with, or interested in Longwood College.

The article relates how the Farmville Female Seminary began in 1839 with an enrollment of 94 students by 1860, has grown into Longwood as it is today with over 750 students. The college then consisted of one brick building in Colonial architecture, part of which now forms Ruffner Hall. The college was about the same until Dr. William Henry Ruffner became president and the school was deeded to Virginia, making it the first institution of higher learning for women in the state. The college had further improved by the time Dr. Joseph L. Jarman became president in 1902. It was during his 44 years as president that the school was expanded into a four-year accredited college.

The name of the college was changed for the last time to Lonwood College while Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster was president. Next month Dr. Francis G. Lankford will be inaugurated as the seventeenth president of the college.

The author, Mrs. Shackleford, gives a vivid and interesting portrayal of the history of Longwood College. The many and varied pictures, showing interesting scenes of Lonwood from the birth of the college until now, add to the interest of the article. "The Iron Worker" can be found in the library.

This entire article will be reprinted next year in the Longwood Alumnae Magazine and will at that time be distriuted to all students and alumnae.

1956 Contest Open to Maids

The 1956 Maid of Cotton contest now is open. The National Cotton Council, sponsor of the annual event, says that if previous years are any indication, King Cotton's 1956 fashion and good will emissary will be picked from some college in the Cotton Belt. The Council notes that 16 of the 17 Maids to date have been coeds or recent graduates.

Announcing the opening of the 1956 contest, the Cotton Council said that next year for the first time, the international Maid of Cotton tour will have its official kick-off outside the United States.

Arrangements have just been completed for the new Maid to fly via British Overseas Airways Corporation's Bahamian flight to the world-famous resort city of Nassau next January 31.

There at the height of the tropical island's winter season, the Maid will present a complete wardrobe of 1956 American designed cottons in a fashion show at the historic Royal Victoria hotel.

During her stay at the Royal Victoria, the Maid of Cotton will be received by the chairman of the Bahamas Board of Development, and other high government officials. She will be featured in a full-color movie to be made in the hotel's exotic Jungle Gardens and other locales in Nassau.

Following her visit in the Bahamas, the new Maid will begin her United States tour in Miami, Florida. The tour will take her to more than thirty major U. S. cities from coast to coast plus some of the principal cities of Canada.

Cities scheduled to be visited by King Cotton's emissary include: New York, Miami, Atlanta, Birmingham, Jackson, Missippi; New Orleans, Houston, Dallas, San Antonio, El Paso, Phoenix, Los Angeles, San Diego, Vancouver, B. C.; Seattle, Denver, Des Moines, St. Louis, Boston, Philadelphia, Washington, Cleveland, Charlotte, Memphis, Detroit, Toronto, and Montreal, Quebec. A number of cities in the San Joaquin Valley of California will also be visited by the Maid.

Any girl born in a cotton-producing state who has never been married, who is between the ages of 19-25, and who is at least 5 feet 5 inches tall is eligible to become a Maid of Cotton. Entry

This May Mean You

Circus at Longwood reveals the unity, spirit and worth of each class at Longwood. It is as much a part of college life here as is any class, extracurricular activity, or hen session. If college is a place of learning, and every girl has come to college with this in mind, then she should support everything that is approved or advocated by the college.

Such is Circus—a purposeful effort to provide the opportunity to display unity, spirit, and worth.

Every girl should and does feel class spirit. She either feels it and permits that spirit to contribute to her class; or she feels it, pushes it aside and rejects the idea believing that class spirit is an immature thing experienced by "gung-ho" students who have nothing better to do than devote time and energy to school life.

We beg to bring these believers up to date on the subject of class participation. Throughout your life, you must live with people, mingle with them, contribute to their interest, and experience a form of devotion whether you are a woman's clubber, bridge clubber, or a housewife among housewives. Develop your personality in all aspects of college life. You will meet them in the future.

As for Circus, this is one aspect of college life. We urge your support. Win or lose, here are our good wishes!

To the freshmen—we hope that Circus develops a closer harmony among so large a number of college girls and a never ending spirit of cooperation.

To the sophomores—we hope that Circus will tie tighter the knot of unity in class spirit.

To the juniors—we hope that they will continue to strive forward in the same manner as they have previously.

And to the seniors—we hope that their last experience of class harmony will prove them all capable of facing the careers for which they are preparing themselves.

To every class member—we urge 100 per cent class participation, 100 per cent good sportsmanship, and 100 per cent good luck!

A Date With Gobel

Pause! Have a watch . . . watch TV. There is one down in the Rec with plenty of comfortable chairs nearby for your own relaxation and enjoyment.

You'll agree "little things mean a lot." Perhaps classes were tough, and you feel tired; or perhaps you feel happy and would like a few laughs. Then one hour at the TV can bring you just what you're looking for.

It's Thursday, 3:15. You've just received a long awaited letter. Settle down before the TV for the next few minutes. Watch "First Love" on Channel 8, WXEX, or if you didn't receive a letter, "Way of the World," perhaps. For those young at heart or who work with the young in age, tune in Howdy Doody at 4:30, this refers to elementary majors.

On Friday there's Eddie Fisher, Life of Riley, The Big Story and Star Stage.

I bet you'd give your last rat cap, Freshmen, to see that Notre Dame-Michigan State game. Well, rats, you can! This exciting game will be on TV Saturday at 1:45.

Then you go to the Rec dance (?) Saturday night. Who could you have for a more lovable, charming, and witty date than George Gobel. From 7 to 10 o'clock Saturday evening there is the Perry Como Show, People are Funny, Jimmy Durante, and Your Hit Parade. They'd like to be your guests. Won't you be their's?

Diet Consciousness Shows Weakness Of Character In Individuals — Boyle

Diet-diet-diet, that's the watchword in America these days," says columnist Hal Boyle.

"If manna suddenly fell from Heaven, half the people would be afraid to taste it." It may contain too many calories.

Boyle counts himself in the same category, as he describes himself as a cowardly marshmellow, a fat man without the courage to stay that way. Like millions of others he is an a diet, in fact, his fortieth diet in ten years.

"Doctors", say Boyle, "warn everyone to keep in shape, but what kind of shape, since most of the doctors themselves prefer to match the silhouette of an Idaho potato." According to Boyle every time his weight hits a plump two hundred pounds, food becomes a nasty four letter word, and the old starvation routine commences and ends about two months later when the scales register a mere hundred and seventy-five pounds.

Why? Merely because he describes himself as a social poltron, a craven sycophant to the present ridiculous crowd theory that blubber is a handicap. Let them tell that to a whale, he'd laugh them right out of the water. Nature is far more tolerant, there's room for the giraffe as well as the mole, the gazelle as will as the elephant. Each is shaped differently, they don't kid each other. Even a lion knows better than to poke fun at an elephant.

Wiley, Boyle asks again, should this nonsense effect only the human species? What virtue is there in looking like a thermometer every time you swallow a glass of pink lemonade?

The old aim of man was to be fat and sassy. The goal now is to be skinny and leering.

Boyle thinks the whole thing is based on nothing but envy. A thin man is in misery, and misery loves company. The mere sight of a fat man waddling contentedly through life drives him wild.

"You don't eat so much because you're happy," the thin man suggests evilly to the fat man. "You eat because you're unhappy. You're worried. You're sick, sick, sick!"

Boyle's all for forming a society to put down this blather from the gazelle herd. He would prefer to call the organization POFF's —Proud Order of Fat Folks. He would start off by declaring an international "Year of the Fat Man." Any bean-poler who objected would be forced to eat a gallon of mashed eels.

To Boyle the idea offers food for reflection with reflection being the only food, now that he's on his fortieth diet.

So go ahead and eat your blackstrap molasses, yogurt, and alfalfa buds and boy to mad fadism. Boyle and I will waddle continually and serenely.

Library Presents Cartoon Display

By ELLA CARTER

The American Cartoon, a Virginia Museum Exhibition of originals from the collection of Art Wood, is now on display in the Browsing Room of the college library.

Art Wood, editorial cartoonist for the "Richmond News Leader," has collected original works of other cartoonists since he was ten years old. A Navy staff cartoonist in the World War II, and cartoon enthusiast at Washington and Lee University, Wood lived in Washington much of his life.

The exhibit shows the cartoon holding a unique and special field in the history of illustration, and demonstrates how it relies on allusions to specific customs, on commentary value, and above all on humor.

Giving a history of cartooning, the exhibit shows Englishman Hogarth's picture of the customs of

Rat Relates in Poetic Way Fun 'n Fear of Sophs Play

BY DELO DOVE

It all began when I approached the front door,
And saw hundreds of sophomores pacing the floor.
From the Rotunda came a yell, "Hi, come right in,
But I sensed something vile behind that sly little grin.

Made the freshman feel a warm sense of delight.
They gave kind directions when we lost our way,
Were they thinking of us? Ha Ha "Rat Day".

A week passes by, the sophs are still grand,
Not a friendlier, nicer class was there in the land.
They spoke in the hall and grinned as if to say
We like you now, but wait until "Rat Day".

Days keep progressing, we noticed a change,
Sophs look mean, our Day they arrange.
When we fail to Praise '58 they'd say,
Ha Ha, we'll remember you "Rat Day".

By this time the freshman are dreading that Day,
Why some of our hearts are even 4A
Directions to freshman, needless to say,
Directions to freshman for dreaded "Rat Day".

The humming begins before very long,
Then comes the dear, dear Red 'n White song.
To hide in our rooms, well it just doesn't pay,
But you'll be paid for your actions on "Rat Day".

On Sept. 30, ten p. m. the time,
The spohs start marching, dressed up real fine.
We laughed and laughed in the craziest way,
But our laughter ended with the thought of "Rat Day".

Then comes the night before October first,
When through freshman dorm the sophomores burst.
We turkle, drop dead, lay eggs, and pray,
Just a little example of tomorrow—"Rat Day".

Then finally comes that glorious day,
When the poor freshman work and sophs play.
We clean, sweep, scrub, make beds, and pray,
Por the end to come this terrible "Rat Day".

We rushed from room to room as fast as we could,
To do things we shouldn't, a few that we should.
We gave the sign off as smooth as could be,
And sang Red 'n White to our beloved "TiPi".

Ah! glorious time—how slowly she goes,
Poor freshman are tired from their head to their toes.
But comes 4 p. m. we yell with delight,
And give out with our own Green 'n White.

Back to our rooms we fly with glee,
Oh no—a summons—its clear as can be.
The lowly freshman cringe again with fright,
With the awful thought of the coming night.

What happened to us just can't be told,
After we've through! What a sight to behold!
We go through the paces—one by one,
We all have to admit, we had lots of fun.

his time in one of his satirical series, "Marriage a la mode." Shown among the 19th century artists is the work of the French painter and draughtsman, Dumbler, known for his brilliant caricatures.

Since over half the people in the United States are readers of comics, the comic strips are given careful attention. Among Art Wood's collection of comic strips displaying the cartoonist's autograph is Hal Foster's "Prince Valiant," Walt Kelley's "Pogo," Chester Gould's "Dick Tracy," and Billy DeBeck's "Barney Google."

The change of style in comics is illustrated by cartoons from Wood's collection. Gay cartoons and editorial cartoons through the years are shown.

Holding a deserving space for attention is a series of Uncle Sam cartoons which reveal the origin of this legendary character.

Syllablegram

Reg. U. S. Patent Office
by LAWRENCE J. STEINBUGLER

Using the 58 syllables listed below, you are to construct 22 words as solutions to the listed definitions. The numbers in parentheses after each definition is the number of syllables in the solution. Heavy lines in last two columns indicate endings of words.

The first and last letters of the solutions, read from top to bottom in numerical order, will form a quotation from Rupert Brooks' "The Dead."

As you find a probable answer to a definition, you write it in the space provided in the diagram under "solutions" and check off the syllables below as you use them. In solving a Syllablegram, it is important not to rely simply upon the definitions, but to work back and forth with the definitions, syllables and the quotation, thus using every possible clue.

This past Saturday saw seven important Virginia college football games. The University of Virginia received a crushing blow from Penn State in the famous Tobacco Bowl contest. The final score stood 26-7 in favor of the northerners.

Washington and Lee's return to collegiate football was somewhat marred by their loss to Centre, 24-7.

The VMI Keydets bowed to the West Virginia Mountaineers with a score of 47-12.

William and Mary likewise saw defeat in their game with Duke in Durham. The blue Devils trounced the Indians 47-7.

The Tech Gobblers fared a little better with Florida State when they squeezed out a 24-20 victory over the Seminoles.

The Randolph-Macon Yellow Jackets had an exciting contest against Western Maryland and edged over the Green Terrors 14-13.

Last, but not least, the Hampden-Sydney Tigers triumphed over the Guilford Quakers with a score of 7-6.

AA Appoints Cheerleaders

Cheerleaders for the 1955-56 athletic season at Longwood have recently been appointed by the A. A. Council.

Head cheerleaders appointed are Cathrine Meeks and Louise Turner Caldwell. Other members of the cheering squad include Neal Jarman, Frances Hankins, Sally O'Malley, Joan Darnell, Geraldine Hines, and Shirley Kemp.

This group will help support teams with cheering at all varsity athletic events.

Test Your Wits With New Puzzle

In solving a SYLLABLEGRAM, the first step is to read over the syllables printed at the bottom of the puzzle. Then, go through the defintions and write in the answers that come readily to mind. As the answers are supplied, it is important to encircle or cross out each syllable below, to show elimination. As the solution progresses;, the possibility of recognizing words in the proverb is increased.

It is important to work back and forth between syllables and the quotation, using every possible clue.

Figures in parentheses after definitions show the number of syllables to be used, and each syllable listed below may be used only once. The first and last letters of each definition, when read from top to bottom, will form a well-known proverb.

To get you off to a good start, four solutions, and their rst and last letters, have been supplied. From there, you're on your own, but if you must peek, the answers will be found on page 4.

In the next isue, however, the SYLLABLEGRAM may be harder to solve!

Triumphant Hit of 1953 Here, Columbus Boychoir Will Start New Artist Series

The Columbus Boychoir returns on Tuesday, Nov. 29, to Farmville where it scored such an enthusiastic hit with hundreds of new friends during its 1953 appearance.

The seventy-voice choral ensemble will be presented as the first in the 1955-56 Farmville-Longwood College Artist series.

Well-Rounded Program

Under the direction of its founder, Herbert Huffman, the youthful boychoir will present a program designed to entertain all lovers of choral music. Its repertoire includes numbers ranging from Palestrina to Gershwin, from Tyrolean folk songs to Negro spirituals, from Latin motets to boogie-woogie.

Director Huffman has brought into being a unique institution. He has created a school that offers musical training of the highest caliber combined with a fully accredited academic course to boys from all over the United States and Canada. At the same time, he has created a choir that, since 1939, has won international recognition and is known from coast-to-coast not only by its hundreds of concerts but also in radio and television appearances.

Normal Routine

While on concert tour each season, the boys have their normal routine interrupted as little as possible. They travel in their handsome "Schoolhouse on Wheels", especially fitted with desks at each seat, a five-octave piano for rehearsals, and a refrigerator for carrying milk and lunches.

GROUP OF YOUNG SINGERS in Columbus Boychoir, first program in the 1955-56 Farmville-Longwood College Artists Series, to appear in Jarman Hall on Tuesday.

During its years of existence, the Boychoir has become renowned, not merely for the beautiful music it brings to America, but also for the good citizenship it fosters. "America's Singing Boys," are credited with having inspired more than 25 new boychoirs throughout the country.

Following the Columbus Boychoir on November 29, the series will present three other programs of equally high entertainment value. The two already announced are the National Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Dr. Howard Mitchell for a return engagement to Farmville on Tuesday, March 6 and "Two's A Company," starring Broadway and Hollywood stars Albert Dekker and Edith Atwater on Monday, April 16.

forms are available from the National Cotton Festival, P. O. Box 9005, Memphis 12, Tennessee.

Entry forms must be completed and returned postmarked no later than midnight, December 1. Two photographs must accompany the completed entry form. One must be a head and shoulder picture and the other a full length view.

The Cotton Council emphasizes that the Maid of Cotton competition is not a beauty contest in its usual sense. Judging is on the basis of intelligence, personality, and poise, as well as appearance. A letter from the Council's public relations director reads:

"One bright-eyed young lady from the Cotton Belt states is going to be chosen as the 1956 Maid of Cotton. She might very easily be found on the campus of Longwood College, since every Maid of Cotton has either been a college student or a recent graduate at the time of her selection. We shall hope that there are many entries from the students of Longwood College."

Contest finals will be held in Memphis on the coming December 27, 28. Following her selection the Maid of Cotton will depart for New York where she will spend a full month. During this time she will be fitted with a glamorous all-cotton wardrobe created by many of the top designers of the United States.

The Maid of Cotton contest and tour are sponsored each year by the National Cotton Council, the Memphis Cotton Carnival Association, and the Cotton Exchanges of Memphis, New York, and New Orleans.

The 1956 Maid will succeed the 1955 Maid of Cotton De Lois Faulkner of Sallisaw, Oklahoma, who had just been graduated from Oklahoma A. & M. College when she was selected for the honor.

Opening of Toybox Will Reveal Queen, 1955 Ring Master

By ADELE DONALDSON

Whirling her whip to begin the 1955 Alpha Kappa Gamma Circus, Suzanne Faison, a sophomore from Norfolk will be featured as the Animal Trainer in "Toybox". She was elected to this place of honor by the members of Alpha Kappa Gamma. Suzanne, better known as Tracy has been quite active in school activities serving as co-chairman of the Sophomore Circus skit and past president of the Freshman Commission. She is also a member of the Cotillion Club and Sigma Sigma Sigma sorority.

Tracy's duties as the trainer will be to lead the animals and clowns in the parade which will start at 2:30 p. m. Saturday afternoon, and she will also open the Circus presentation that night at 8 p. m., October 29, in Jarman Hall.

Saturday afternoon the Circus parade will form behind the various dorms. There, the floats, clowns, animals, class members in the parade and cars will assemble. The parade down Pine Street to Route No. 460 will turn and proceed along Main Street. It will then march up High Street and back to the college campus. All those who are able to obtain cars are invited to join the parade but only those which have been decorated will be allowed to participate.

The floats will represent each of the four classes and each will be decorated in the theme of the skit to be presented by that particular class Saturday night. All floats will be judged and the winners will be announced Saturday night during the program at the auditorium.

The identity of the Ring Master, Circus queen and princesses will be revealed at the opening of the program in Jarman Hall Saturday night. The Queen will be the Senior representative and her princesses, one from a class, will carry out the "Toybox" theme. The princesses will be dressed as dolls while the Queen will be costumed as a bride doll. Ushers also will be dressed as little girl dolls. To further cary out the theme "Toybox, the animals and and clowns will enter the stage from a toybox to open the big top Circus.

The court will be seated on the stage during the entire program. At the close of the skits and after the judges have reached their decision, the Ring Master will announce the winners of the skits and floats. This will bring to a close the auditorium program and each Circus representative will lead her class to the main recreation hall or the "Midway" of the AKG Circus. The audience will then follow this procession to the "Rec".

Mass Circus practices will be held tomorrow and Friday nights. They will begin promptly at 7 p. m. Costumes will not be necessary tomorrow. All people in the skits must wear their costume and have props with them for the Friday rehearsal.

Becky Fizer, AKC Circus Chairman, announced that the money collected from each participant in Circus will be donated to a campus fund for purchasing new dining hall china.

Last Words on Circus

One more word to the wise concerning Circus is to keep your wits about you. This week end holds one of the biggest events of the college year. Entertainment, confusion, last minute Circus preparations and numerous guests will flood the campus as the festivities get underway.

In all the hullabaloo, we may begin to feel as giddy as though we had ridden a runaway merry-go-round. Just remember that this is your big week end in college and that your talent will be seen not only by the rest of the college, but by guests, townspeople and alumnae.

Therefore, we hope that Circus 1955 will be one of the best offered and if each class sincerely believes that they have produced their best efforts, then there will be a hot time in the judges' box Saturday night.

Are You For More Schooling?

President Eisenhower's newly proposed program consisting of a five year high school career and a five year period to procure a college degree has caused the "integration vs. segregation" question to now share its spotlight in today's news. And, this suggestion of the President deserves much consideration. A change in the public high school and college programs has many advantages as well as disadvantages.

Pro feelings on this plan include the idea that students entering college after a five year high school program would be more mature and more apt to be able to decide on thier major in college and the type of work in which they want to invest their lives. Therefore, less time would be wasted on unnecessary courses in college.

In answer to the above, a disadvantage might be that students with financial or scholastic difficulties might possibly be discouraged from attending college. After a while the number of college graduates might register a decrease.

Affirmative thinkers voice the opinion that more important than the quantity of college graduates is the quality of the graduates. An increased number of years in college life would give students more time to absorb much needed knowledge and experience in setting their minds to work.

How many times has a college student been heard to say, "I just wish I had enough time to take those certain extra courses for which I've been unable to find time"? An extra year of college work would allow time for a wider range of courses; thus causing college graduates to emerge with more diversified educations.

But, on the negative, there is the idea that an added year of high school work might discourage some from pursuing higher education.

However, again to its advantage, more schooling might show some the importance of gaining more knowledge.

The program surely deserves study whether the advantages outweigh the disadvantages, or the disadvantages outweigh the advantages. There might be a possible compromise agreed upon the four years of high school and five of college or five of high school and four of college. Only study of and experiments with this plan will determine the best results.

Ignoring A College Policy

Thirty-five to forty Longwood students have more than once this fall consciously ignored a college policy that is provided for their personal health and the health of their neighbors.

It takes much less time for you to walk to the infirmary for a very brief annual check-up than it does for the college physician to return to the campus for several successive nights to examine nearly 750 girls. This physical check-up is not anyone's first nor will it most likely be anyone's last. Therefore, everyone should already be familiar with its necessity.

This may sound to the extreme, however, ignoring your health now you may develop into a habit that you will regret in years to come.

And, from the material standpoint, with the high cost of medical services today, it is wise to take full advantage of any free medical attention offered.

Viewed from all sides, it seems to your advantage to pay Dr. Moore your required yearly visit.

Our idea of an over-titled plug is the fellow in several of the federal government's departments who is first assistant to the secretary of the deputy adviser to the undersecretary of something.

The weather is still one of life's greatest mysteries, and the experts still do not understand much that goes on above the earth's surface up to 50,000 feet, where weather ends.

U. S. Civil Service Offers 1955 Exam To College Seniors

The first Federal-Service Entrance Examination opened today to college seniors and college graduates who want a career in the Federal service. Applicants have until November 18 to file for the first written test to be given December 10 in more than 1,000 college campuses, Philip Young, chairman of the U. S. Civil Service Commission announced.

The new program, unique in Federal history, will be permanent and continous, with examinations planned periodically as Federal personnel needs require it. Filing is permissible at any time for any of the subsequent examinations, which will be open to both specialists and non-specialist seniors and graduates. Replaced are approximately 100 college-level examinations.

Job offers can be made by Federal agencies to persons passing the examination once their names become available on the lists of eligibles which the Civil Service Commission will set up early next year. Appointments follow graduation. Most openings will be at grade GS-5 and grades GS-7 levels, $3,670 and $4,525 a year starting salaries, respectively. The opportunities will be in many fields, including administrative, personnel, technical and professional.

"There are better than 50,000 positions at grade GS-5 alone that call for no specific subject matter preparation but that could well be staffed with workers having a college level of intelligence and general ability," Mr. Young declared.

"At present turnover rates, between 8,000 and 10,000 of these positions would vacant each year —all of them 'naturals' to fill from this examination."

Application forms have already been made available at college placement offices or may be obtained from the nearest Commission office. The examination points have been planned so that no candidate will have to travel far to take the December 10 examination or any of the subsequent examination. In event the applicant fails the examination, he may take it again during his senior year or after graduation.

Government representatives will visit most campuses before November 18 to explain the new program in detail. College placement offices will be given full information concerning the representatives' visit. Interested students

Music, Travel, Good Food – Mr. Wagner

By ELLA CARTER

A man with a zest for life, a talent for music, a taste for food fit for a king, and rich in memorable experiences of his travels and work—this is Wilfred Wagner.

Mr. Wagner, manager of the Longwood Slater System, is new here but already like an old friend to the students.

Working in the catering field has taken Mr. Wagner to many places. Among the famous personalities for whom he has had food served is the late King of England when he once dined at a hotel in London.

After coming to Canada in 1934, Mr. Wagner worked with the Commodore Hotel in New York City. In 1949, he received his degree in hotel technology at the State University of New York.

During World War II Mr. Wagner, possessing a very keen sense of observation, served as a member of the United States Army Military Intelligence Service.

While in the army, he met his German wife, Hildegard, a pianist and graduate of the University of Frankfort. The Wagners have two children, Susan, age 7 and Thomas, age 4.

With music as both a hobby and talent, Mr. Wagner is both a singer and violinist.

Born in Hamburg, Germany, Mr. Wagner sang in the well-known Boys' Choir at the State Operetta of Hamburg.

An ardent lover of cooking, Mr. Wagner, when asked his favorite dish, replied with a broad laugh, "Hot roly-poly!" (an English pastry.)

"After spending a short time in Farmville and liking the small town so much, I moved my family here as fast as I could so they wouldn't transfer us," chuckled Mr. Wagner.

Award - Winning Longwood Composer Presents Recital in Jarman Auditorium

Walter Sinclair Hartley at twenty-eight has already won recognition on a national scale for his musical compositions.

The new assistant professor of music at Longwood College received the Virginia Collier award for compositions in 1952 for his "Suite For Five Wind Instruments." The award was given by the Washington, D. C. chapter of a national organization.

His other accomplishment at this writing has been the commissioning of a work by the Koussevitsky Music Foundation, which he received in the summer of 1954. The late Serge Koussevitsky will be remembered as the conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and director of the Tanglewood Summer Music Festivals. One of his concerns was to aid young American composers and conductors of promise.

The commission received by Dr. Hartley was the first in a series to be given young composers through the Foundation. The work that resulted was his "Chamber Symphony", a work for a small orchestra.

Rehearsing

A native of Washington, D. C., Dr. Hartley has studied almost exclusively at the Eastman School of Music in Rochester, N. Y., where he was taught composition by Burrill Phillips, Bernard Rogers and Howard Hanson, and piano by Jose Echaniz. He received his Bachelor's in Composition in 1950, his M. M. in 1951 and his Doctorate in 1953.

His first major composition was a ballet, written in 1949 and performed with the dancers on the stage of the Eastman Theater in 1950. It was conducted by Dr. Howard Hanson.

Prior to entering Eastman's, Dr. Hartley attended public schools in Washington, and upon graduation, served in the Army for almost two years.

A Way of Life

"Music," he says, "has always been a way of life for me as long as I can remember."

His parents have told him he picked out tunes at the piano when he was two or three. He began piano lessons at four, and started composing as soon as he had learned to write notes. He considers himself primarily a composer, but ever since leaving Eastman's he indicates he has become more and more interested in piano performance as such. He is particularly enthusiastic in two-piano work and playing with a chamber music group.

At Longwood, Dr. Hartley teaches piano, the history of music, piano literature and piano ensemble. He joined the faculty this fall after spending two years teaching at The King's College in Delaware.

Program

His latest composition, "Sonata in A", composed this past August, was one of the pieces featured in his recital in Jarman Hall. His musical programs was made up by numbers from the classical, romantic and the modern schools of music. He also played two pieces from Bach and two of his sons, and Schubert, Chopin and Bartok.

Dr. Walter S. Hartley of Longwood College faculty, who gave a piano recital in Jarman Hall Oct. 25.

Civil Service Exam

should contact Mrs. Mary Watkins, executive secretary.

Mr. Young emphasized that any senior passing the examination can be hired as soon as he graduates, whether that is in February or in June, provided he has come within reach of agency selection on the list of eligibles. This means his name must be among the top three names on the list. The higher the examinations mark, the more quickly the name can be reached for appointment.

A student may tell a Federal agency representative, either before or after the examination, that he would like to work for that agency. Similiarly an agency representative may, at either time, ask a student to consider appointment only with that agency. Those taking the examintion will be given an opportunity to express preference for employment in a particular agency or for a particular agency. Such appointments can be made once the three conditions of passing the examination, graduation, and availability for selection are complied with.

All candidates will be given a 3-hour written examination on the morning of December 10. Those wishing to try for management internships will take an additional 3-hour written test later in the day and will be given a group oral test in March.

The marks made in the two examinations will be tallied separately so that a poor mark in one examintion will not lower a high mark made in the other. However, a failing mark in the first examination will eliminate the candidate. Separate lists of eligibles will be made up from those taking only the first examinations and from those taking both examinations. General lists, from the first test, should be set up by February 8, 1956, according to present plans.

Kratzch, Stables Find Role Requires Tango Plus Drama Talent On Stage

By PAT WALTON

When Gloria Kratzch and Freddie Stables read the cast list for "Ring 'Round the Moon," the fall production of the Longwood Players, they found they had been assigned the roles of "Lady India" and "Patrice," respectively. They placed a check beside their name, and although they didn't know it at that time, they had added a new course, the Tango, to their "extra-curriculum."

Jarman Hall immediately became a dance studio, and lessons began. Now when you enter the auditorium, the strains of "Blue Tango" are heard. On stage you will find Freddie and Gloria practicing with their instructors, Anita Heflin of Longwood and Bobby P nce of Hampden-Sydney.

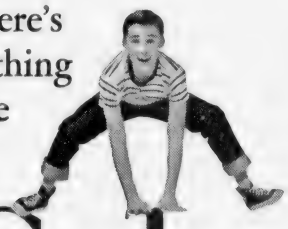
Neither Gloria nor Freddie had ever danced the tango before, but they believed they could learn the steps easily until they were told that not only would they have to tango during the entire scene but also they would have to carry on a conversation at the same time.

During the first few rehearsals, it was quite amusing to watch as they made their way uncertainly across the stage, struggling to remember their lines, and muttering under their breath, "1—2—3 and 4; pause, step to the side; dip." Since Gloria sometimes wears a straight skirt to rehearsals, everyone expects it to be, "1—2—3 and 4; pause, step to the side; R-I-P!"

Another of Gloria's worries is that Freddie might drop her during one of the deep dips. While performing one of the most daring dips, they speak several lines while Gloria bends double and Freddie supports her.

"Final examinations" for this course will be held November 17 and 18 at 8 p. m. in Jarman Auditorium. Tickets at the price of $1.00 may be secured from members of the Longwood Players.

If these two students of the tango and drama keep progressing at their present rate, they are expected to pass with flying colors.



Flowers—the perfect gift for all occasions.

Longwood Ladies?

Good food, good service, and good behavior are the ingredients for an all-round well-balanced meal time. The students at Longwood College are in general agreement that the dining hall is a much improved place since the Slater System has been added. Therefore, it is not presumptuous to expect everyone to show their pleasure in the form of courtesy in the dining hall.

Meal time at Longwood is an hour of socializing as well as one of eating. Welcoming or congratulatory song is accepted as good spirit. However, when such a display as that of the October birthday dinner is shown, it is acknowledged as nothing more than immature disrespect. It is truly disgraceful that adults should have to be reprimanded for ill behavior. At the past birthday dinner, some planned a good meal, others planned entertainment, and everyone came well-dressed for the occasion. The atmosphere was as it should be—one of ladylike conduct and proper manners.

No one asks that Longwood students restrain their good spirits. There is more than enough opportunity in school activities to display the traditional cheer and enthusiasm of college life. Meal time is a time to enjoy yourself and others, not a time in which to exhilarate or become irresponsible. It is expected that students show their respect and pleasure for the efforts of others who are trying to make the dining hall a more desirable place for everyone.

As all students realize, there is a time and a place for all behavior. The time of courteous good spirit is certainly applicable to the dining hall. Should ill conduct occur again, immediate steps will have to be taken to correct a situation which should not even exist.

A Commendable Performance

We want to thank the entire student body for the sportsmanship and cooperation displayed during Circus.

Four classes competed for the honor of winning Circus—each knowing that there would be two losers, yet each class working and cooperating to the fullest of their ability.

No one person alone won Circus, the classes that won did so because each and every member of that class worked together toward the goal of winning Circus.

Circus is something that is highly thought of at Longwood College. It has long been a tradition, but has always needed the full support of the entire student body. The members of this year's Circus fully showed that they knew and felt what Circus meant by giving all the support possible.

Sportsmanship prevailed because everyone was overwhelmed with the selection of the winners. The others may have been disappointed, which is only natural, but no hard feelings were displayed in words or in actions.

All of this may not seem to be the important issue but together, sportsmanship and cooperation have added up to only one thing—a successful Circus.

Support Your Colors

As the time for class hockey games draws near, it seems befitting to say a word on behalf of the many class competitions which take place here at Longwood.

Perhaps the newcomer or the outsider is overwhelmed at the tremendous emphasis placed on the rivalry between the classes and between the colors green and white versus red and white. Class color athletic competitions begin right at the start of the year.

All of the competitions are directed towards the winning of the coveted color cup and the displaying of it with the winning colors in the home office for all to see. Much pride is displayed by the winning class for possession of the cup.

The fall tennis singles tournament, which has just been completed, awards five points to the winning color.

Class hockey games contribute ten more valuable points for the triumphant color.

Basketball and volleyball games between the classes pile up ten points each on the cup competition.

Likewise, softball and wisket each collect ten points for the winning class.

Class swimming offers five points to the team which comes out on top.

There you have the nature of the class color athletic competitions. One or the other of the teams will have its colors put on display at the end of the year.

However, unless an attitude of personal, friendly rivalry is taken by each student, both the work and the pride are given to a small group of students and the value of their efforts is practically wasted.

The class competitions constitute one time when the ability of the participants is overshadowed by the amount of participation. It stands to reason that the more people who turn out for their team, the greater the chance of their producing a winner or a winning team.

Everyone can't be an athlete, but everyone can be a good sport—and a good sport supports his team!

In The Mood For Murder? Organize A Complex Club!

JACKIE MARSHALL

Do you feel unwanted, unloved, ugly, and repulsive? Do you? Do you purposefully avoid mirrors in order to gain the satisfaction of shunning your own self? Do you stay in your room contemplating wild ways of hurting, injuring or killing yourself? Buddy, if you do, you're in a bad, bad way!

There's only one way to correct this rather abnormal state of mind. No—, mental institutions don't cure you tizzy teenagers. I'm speaking of little organizations like the "Prevent-Pudginess" clubs or the "Nellie-Nonsmokers" groups whose main purpose is to strive, strive, strive at one goal until it is reached.

I suffered agonizing mental turmoil until one day I was asked to join the Cunninghan Complex Club by President Betsy Welbon. From that day on, I was a new person. I had found something in common with other people.

Never again will I worry about developing muscles in my head to control quivering chin. Never again will my legs madly carry me away from society while I actually yearn to mingle with the young people and hear their lilting laughter. Now, whenever I feel a complex coming on, I immediately run to my door and scream for a call meeting of the Complex Club. Then, my fellow complexes run in and we assure each other that we are all functioning organisms with distinct personality traits. With solemn faces, we shake hands and each goes her own way feeling stable, steadfast, staunch and understood. I still have complex attacks, but they are slowly dwindling down to minor disturbances such as seeing dogs all over the campus and cats in my room. At other times I fancy that I see devils arise out of the prompter's box in Jarman Hall. Other than this, I am a well adjusted young woman. I feel wanted, loved, beautiful and desirable. Every time I pass a mirror, I stop and speak a few words to myself. There's but one thing bothering me—, the other night my roommate moved out! Oh dear, I feel a complex coming on. —Hey, Welbon!

Teacher's Life Spells Change

By SHIRLEY KEMP

I don't suppose you peons have noticed that beaten, haggard expression that many Seniors display these days! Well, if you haven't as of yet, just take notice, kids, 'cause this is only one of the marks of the struggling teacher rank at Longwood College.

Yeah, you can spot a student teacher anytime, anywhere. Those students carrying stacks of books these days are not necessarily the "brains" in this school—they are probably just a student teacher attempting to learn a little more than their pupils already know.

Although they have been at the grind for six weeks, student teachers find that some of the children have great difficulty in remembering their name. Day in and day out it's "Teach" or "Teacher" never Miss—that kind of respect would really be a shock.

In this modern age most teachers, like everyone else, have transportation to and from school by means of some two to four wheeled vehicle. Of course, this doesn't apply to student teachers. Rain, snow or shine their flat little feet take them to and from their four walls plus ceiling or dormitory room.

Been waiting all year for that "special" caller and then what happens . . . you guessed it—P. T. A. meeting. Oh—the mental torture of it all!

To sum it all up — student teaching is really the greatest!

Plays, Classes Mean To Wiley Busy Schedule

By FAY SALMON

To pin down Mr. Wiley, Longwood College's new drama and speech professor, was quite a job. However, after getting the very interesting facts of his life it was well worth the effort.

David Wiley was born in Boston, Massachusetts where he grew up and went to school. He became interested in the theater at an early age. He was exposed to the summer stock when he was a sophomore in high school. He attended Emerson College in Massachusetts where he majored in speech and drama. He pursued those same studies later at Wellesley College in Massachusetts where he acted at the summer school and theater there. He also did radio work and other college drama at Emerson and Wellesley.

After college Mr. Wiley spent two years in the army and he was able to stay most of the time in Europe, including Germany, France, and England.

Since that time he has acted and directed in summer theater work every year. In his long connection with the theater he has done many different things including acting, directing, stage management, and specialized light designing. However, in all that he has done in the theater he prefers directing even above acting for he Tackle John Hodges and End Ronnie Henry, two Hampden-Sydney Tigers recently up for consideration for Little All-American ranking, will start in Saturday's game with the Washington and Lee Generals.

Hampden-Sydney Anticipates Victory In Homecoming Tilt For Twelfth Win; W&L To Provide Stiff Competition

An undefeated Hampden-Sydney football team that now possesses its longest win streak in history, at eleven straight victories, will be looking for their first win in fourteen games with Washington and Lee University when they take on the Generals at Death Valley on Saturday. The game, slated for 2:00, will highlight Hampden-Sydney's Homecoming.

Starting Saturday will be ends Ronnie Henry, and Tommy Lee. Henry is co-captain of the Tigers and along with Tackle John Hodges, is up for Little All-American consideration. Jim Frazer, who matches Hodge's weight of 220 pounds will start at right tackle. John Tigmo and Gene Cooke will get the nod at the guard slots, while the center will be Ed Harlow.

In the backfield will be Jim Smith at quarterback. Tommy Poland and Charlie Denny at the halfbacks, and Bill LeHew at fullback.

The Tigers, now the only unbeaten, untied team in the state will be looking for victory number 12 against a General team that returned to the gridiron this season after a year's absence. Thus far the Lexington aggregation has not won any of the four games played. The General last played Hampden-Sydney in 1946 with the Tigers coming out on the short end of a 41-6 score.

Thus far the Bengals have wins over W. Va. Tech 20-14; Emory & Henry 8-0; Guilford 7-6; Johns Hopkins 19-6; Western Maryland 31-12; and Bridgewater 34-0.

Last week end saw the Eagles of Bridgewater throw up stiff defenses to hold the Tigers to but 14 points in the first three quarters at Bridgewater. The Bengals nally got their offensive rolling and gathered in 20 points to down the Valley eleven decisively.

While the Tigers looked good only in spots, they managed to roll up their best set of statistics yet. Spearheaded by the running of fullback Bill LeHew of Clifton Forge, who had an even 100 yards rushing, the Tigers gathered in 383 yards on total offense. Rushing accounted for 306 yards while 77 came via the air lanes. Defensively the Bengals gave up but 106 yards on the ground.

Spearheading the General's attack will be fullback Alex Platt, a 205 pound junior from Greenwich, Conn. Platt, according to Bengal scouting reports, is a hard runner, and will have to be contained if the Generals are to be stopped.

The Generals should provide the Tigers with their stiffest opposition yet, and eyeing the Washington & Lee record head coach Jim Hickey of Hampden-Sydney says, "Don't let them fool you. They've got a fine looking bunch of ball players, several of whom could play on any team in the state. They'll be plenty tough for us. I just hope that we go out there Saturday and play the type of ball that we've shown we can play."

Dave Brubeck, Choice Of Recent Down Beat Readers' Poll Shatters Popular Misconception of Current Jazz Musicians

Tall, physically powerful, and emotionally intense Dave Brubeck has become the most publicized modern jazzman in the country. His quartet, which also spotlights alto-saxist Paul Desmond in addition to pianist Brubeck, has received many jazz honors in the last two years—including the 1954 DOWN BEAT reader's poll as the finest jazz group of the year.

Brubeck's Columbia Album LPs all been best sellers. His total sales since signing that label in 1954 have even Columbia's executives. And his older albums on the Fantasy label are still doing extremely well.

Dave continues to shatter the usual misconceptions about what a jazz musician is like. For example, the jazz musician is supposed to be a 20th century gypsy who loves to wander and hates the roots of home and community. Brubeck disproves this myth. After saving for years, he recently built a beautifully designed spacious home in Oakland, Calif. He loves to stay home with his family so much, as a matter of fact, that he arranges his bookings so that he spends at least six months of the year in the San Francisco bay area.

Another frequent misconception about jazz musicians is that they have no set goals for the future. Brubeck again is the practical opposite of this. It has been his determined ability to plan and build a career that first led him to study assiduously at the College of the Pacific and, later at Mills College with the renowned French composer, Darius Milhaud.

Although Brubeck himself doesn't often talk about his music, he is sensitive to criticisms and has been hurt at times by magazine articles aimed against him and by the attitude of many jazz musicians who regard him as outside the main tradition of jazz and accuse him of lacking the rhythmic quality of "swing" that is an essential part of the jazz feeling and way of playing.

Brubeck strenuously denies that he lacks "swing" and he regards himself as very much a jazzman, though he realizes that the path he has chosen is a lonely one, one that is strikingly different from that of most of his contemporaries.

Jazz Briefs: Pianist Bud Powell is back on the jazz scene again after several months rest. He recently concluded a successful engagement at New York's Birdland. Incidentally, Bud's young brother, Richie Powell, also plays piano and can be heard with the Max Roach-Clifford Brown quintet . . . A touring package to be billed as the Stan Kenton Jazz Showcase will be on a tour of California colleges and junior colleges. Headliners will be Shelly Manne, Bud Shank, Milt Bernhart, Conte Candoli, and Russ Freeman. Kenton himself will not appear with the group . . . In a recent Down Beat article writer Nat Hentoff complained that jazz coverage by the large-circulation home magazines often has been fallacious. In particular he pointed out the serious errors of emphasis in the Time cover story on Dave Brubeck in which Charlie "Bird" Parker was totally ignored in the historical section of the piece, and Life's photos which viewed the leading jazzman as eerie creatures in a sideshow instead of human beings . . . Trumpter Art Farmer and writer-reedman Gigi Gryce have organized what they hope will be a permanent jazz unit. Members include Art's twin brother, Addison Farmer, on bass and Freddie Reed on piano . . . First rate singing can be heard on the Decca LP from Pete Kelly's Blues (DL 8166) by Ella Fitzgerald and Peggy Lee. Peggy's "Bye, Bye Blackbird" is the most haunting bit of vocalizing in months . . . Lester Young will be filling in for tenor-saxist Stan Getz in the current jazz at the philharmonic troupe. Getz contracted pneumonia while touring Europe and is recovering slowly in a Swedish hospital.

likes it better and feels that he will achieve more success and personal satisfaction in the theater from directing.

He was very prominent in work at the Theater-on-the-Green at Wellesley College. He also helped to found the Route Twenty Players, a theater group in Connecticut. He has appeared in different aspects of television in New York. One of his most interesting experiences was that of going to Puerto Rico with the theater organization, Group Twenty, Inc., which produced classical plays, sponsored by the University of Puerto Rico and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico.

He then began his graduate work for his masters degree in education at the University of Virginia.

He expects to be working on his doctor's degree soon and intends to continue his summer theater work, specializing in directing.

In the meantime, he is very happy with his present work—teaching speech and dramatic art here. He enjoys teaching and is overwhelmed by the warm acceptance he has received here at Longwood College. To quote, "I have only superlative opinions about Longwood College." In addition to the college, Mr. Wiley also likes and thinks highly of Virginia and is very happy and satisfied here.

At the present moment he is by far one of the busiest persons on the campus with the Longwood Players production of Ring Round the Moon soon to be presented. From all reports it promises to be one of the best yet and a good deal of its success will be accredited to Mr. Wiley.

Longwood is happy to welcome Mr. Wiley to the college and wishes him success here and in the future; and for right now we all wish him good luck on Ring Round the Moon.

Vickie Brinkley and James Parker as they will appear tomorrow and Friday nights in "Ring 'Round The Moon."

'Ring 'Round the Moon' Opens Tomorrow Evening At 8 P.M.

By PAT WALTON

Tomorrow night, the curtain will go up on the first production of "Ring 'Round the Moon," directed by David Wiley, drama instructor. This Longwood Players' production will be presented tomorrow and Friday at 8:00 p. m. in Jarman Hall.

This witty play was written by the successful French playwright, Jean Anouilk. Among his other plays are "Cry of the Peacock," "Eurydice," and "Antigone" in which Katherine Cornell appeared several seasons ago.

Christopher Fry, the well-known British poet and wit, translated Anouilk's work. Fry was born in Bristol, England and after completing his schooling, he was a schoolmaster and tutor. Fry then entered the theatrical world and has directed and produced, as well as acted.

Fry has startled the English-speaking world with his modern verse comedies. "The Lady's Not for Burning," "Venus Observed," and "A Phoenix Too Frequent," are only a few examples of his work with brilliant poetry on the the stage. Fry has also made many adaptations of others' works. One of his most recent is "Tiger at the Gates," a current hit on Broadway.

"Ring 'Round the Moon" is not written in verse, but it retains Fry's unique quality. This "charade with music," as Fry calls it, is a delightful comedy. It is the Cinderella-like story of Isabelle, a young ballerina, who is invited to a French chateau. She finds herself involved in a plot that is mysterious, startling and very funny.

At the chateau Isabelle meets some of Fry's most vivid characters. Her hostess, Madame Desmorts, is an addicpated old woman who is eternally philosophizing. Her faithful servant Joshua is a grumbling butler, but he is the precise, well-mannered butler's butler. Another guest at the chateau is Messerschmann. He is one multi-millionaire who does not enjoy his money.

Charles Bailey will appear in the role of Joshua. Hugo will be played by Jimmy Parker and his twin brother, Frederic by Harry Tavarsham. Also appearing will be Fred Stables as Patrice; Russ Vass as Messerchann, George Ogburn as Romainville, and Wade Scott as a general.

Cast as Isabelle is Vickie Brinkley, and Stephanie Settle portrays Diana. Appearing also will be Barbara Burnside as Madame Desmortes, Gloria Kratzch as Lady India, Molly Workman as Capulet, and Anne Brooking as Mother.

Liz Riddle and Nancy Cousins serve as two maids. The female dancers are Octavia Barnes, Cle Koons, and Anita Heflin. Their dancing partners are J. G. Buston, Bob Pence, and Barry Wood.

The director, David Wiley, is a native of Massachusetts and is a newcomer to Longwood. Mr. Wiley has always been in the theater and majored in speech and drama at Emerson College and Wellesley College in Massachusetts. He did his graduate work for a master's degree at the University of Virginia.

The production staff includes Dottie Rector, stage manager, and her assistants, George Ann Reynolds and Patti Billups. Technical director is George Ogburn.

The various chiefs and their crews are: Jane Adams—set construction; Mary Lee Teel—concession stand; Pattie Parker — lighting; Kathy O'Leary—manager of the house; and June Strother—head usher.

Also, Ann Ross—sound; Carolle Silcocx and Nancy Hughes— programs; Jacque Trader—props; Anita Heflin and Harry Lancaster—publicity; Nancy Quarles — tickets; and Mary Mayo—wardrobe.

The final dress rehearsal has been scheduled for tonight. Excitement is high and everyone is careful to obey the unwritten laws of the stage.

According to Anne Brooking, "No longer does the old belief that a bad dress performance insures a good opening, haunt the performer. He is confident of success or failure based upon the effect created throughout the entire rehearsal period.

There will be no whistling backstage and no peeping into the house through the curtains. Not only are these conductive of bad luck, but also, they are decidedly indicative of amateurishness in the theater. Still, there is always the desire to peep at the balcony —to see if there's a ghost. Maybe there will be an appearance by a ghost like the one who always walks at Drury Lane when there's going to be a hit."

Jimmy Parker, like the majority of actors, has a good luck charm, which he carries during the presentation of a play. He found it somewhere in the vicinity of Jarman Hall while acting in one of the Longwood Players' productions. Jimmy cannot reveal the identity of his charm because it will no longer be lucky if someone knows what it is.

Gov't To Sponsor Jackson Combo

The Student Government Association is sponsoring an informal dance Saturday, November 19, in the main rec from 8 p. m. to 12 p. m. Admission will be 25c "stage" or 50c "drag." Tickets will be sold at the entrance.

The main attraction of the dance will be a popular combo from Lynchburg under the direction of Mel Jackson. This popular group has played several times around this area. Mr. Jackson will bring with him a pianist, drums, a sax, and a vocalist.

The decorations will be based around an autumn theme and refreshments will be sold by the Snack Bar, which will be open from 8 p. m. to 11:30.

Italy's Famed Gina Presented Tonight To Local Audience

By ELLA CARTER

"The first chance for U. S. movie-goers to watch Europe's biggest sex mob in an all-out explosive," claims Time magazine, is in the Italian film, "Bread Love, and Dreams" being shown today at the State Theatre as the first of Longwood's Foreign Film Series.

This pleasant Italian - made comedy described in Life as "earthly, sexy, and funny," is distinguished by its star, Gina Lollobrigida. As one critic put it, "throwing herself into the movie and out of her clothes," she won the Silver Ribbon (the Italian Oscar) for her work in this picture.

Gina, cast as a peasant girl named Frisky, provides rich humor as she bounces around the countryside on her donkey. Often appearing in a ragged dress too frail to keep the weather out, Gina falls in love with a local cop (Robert Risso).

The plot is simple. Vittorio De Sica, one of Italy's best actors, is assigned as marshall of the national police to duty in a small Italian village. Casting his roving eye about town, this bachelor spots two means of easing his loneliness: Frisky, a poor farm girl, and the midwife of the village, Marisa Merlin).

Likeable, good-hearted, though not too bright, the marshall who thinks he has attained his eminence in life find it time for him to settle down, find a wife, and raise bambini.

When Frisky gets in a street fight, Chief De Sica takes advantage of his chance and puts her in the cell. Peeping into Frisky's cell, the hopeful marshall is greeted with flashy eyes and an unexpected request. She doesn't want a suitor but only someone to feed her donkey.

With the tint of a fairy tale, the story ends with Frisky getting her man and the marshall settling for the lusty midwife.

The film moves swiftly and cheerfully to a fiesta finale which makes for a musical comedy with its lilting songs and bursting fireworks.

The settings are real. With his camera, Director Luigi Comencini captures the sun-drenched village with the background of the Obruzzi mountains.

Because of the pleasant humor of the plot and the movie's success, it appears to critics that a new vein of national consciousness has been tapped.

The neo-realists tell us in Bread, Love and Dreams" that "This is the way life ought to be." The "bread' as reality is accepted philosophically, but it can be buttered with dreams.

The Saturday Review comments: "Bread, Love and Dreams" is a droll, smiling movie, distinguished by a health and humor all too rare in Italian films today."

Arriving in New York City in October, 1954, when this movie had its premiere, Gina appeared to be a new kind of movie star, although Marilyn Monroe and Ava Gardner were in town at the time. "Bread, Love and Dreams" is the latest picture for this 26 year old actress.

Unlike her Hollywood competitors, Gina has been married one time. Her husband, a Yugoslav doctor in Italy, manages her business affairs. Their principle concern at present is the construction of a villa they are building outside Rome on the Appian Way.

Honesty Here To Stay

Inherent honesty and its place on the Longwood campus has been a topic of much conversation here during the past few days, with perhaps a climax of interest centering on it last Monday night.

The Student Government is to be praised for reviewing the present Honor System at Longwood, and the students are to be praised for expressing their feelings. An airing of ideas and standards that one expects of his fellowman is now and always will be considered the most effective way of solving a problem. The voluntary, impromptu speeches by members of the student body at large certainly helped to emphasize the question that was before the group—"Do You Wish to Keep An Honor System at Longwood?"

It can today be taken for granted that each student here is determined to continue the present system of honor.

The student opinion combined with the closing recitation of the Honor Code should have brought to each mind the seriousness of individual responsibility in regard to the system's operations.

No one organization or one person is infallible. The students' suggestions for improvement of the procedures and operations of the Student Council can well serve as guides to improvement.

Of most significance in regard to improvement, some students asked for protection from slander for those who report dishonorable acts of others. Those with this request feel that too much talk and petty gossip results when one student reports another.

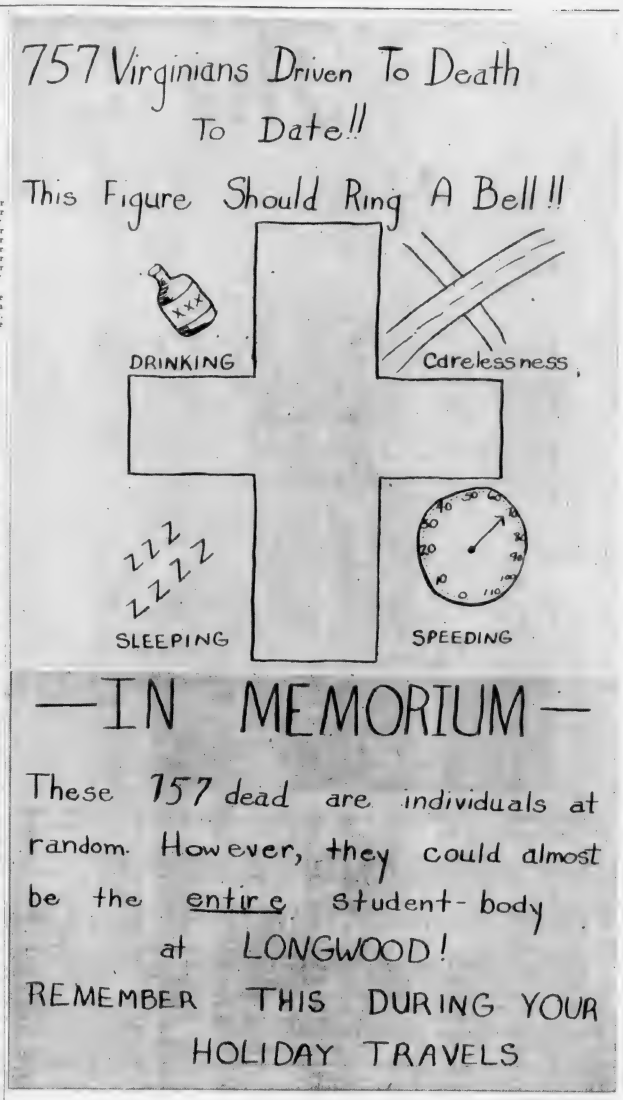
In contrast, many students presented the idea that if a student is "true to her school, herself, and others, she should not need protection." Those with this feeling think that a person who reports another for breaking the Honor Code should be one to be admired rather than talked of maliciously. This latter thought seemed to be the general consensus of opinion if applause can be considered a true measure of ideas.

A question from the floor introduced the matter of signing pledges on tests and exams. At present, the Faculty Handbook "urges" all faculty members to ask for pledges on student work, but as this stands, some follow the request and others do not. This problem was realized at a recent joint meeting of the Student Council and faculty, and plans are underway for the Council to give more definite instructions as to what should be pledged work. A statement as to such would eliminate a great deal of resentment toward some faculty members whom students now feel ask for the pledge because they do not trust their class. Steps for this in black and white would be appreciated by some faculty members as well as by many students.

It was also noted at the joint meeting with the faculty that every member does not refer all cases of dishonesty to the Student Council. Some previous cases, it was realized, have been handled entirely by the professor himself. Action of this type defeats the purpose of the Honor System and shows lack of cooperation and trust in the Council's ability. Perhaps it would be wise for the Council to clarify the faculty's position as to reporting as they have just done for the student body.

In summary, room for improvement by the Council, student body, and faculty has been brought to the limelight, and it now appears that there is a much clearer understanding of each individual's position as a student with inherent honesty.

Contribute Sensibly



Two boxes have been placed in front of the dining hall for the purpose of collecting gifts of nourishing food for families who are less fortunate than we during the Thanksgiving season.

Each student is encouraged to contribute some article of food towards this worthy cause, and it has been the custom in the past to create more enthusiasm for this project by making it a small-scale contest between the class colors. The results, in terms of the quantity of food collected, have been very rewarding.

However the question arises—Has the true purpose of providing much needed and appreciated food for needy families been lost in the rush of color competition? Is the real purpose kept in mind, when filling these boxes?

It is true that people in need are thankful and appreciative of even the smallest contribution, but it is well to keep in mind that when perishable or "luxury" articles are placed in the box, they are of little use to the family several days or a week later. Students should stop and think before contributing candy bars, potato chips, popcorn, and the like to this cause. It satisfies an empty box, but not an empty stomach!

This year, let's concentrate on filling our boxes with more wholesome, nourishing, and needed food articles and afterwards give due recognition to the winning color.

Longwood Contributes Five Players To 1955 Tidewater Reserve Team

Five members of the Longwood hockey team were selected to play on the Tidewater reserve team at the annual Tidewater Hockey Tournament November 4 and 5 in Williamsburg. Lou Wilder, Jane Lohr, Ann Snyder, Patsy Hamner, and Mary Davis were chosen for this honor. These players journeyed to Washington last week end to attend the Southeastern Hockey Tournament, which was held on November 12 and 13.

Eight college and club teams were represented at the tournament in Williamsburg. The Longwood team played its first game on Friday afternoon when it defeated the Norfolk Division of William and Mary by a score of 2-0. Lou Wilder and Mary Davis contributed the two goals of the game.

The Longwood team met defeat, however, in its game on Saturday when it opposed the rugged Little Colonel hockey club, the final score being 4-1. Nancy Richardson made the lone goal for the blue and whites.

The Tidewater Team and the Tidewater Reserve Team selections were announced on Saturday at a luncheon on the William and Mary campus. Lou Wilder was chosen as the Tidewater Reserve Team left halfback; Jane Lohr was placed on the reserve team as center halfback; Ann Snyder received the right fullback position; Patsy Hamner was given the goalie position; and Mary Davis was selected to play left wing. All five of these players have participated in varsity hockey for the four seasons they have been at Longwood, and they were recently honored with the blue and white blazer awards for outstanding athletic achievement.

At the tournament in Washington two teams were chosen to represent Virginia at the Nationals, which will be played in Chambersburg, Pennsylvania during the Thanksgiving holiday. It is interesting that Clara Borum, an alumnae of Longwood, was selected to play on the Virginia team in the National Tournament.

H-S, Beaten Once Closes '55 Season

Once beaten Hampden-Sydney travels Friday for Sewanee, Tennessee, where they close out their 1955 football campaign against The University of the South on Saturday. The Bengals, a flashy aggregation thus far this year, will be putting an 8-1 record on the line as they go against Sewanee, a team who won their first game in two years against Washington and Lee last week 12-0.

Last week saw the Bengals of Death Valley suffer their first defeat in 13 starts spread over a two year span. The Presbyterians failed to live up to pregame predictions of a two touchdown margin of victory as an inspired Randolph-Macon eleven handed them a 7-6 loss.

With the one point margin of victory, went the Mason-Dixon football crown which the Tigers have won for the past two years, and a possible bid to Orlando Florida's famed Tangerine Bowl late December.

The Tigers will be hoping to close their season in proper style Saturday. Last year they took a 14-0 decision from the Tennesseans at Death Valley. To date the two teams have met at Sewanee eight times and on only two occasions have the Death Valley eleven been successful.

The Sewanee-H-S clash will see the Virginians bid farewell to seven seniors, five of whom are currently manning starting berths. Seeing their last action for the Presbyterians will be ends Ronnie Henry of Richmond, and Phil Key of Roanoke; tackle, John Hodges of Waynesville, N. C.; guard, John Tigmo, of Norfolk; quarterback Jim Smith of Hurley; and halfbacks Tom Poland of Herndon, and Sonny Sommardahl of Roanoke. All are lettermen.

Swim Lengths To Add Miles!

A new swimming event is being sponsored by H20 as a part of the annual color swimming meet which is held each spring. This event is called "Swimming Around the World," and it is the only event which does not depend on speed and endurance at the actual time of the swimming meet.

The competition begins tonight at 10:00 and will end at the close of the swimming meet, when the winner will be announced. This event will be scored in the same way as the other seven events in the competition—five points for the first place winner, three points for second place, two points for third place, and one point for the fourth place. The winning color of the entire swimming meet will be awarded five points towards the color cup.

The main object of "Swimming Around the World" is swimming lengths of the pool. Anyone may participate and swim lengths at any time during the rec swims and lifeguards will be on hand to help count the number of lengths each girl swims.

A large map of the world is posted near the pool to keep track of the individual scores. A ribbon of green and a ribbon of red represents the distances around the world. Each participator is given a pin and each length contributes mileage to the total distance.

For futrher information, rules are posted near the swimming pool.

Barbara Odom, library science major from Suffolk, was elected president of the Freshman Class last night.

Elected to the positions of student government representatives were Weedie Norman of Richmond, and Minnie Lee Dean of Radford.

The Freshman Class will complete their elections tonight at 10 p. m.

Columbus Boychoir Returns to College For Second Artist Series Appearance

The Columbus Boychoir will return here November 29 for their second performance at the college marking the first event in the 1955 Artist's Series for Longwood. The concert will be held in Jarman Auditorium at 8 p. m. This seventy-voice group which made such a hit at its last performance in Farmville is known from coast-to-coast, not only for its musical ability and voice harmony, but for the citizenship and good will they promote. The program, directed by the founder, Herbert Huffman, will include choral music, folk songs, Negro spirituals, and boogie-woogie type songs. The Boychoir, whose headquarters are in Princeton, New Jersey, offers a complete academic course plus excellent musical training for its young members. The buses they use on tours are equipped with desks and other materials to enable them to study between concerts. The boys range in age from seven to fourteen.

Longwood students not only remember the Boychoir for its concert in Jarman Hall but also for its impromptu singing from the hotel windows later that same evening.

Four Professors Plan Varied Trips

Dr. Earl Boggs, dean of the summer session; Dr. George W. Jeffers, professor of biology; Dr. R. C. Simonini, Jr., professor of English; and Dr. Richard K. Meeker, assistant professor of English, plan to attend educational meetings being held during the latter part of this month.

Dr. Boggs will attend a meeting of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools to be held in Miami, Florida during the last week in November. Since it is understood that standards for graduate work will be discussed at this meeting, Dr. Boggs was selected to attend as secretary of Longwood's Graduate Council. The president of Longwood's Graduate Council will be attending another meeting.

Dr. Jeffers plans to attend the Sixth Thomas Alva Edison Institute in East Orange, New Jersey on November 21, 22.

Dr. Simonini will be present at the convention of the National Council of Teachers of English to attend meetings of the Board of Directors and various committee meetings. This convention is being held in New York City on November 24, 25, 26.

Dr. Meeker will be in Daytona Beach, Florida on November 25, 26 attending the South Atlantic Modern Language Association meeting. Dr. Meeker will serve on a panel to discuss reading problems found in the freshman English course.

'Silver Rhapsody' Dance To Feature Skyliners, Traditional Class Figure

Nichols To Preside As "Little Sister" During Festivities

By BETSY WELBON

'Tis the big dance weekend! Get your man, buy your ticket, and dance to the music of the Skyliners in a Silver Rhapsody world.

Yes, the weekend is only hours away and Barbara Mays, chairman of Senior Dance, has announced to the student body of Longwood College that the decorations will follow up the theme of Silver Rhapsody. Jane Blake Lawrence and her decorating committee have been creating balls, bridges and stars to complement the lovely music of the Skyliners.

Figure Planned

The highlight of the evening will come when the seniors in their white gowns escorted by their dates will form the traditional figure.

The Honorary Class member elected last year is Mrs. Nancy Tanley Masters, who now resides in Richmond. Nancy will arrive Saturday to be honored by and to honor the Senior Class.

Marodith Nichols

Also to take part in the festivities will be the honorary little sister of the Senior Class, Marodith Nichols, a Sophomore from Richmond. Marodith will distribute the dance favors among her senior big sisters.

To complete the evening, a combo party for the seniors will be held at Longwood Estate from midnight until 2 A. M.

Tickets for the dance are $2.50 and everyone is urged to come to the big dance of the year. Remember —, the time is eight o'clock, December 10; the place is ye olde gymnasium; and the characters participating are invited to be you!

HONORARY LITTLE SISTER

Water Production To Get Underway Tomorrow At Five

The audience is tense, the lights are lowered, the swimmers glide into the water and the 1955 Water Pageant is underway. This year the H2O Club has chosen "Carols by Candlelight" as the theme for Longwood's traditional aquatic celebration to be held on December 8 and 9.

Eight numbers will highlight the program, which has been planned entirely around this religious theme. The swimmers will portray eight carols and will be led off in proper fashion by H2O Club members with the perfect candlelit background, "Silent Night."

The synchronized swimming will steal the brightest spotlight as these advanced people present their versions of the well-known carols "Ave Maria," "We Three Kings," and "While Shepherds Watched Their Flocks by Night". Special mention goes to Mary Ann Barnett, Loretta Kuhn, Nancy Richardson, and Jeanette Stinson. Also Frances Patton, Betsy Richardson, Nancy Striplin, Charlotte Chadwick, Inez Crump, Anne DeAlba, Sandra Fitzgerald, Joan Hearyside, and Ruth Looper.

Working as committee chairmen for the pageant are Patsy Hamner on props, Anne Snyder on publicity, and Jackie Pond on costumes.

Freshmen Collect Longwood History

By PATSY POWELL

Freshman Orientation classes have initiated a new project. This year each section of Education 100 will contribute two students, recommeneded by the English Department, to a group, which will prepare a history of Longwood College.

Previously the English Department has not assisted in this study. According to Miss Gleaves, the reason for this new approach is that the College is eager to get as complete a history of Longwood as is possible. Because Longwood dates back as far as 1839, there is much about the school's history that is not known.

Hoping to solve these unanswered questions, the group is beginning research on such subjects as the founding of the college, its early history, early presidents, Longwood traditions, and the architecture and physical plant. They will also discuss Longwood "firsts," notable teachers, scholars, and alumnae that have been connected with the college, and Longwood Estate.

'Y' Plans To Present Traditional Pageant Dec. 14 In Jarman Hall

The annual Christmas pageant of the Longwood YWCA will be presented in Jarman Hall, Wednesday, December 14, at 10:30 p. m., announced Lucia Hart, program chairman.

This pageant will tell the story of the birth of Christ, as portrayed by a member of the senior class.

As is traditional, Longwood students will vote for a senior to portray the Virgin Mary. The identity of the girl selected will not be revealed until the night of the pageant.

Jane Adams has been selected as nararor for the performance which will be staged in pantomime to Scriptures and Christmas carols.

Richmond Students Receive Invitation To Apply For Good-Will Trips Aboard

Richmond area students at Longwood have been invited to apply for an all-expense paid trip to the country of their choice next summer by writing now to the Richmond Community Ambassador Project, accordingt o Miss Mary V. Williams, president of the local chapter of the nationwide Ambassador program.

January 30, 1956, has been set as the deadline for applications from Richmond area youths for the good-will trips abroad. Applications can be obtained from Miss Elizabeth Angle, secretary, Richmond Community Ambassador Project, 521 N. Belmont Avenue, Richmond.

The project, administered by the Experiment in International Living, Inc., of Putney, Vermont, is financed by contributions from Richmond civic organizations, individuals and industries.

Applicants must live in the Richmond metropolitan area, be high school graduates in the upper third of their class (June, 1956 graduates are also eligible), and be between the ages of 17 and 30.

Designed to promote international peace and understanding through living together, the project has a two-fold purpose. The Community Ambassador represents his community to the foreign people and brings back their customs and ideas to the people of Richmond. While abroad, he writes weekly newsletters to the local group, and, on returning home, reports directly in speeches

The Richmond Community Ambassador Project, organized in November, 1953, is a group of citizens, representing Richmond's civic and educational organizations which raise the funds and select outstanding young men and women from Richmond to represent them in a community in a foreign country. The ambassador's mission is tow-fold: he represents the people of Richmond and our way of life to his new friends and community abroad; and shares his experiences in his adopted community and country with the people of Richmond. Thus, Richmond is bringing international affairs into its own backyard—becoming the next door neighbor of a town across the globe.

Richmond is one of the more than fifty United States cities, sponsoring this project under the Experiment in International Living, a non-profit educational institution, founded in 1932, and with heaqaurters in Putney, Vermont. Under the Experiment's plan, young adults go to another country in groups of ten, each with a trained leader, to spend a month living as members of separate families having young members. Then, during the following month the visitors and their counterparts from the families take an inexpensive trip to other regions of the country, stopping along the way to explore points of economic, historic, political and cultural significance.

Newton To Install President Lankford In Monday Service

FRANCIS G. LANKFORD, JR.

COLGATE DARDEN

Darden To Deliver Inaugural Address For 6th President

Dr. Francis G. Lankford, Jr., will be inaugurated as president of Longwood College in ceremonies in Joseph L. Jarman auditorium at 2 p. m., Monday. He will be the sixth president of the state college and the sixteenth person to head the institution since it was founded as the Farmville Female Seminary in 1839.

The inaugural address will be delivered by President Colgate Darden of the University of Virginia and Dr. Lankford will be presented by Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, president emeritus of Longwood College. The Investiture will be made by Blake T. Newton, chairman of the State Board of Education.

Governor's Greetings

President J. Earl Moreland of Randolph-Macon College will deliver the invocation and Dr. Howell J. Howard, State Superintendent of Public Instruction will present a salutation from Governor Stanley.

Twenty other college presidents will march in the academic procession to Jarman Hall and a total of 38 colleges and universities in Virginia, Maryland, and North Carolina will be represented at the ceremonies. A special guest luncheon has been planned to precede the services and a reception will be held for the faculty and administration and invited guests in the Rotunda at 4 p. m.

Dr. Lankford succeeded Dr. Lancaster as president of Longwood July 1. An authority on the teaching of mathematics, Dr. Lankford had been a professor at the University of Virginia for 24 years except for brief leaves of absence.

Research Director

As director of educational research at the University of Virginia in addition to his teaching duties, Dr. Lankford served as a consultant for both city and county schools throughout the state. He recently completed a two-year research project on experimental methods of teaching arithmetic in elementary schools.

Dr. Lankford has also taught at the University of Michigan, Harvard University, and the University of Texas. He has been director of research for the Richmond City School and principal of the Heathsville High School.

He holds the B. S. degree from Randolph-Macon College and M. S. and Ph. D. degrees from the University of Virginia. He has also done post-doctoral work as a General Education Board Fellow at the University of Michigan and is a member of Phi Beta Kappa.

Longwood's history has undergone many changes since its first president was inaugurated. The original Farmville Female Seminary was followed in 1860 by the Farmville Female College. In 1875 the school came under the sponsorship of the Methodist Conference at the Farmville College.

The Commonwealth of Virginia inverted it into the first educational institution in the state for the preparation of white teachers in 1884.

Prayers Bring Special Spirit

Prayers will be held in the Methodist Church the week of December 12 in hopes that all students will attend the short, pre-Christmas devotionals. The theme for the week's program will be "Prayers at Christmas," announced Barbara Mays, YWCA Prayers Committee chairman.

Carolyn Gray will begin the week with the reading of "The Littlest Angel." Other speakers during the week will be Miss Lucile Peake, Dottie Rector, and Georgia Jackson. Two solos, a trio and a choir will be featured at different times during the week.

Education Group Bids Twelve LC Students

Anne Jones, president of Kappa Delta Pi, has announced that twelve upper-classmen have accepted invitations to join the organization.

Sad Sophs

The population of Longwood's campus wishes to congratulate the Sophomore class for its patience in the unavoidable misfortune concerning the lack of a complete set of bedroom furniture and to encourage the further display of good sportsmanship until this condition is corrected.

It is an obvious inconvenience and, in cases, it is a hindrance to normal dormitory life. Some degree of restlessness is understood from those class members involved.

Though it has been an oft-stated excuse and has probably lost most of its pacifying quality, the fact that the college administration is doing everything in its power to bring the furniture to you must be repeated. The modern modes of communication are wondrous things but in this case, even they are unable to rise over the stumbling block of a long-distance mixup in orders.

If the Sophomores will only continue to show such good grace as they have in the past, it will be greatly appreciated by those who are as much distressed and more embarrassed than are the Sophs.

Keep your chins up, your gripes down, your bare rooms tidy, and if you're good—who knows? Maybe Santa will have some pull with this slow motion furniture industry.

Congratulations

Dear Editor,

Each year at Thanksgiving it has been the custom of the YWCA to sponsor the boxes of food which are donated to the local welfare. Certainly there is no more appropriate time than this season when each of us who enjoys such plenty to recognize the extreme need of so many people just in our own "back yards" and to give so generously to these people.

It was wonderful to see the tremendous amount of food that was brought this year, and thanks go to each girl who donated any one thing to these boxes. I think that the Freshmen and Juniors are to be especially commended for their excellent contribution.

I sincerely hope that each Thanksgiving to come will find Longwood girls as eager and willing to remember needy people and to fill even more boxes to overflowing.

Georgia Jackson

Slip of the Pen

Dear Editor,

Our red faces are showing!

After reading the past issue of The Colonnade we had two very surprised readers—one Dorothy Anne Thomas, who wrote "The Ugly Duckling," and one Ann White Thomas, who did not. As you probably know by now we have the wrong name by the story. This slight slip of the pen was quite shocking to them, we're sure, and most embarrassing to us!

Apologies are quite in order for Dorothy Anne Thomas, and offering many at this time, we leave you this thought, "to err is human."

Two most distressed co-editors,
Molly Ann Harvey
Margaret Miller

Madonna Qualities

On behalf of the Y. W. C. A., the Rotunday staff requests that each student who votes tomorrow for the 1955 Pageant Madonna will carefully consider only girls who have the qualities that most nearly represent those of the Blessed Virgin.

Physical beauty, as we all should know, is only skin deep, but beauty of character shows through every thought, word, and deed. Because Mary possessed these attributes, she was called by the angel who said, "Hail thou that art highly favoured, the Lord is with thee: Blessed are thou among women"—Luke 1:28.

There are those who possess these most virtuous qualities of womanhood—purity, compassion, sincerity, humility, friendliness, unselfish service to others and courage to maintain high standards and inspire them in others.

Before voting, review these qualities in reference to your nominee. Such women are among you—they are the ones who deserve this honor!

Where's Our Ring?

What has happened to Longwood's official college ring?

Schools throughout the country have rings symbolizing the completion of education in those particular institutions. There are various degrees of significance placed on possession of a ring of the Alma Mater.

In some schools, the ring is traditional through the years and is ceremoniously awarded and proudly worn by students. This system, by the way, is followed at Mary Washington College.

In other schools, the ring is purchased at the students' discretion. Although proudly worn, there isn't the same satisfaction of ownership as there is in the previously mentioned schools.

Then there is Longwood! We, the members of the Rotunda staff, have been thinking of this school, its many traditions and symbols—Circus, Color Rush, Productions, Junior and Senior dances, and serenades. All of these are faithfully supported throughout the years.

Therefore, why is our ring the only outstanding symbol of Longwood that we do not emphasize?

Yes, we're burdened by many minor and major expenses, but a college ring is worth more than the words "another expense" imply. In a school such as ours, tradition, pride, and institutional loyalty would be symbolized in the college official gold and onyx ring. It is now, and for several years has been, available at Martin the eweler. There are two sizes that cost less or are comparable with the price each of us paid for our high schools rings—$17.60 (small) and $19.80 (large) including tax! Certainly, we should feel that our college ring is equal in value to that of our high school ring.

Well, 'twas just a question brought to mind, and we felt the need to inquire about it.

What are your ideas as students and future alumnae?

Perhaps the Seniors of '56 would be interested in establishing a ring service prior to graduation, for example, Class Day.

Placement Bureau Reports Activities

A report recently released from the Longwood Placement Bureau reveals that last year, representatives from twenty-four counties and sixteen cities in Virginia visited the college to interview prospective teachers. Representatives from three other states, Maryland, North Carolina, and Pennsylvania, also talked with seniors. Assistance in locating qualified teachers was requested by Superintendents from many Virginia counties and cities, and from twenty-five other states. Nicaragua and the overseas Recruitment also requested this service.

Seniors filled many positions in the county schools with no one county claiming a large majority. Roanoke led the way in city placements with Warwick, Alexandria, and Danville following closely behind. Five seniors accepted teaching positions outside of the state.

This report is filed yearly as a summary of the Bureau's past activities.

REHEARSAL TIME FOR EL CLUB ESPANOL

French and Spanish Classes To Present Yule Traditions

By JEANNE SAUNDERS

Christmastime is drawing nearer and nearer—15 more shopping days! And the whole school has become a beehive of activity . . . practicing, decorating, designing, planning for the gala holiday events. What better way could the festivities be started than by the traditional celebration of the French and Spanish Clubs, to be held this year, beginning at 8:00, on December 9, in the main rec.

Mary Jo Hutchinson, president of El Club Espanol, Gale Branch, president of Le Cercle Francais, Genevieve Joatton, French informant, and Miki Duarte, Spanish informant, will welcome the guests and explain the numbers on the program. Selections presented by the two clubs will alternate on the program.

The Mexicans begin their celebration of Christmas on the night of December 16, with the traditional Posadas. For nine nights, groups of friends re-enact the journey of Mary and Joseph to Bethlehem and their search for lodging. Going to a different friend's home each night, they sing "Les Posadas" upon arriving at the host's house. The arriving guests are answered in song by the family and there is great rejoicing.

Among the dances of the Christmas season is "El Sique," or tortilla dance, under the direction of Celina Leon-Gomez from Honduras. Others include "El Marenque" done by the Spanish class 321, under the direction of Daphne Arango from the Dominican Republic, and Las Jicaras," a fascinating tray dance under the direction of Miki Duarte from Mexico City. These three students will terminate the dances with their interpretation of "Malaguena."

Among the Christmas songs that the Spanish students will sing are "Alegria," "Oh Santisimo," and "Pastores a Belen".

Traditional in the Spanish speaking countries is the custom of eating twelve grapes with the twelve strokes of the clock on New Year's Eve, and Spanish children receive their gifts, not on Christmas Day, but on January 6, the day on which the Three Wise Men reached Bethlehem bearing their gifts to the Christ Child. The children write letters to Gaspar, Melchor, and Baltasar, on the eve of the Three Kings Day, requesting the things they want. Like children everywhere they are eager to go to bed so that the kings will come quickly. They leave corn, grass and water for the camels in boxes, which the kings are to fill with presents.

No celebration will be complete without the traditional pinata. Pinatas are usually decorated clay jugs filled with all sorts of candy and nuts.

The French class 221 will open the celebration of their Fete with a short legend revolving around an incident in the life of Saint Martin. James Parker will portray the beloved saint who, as a soldier in the Galla-Roman army, slashed his cloak in two to cover a shivering beggar.

Long ago in the French provinces, the peasants, to celebrate the Christmas Season, would mold small figures from clay portraying the Christmas Story — Mary, Joseph, the shepherds, the Wise Men. Today French artists carve figures representing not only the Holy family but the French people themselves in every walk of life.

As time went on it became the tradition for each individual family to have its own box of these figures called Santons, meaning little saints, which are made especially in Provence and Marseilles. Forty days before Christmas, Marseilles formerly opens the holiday season as she begins the sale of her now famous Santons in her market stalls.

This Friday night the students of LeCercle Francaise will portray the various characters bringing the Santons to life to sing some old French Christmas carols. They will gather in a little symbolic stable and sing to praise the birth of the Christ Child—just as all French people do in small churches or old cathedrals at Midnight Mass on Christmas Eve.

A peasant dance of Old Provence by the beginning French class and more carol singing by all the French students will celebrate the joyousness of the season in dance and song.

In France, as in the United States, Santa Claus brings presents for the children on Christmas Eve night. Dottie Rector will bring the Fete to a fitting climax when she arrives late bringing refreshments.

Special mention goes to Jeanette Morris and Suzanne Faison, as song director and program chairman, respectively, for the Fiesta. Le Cercle Francais thanks Virginia Cowles, program chairman, Betsy Welbon, head of songs and Nancy Lenz, head of props.

Hampden-Sydney Football Players, Henry and Hodges, Named Candidates For '55 Little All-American Selections

Two Hampden-Sydney football players, Ronnie Henry and John Hodges, have recently been named as candidates for the Little All-American selection.

Ronnie, a 24 year old Senior from Richmond, has played football for seven years. He plays the end position.

In 1948, he entered John Marshall High School in Richmond. Ronnie went out for varsity football under Coach Jim Hickey, who later became his coach at Hampden-Sydney College. He did not make the first eleven, but saw much reserve duty in 1949. He landed starting flank role in 1950 and started every game during the season. Henry received letters in football and track, as well as landing a berth on the basketball squad. Again, in 1951, he started all games at end. He received letters in football, basketball and track. He was named to the first All-City football team, and was voted to the second team All-State Group 1 football team.

In 1952, he followed his old coach, Jim Hickey, to Hampden-Sydney, and as a freshman won a starting berth. He started all games, and played at least 50 minutes in each. Ronnie won letters as a freshman, and was named to the first team of the All-Little Seven at the sason's end. He started all games for the second consecutive year. He, again won letters and was named to the first team of the All-Little Seven. Henry was a big man in helping the Tigers to their first Mason-Dixon Conference football title as well as the Little Seven title. He helped the Tigers win their second consecutive Mason-Dixon Championship in 1954 and won a letter for the third time. He was again named to the All-Little Seven first team and set himself up as possibly the only player other than his teammate, Stokeley Fulton, to be accorded the honor four times. In 1955, Henry was picked by teammates to be the team Co-Captain. He was listed by Fred Russell in his "Saturday Evening Post" 1955 Pigskin Preview as one of the South's outstanding linemen to watch in '55.

Hodges Candidate

John, a twenty-four year old senior from Waynesville, North Carolina, has played a total of eleven years in football. He plays the position of tackle.

In 1945 he entered Lenoir City High School in Tennessee and played his first year of football at tackle. He won a football monogram as a freshman, under Coach Roy Harmon, who now coaches at Carson-Newman. In 1946 and 1947 he again won letters. In 1948 he was chosen co-captain of the fine Lenoir City team which was chosen to play in the Lions Bowl at Athens, Tennessee. He was again awarded a letter and the team blocking trophy for his fine work in this department.

In 1950 he entered Hampden-Sydney College under Coach Morgan Tiller, and as a freshman saw plenty of reserve duty and won a monogram. He won a starting berth under Coach Jim Hickey in 1951, and at the season's end was named to the Virginia All-Little Seven 2nd team. He won a letter for the second time. As a junior he helped the Tigers to a 5-3-1 season. He was named to the first team of the Virginia All Little Seven, and also as captain of the star group. He was named to the honorable mention berth on the Associated Press' Little All American. He left Hampden-Sydney at mid-term to enter the U. S. Marine Corps.

He saw starting duty and letters with Jacksonville, Florida, Marine Air Station in 1953. In 1954 Hodges started for Cherry Point, North Carolina Marine Air Station and again received letters.

John returned to Hampden-Sydney after a two year Marine hitch

Dr. Boggs, who has served as educational consultant for Roanoke City Schools since 1950, assisted Superintendent E. W. Rushton, the administrative directors and the co-ordinator of Research, November 18, at Longwood House in summarizing a list of problems submitted by 800 teachers in Roanoke City. This list will be the basis for the mid-year conference on evaluation in Roanoke City in January, 1956.

The University of Virginia Research Council of Superintendents of the Petersburg area, with Dr. A. M. Jarman, Professor of School Administration of the University, their consultant, spent November 21, at Longwood House in a business and professional session. Colgate W. Darden, Jr., Francis G. Lankford, Jr., and Dabney S. Lancaster chat following Dr. Lankford's inauguration as Longwood's sixth president.

Dr. Lankford Presents Personal Views On Current Va. Educational Problems

The inaugural exercises investing Dr. Francis G. Lankford, Jr., as the sixth president of Longwood College were held on Monday at 2 p. m. in Joseph L. Jarman Auditorium.

In his acceptance speech, Dr. Lankford brought forth his views on current educational issues. "What the public will decree we shall have. Longwood College will stand ready to help make those schools as effective as possible." Dr. Lankford said. "No institution for the preparation of teachers can divorce itself from the schools in which its graduates will teach," added the new president. He stated that he intends to maintain the academic standards, student spirit, and faculty of the institution.

The ceremony began with the academic procession led by T. A. McCorkle, Faculty Marshall. Next in order were the President of the College and his party followed by members of the State Board of Education. Delegates from Academic Institutions and Associations, walking in order according to the founding date of their institutions, preceded the faculty and administration of the College. Officers of the Association of Alumnae, followed by the student class presidents and the Senior Class, concluded the procession.

Presiding throughout the ceremonies, Dr. R. C. Simonini, Jr., introduced, President J. Earl Moreland of Randolph - Macon College who delivered the invocation.

The College Choir, under the direction of Dr. John W. Molnar, offered two selections, 'Grant Me True Courage, Lord" and "Blessed Are They Who Dwell in Thy House."

President Colgate W. Darden, Jr., of the University of Virginia, delivered the inaugural address, stressing that "Longwood could not be dedicated to a higher purpose" since the Government of the Western World would die with the death of either Education or the Church.

Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, President-Emeritus of Longwood, in presenting Dr. Lankford, spoke of his devotion to his friends in Farmville, the faculty, and students of Longwood College and expressed his best wishes to Dr. Lankford for his ensuing term of office. Dr. Lancaster also expressed "confidence in the future of this college under his (Lankford) direction."

Investiture was made by Blake T. Newton, President of the State Board of Education.

Greetings sent from Academic Institutions and Asociations in Virginia and Maryland were read by Dr. Simonini, and Dowell J. Howard, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, gave the salutation from the Commonwealth of Virginia in behalf of Governor Thomas B. Stanley.

After the singing of the Alma Mater, the recessional concluded the service.

Lancaster Named Referendum Facts Campaign Leader

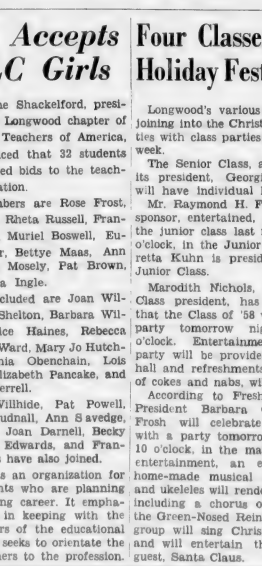
Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, former Virginia superintendent of public instructions and for nine years president of Longwood College, was appointed by Governor Stanley Friday to direct the statewide campaign for an affirmative vote in the January 9 referendum.

Now the president emeritus of Longwood College, Dr. Lancaster will direct the concentrated campaign from the Richmond headquarters of the State Referendum Information Center.

Heart of the new task given Dr. Lancaster will be to channel factual information on the proposed constitutional amendment to the voters. The informational campaign will be designed to permit them to understand the problems before reaching a decision on January 9.

On that date, they will vote on whether or not to sanction a constiutional convention to meet for the express purpose of amending Section 141 of the State Constitution. That section now prohibits the use of public funds in support of private schools.

The revision of Section 141 if approved would permit grants to individuals for schooling if their localities closed schools rather than finance integrated ones. It would permit the same individual grants to those objecting to attending an integrated school.



Freshmen Present Traditional Dinner

With a "Christmas Bell" theme, Freshman Commission again entertained at Longwood's annual Christmas banquet held last night. Jane Moore introduced the program with an original song. After a selection of violin music, Carol Wolfe closed the program by singing "O Holy Night."

After dinner the Freshman Commission in white dresses and carrying candles led the student body in the annual Hanging of the Greens and singing of Christmas carols.

The menu for the banquet included shrimp cocktail, filet mignon, mushroom caps, pommes alumette, asparagus casserole, Bing cherry salad with mayonnaise, hot rolls, and coffee. For dessert a traditional plum pudding with hard sauce was served.

Students Elect Gray Madonna For Annual Christmas Pageant

CAROLYN GRAY, 1955 MADONNA

Traditional Scenes Plus Choral Music Highlight Program

By ELLA CARTER

Carolyn Gray portrayed the role of Madonna this evening at the annual Christmas Pageant given by the YWCA of Longwood College.

A senior from Chester, Carolyn received this honor by the selection of the student body who saw in her the qualities characteristic of the Virgin Mary.

The pageant was staged in pantomime to Scriptures and Christmas carols. With narration by Jane Adams, the pageant consisted of six scenes which presented the Angel Gabriel who appeared to Mary, Mary and Joseph's Journey to Bethlehem, the Birth of Jesus, Angels who told the Shepherds of the Birth of Jesus, and the Shepherds and Wise Men who came to view the Child.

Soloists were Gay Allen and Carol Wolfe who sang "O Come, O Come Emanuel" and "O Holy Night," respectively. The traditional Christmas carols were sung by a choir of Baptist and Methodist students.

Mary in the play was portrayed by Anita Heflin until the last scene when Carolyn appeared in the role. The cast was as follows: Mary, Anita Heflin; Gabriel, Marcie Koons; angels accompanying Gabriel, Anne Crosby, Eleanor Morehead; Joseph, Mary Lee Teel; angels, Jane T. Adams, Cornelia Batte, Betty Bowles, Jackie Haller, Jeanette Puckett; shepherds, Linda Allen, Frances Beck, Mary Moore, Anne Presson, Carolyn Stonnell; wise men, Virlinda Joyner, Elizabeth Nelson, Rebecca Parker.

Lucia Hart served as director. Other students who helped to make this pageant possible were the committee chairmen: Cornelia Anne Batte, Janet Lloyd, Carole Stroupe, Kate Krehbiel, Jane Adams, Amanda Dillon, Dottie Rector, Mary Lee Teel, and Linda Allen. Organist was Mary Ellen Hawthorne; choir director was Mary Ann Wright.

The traditional White Christmas offering was received following the performance.

Four Classes Plan Holiday Festivities

Longwood's various classes are joining into the Christmas festivities with class parties during this week.

The Senior Class, according to its president, Georgia Jackson, will have individual hall parties.

Mr. Raymond H. French, class sponsor, entertained, in honor of the junior class last night, at 10 o'clock, in the Junior parlor. Loretta Kuhn is president of the Junior Class.

Marodith Nichols, Sophomore Class president, has announced that the Class of '58 will have its party tomorrow night at 10 o'clock. Entertainment for the party will be provided by each hall and refreshments, consisting of cokes and nabs, will be served.

According to Freshman Class President Barbara Odom, the Frosh will celebrate Christmas with a party tomorrow night, at 10 o'clock, in the main Rec. For entertainment, an ensemble of home-made musical instruments and ukeleles will render selections including a chorus of "Rudolph the Green-Nosed Reindeer." The group will sing Christmas carols and will entertain their special guest, Santa Claus.

Board of Education Endorses Longwood Application For Lease of Kerr Dam Property

The State Board of Education yesterday endorsed an application of Longwood College for the licensing of Federal property within the Reservoir of John A. Kerr Dam. The application is now being filed with the Corps of Engineers, of the United States Army, Norfolk District, Norfolk, Virginia, for final approval.

If approved, the College will use this property in the area better known as Bugg's Island Dam, for recreational purposes.

The formal application begins by stating Longwood's purpose as a State college for training teachers, and continues by noting how the College plans to use the land.

After a brief technical location of the desired property, history of the organization of Longwood, and a statement of the present enrollment, administration, and Reservoir Project Committee, the application begins to present points in favor of granting the license to Longwood.

The following is a re-print of the points presented:

"Present Facilities—The present recreational facilities of the College are restricted by virtue of the fact that the campus is located in the heart of the town of Farmville, with very little room for expansion.

The College lacks facilities for bringing together large groups (alumnae, reunion and present classes, conferences, retreats, etc.) Our seniors, for example, are now obliged to select one of the public lakes in neighboring counties for their Field Day. There exists no adequate area where the College family can meet as a unit with any degree of privacy, where can be cultivated a sense of unity, and where can be initiated a coordinated approach to a major project in athletics, nature study and the like.

Specific Uses.—It is proposed to develop the property into a year-round multi-purpose recreational area to serve the entire institution and the public served by the institution.

1.—Student Use.—When fully developed the entire freshman class could be brought to the Camp for Orientation Week before the opening of school rather than having them come to the College as at present. In such a setting the problems of adjustment and acquaintanceship could be resolved more readily and with less effort than at present.

The Senior Class would welcome such an area for the Annual Field Day.

Sororities, clubs, and teams could use the area for recreation and for "mellowing."

2. Faculty Use.—More and more colleges are resorting to the Faculty Retreat as a device to get acquainted as well as to work on essential projects requiring coordinated effort, such as curriculum revision. Here study, fellowship, and recreation could be happily combined.

With the erection of "cabins," it would become a place where faculty families could spend vacations and week-ends, with opportunity for sports (fishing and hunting) and for rest and study.

3. Departmental Use.—To ensure participation we propose to enlarge the present committee to include representation from every department of the College. Several departments (art and geography, for example) have already suggested how their classes could combine recreation and the environmental approach to education. Athletic squads would be taken there for conditioning and concentrated practice. Coaching schools for specific skills could be held there without too close adherence to "skull" sessions.

Perhaps the most promising project would be the establishment of summer camps for children. Besides being a source of income for development, such camps, operated by students but under faculty direction, would provide a helpful experience in further preparation for teaching, and specifically for teacher training in public recreation.

4. Alumnae and Friends of the College.—Some of the state, regional and national conferences and conventions that are now attracted to the campus could, in time, be diverted to the camp area. Certainly, some of the growing number of summer work conferences for teachers would find such an area more attractive than a town campus.

Longwood College has this year contrated with the Slater System, a food services corporation of Philadelphia, for servicing the College's dining rooms. Hence, we are in position to feed large numbers away from the campus without endangering health.

Anticipated Development. — Without technical assistance such as could be provided by a landscape architect, the plan of development outlined below must be regarded as tentative only.

It is proposed to develop the area in two stages: temporary and permanent. The temporary development would be concentrated near the entrance to the property, which later would become the

Santa For Eternity

It's not necessary to be a future parent or teacher to find a message in the following famous letter to Virginia. Any lover of childhood faith and fantasy will always reread the following words of wisdom written by Charles Dana, editor of the New York Sun in 1897.

The lines of print may be directed to a disillusioned child of eight years, but you, too, may find in this letter some food for thought if you carefully read between the lines.

"Dear Editor,

I am 8 years old. Some of my friends say there is no Santa Claus. Papa says if you see it in the Sun, it is so. Please tell me the truth, is there a Santa Claus?

Virginia"

"Dear Virginia,

Your little friends are wrong. They have been affected by the skepticism of a skeptical age. They do not believe except what they see. They think that nothing can be which is not comprehensible by their minds. All minds, Virginia, whether they be men's or children's, are little. In this great universe of ours, man is a mere insect, an ant, in his intellect, as compared with the boundless world about him, as measured by the intelligence capable of grasping the whole truth and knowledge.

Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus. He exists as certainly as love and generosity and devotion exist, and you know that they abound and give to your life its highest beauty and joy. Alas! How dreary would be the world if there were no Santa Claus! It would be as dreary as if there were no Virginias. There would be no childlike faith then, no poetry, no romance, to make tolerable this existence. We should have no enjoyment, except in sense and sight. The eternal light with which childhood fills the world would be extinguished. Not believe in Santa Claus! You might as well not believe in Fairies! You might get your papa to hire men to watch in chimneys on Christmas evening to catch Santa Claus, but even if they did not see Santa coming down, what would that prove? Nobody sees Santa Claus. The most real things in the world are those that neither children nor men can see. Did you ever see Fairies dancing on the lawn? Of course not, but that's no proof that they are not there. Nobody can conceive or imagine all the wonders that are unseen and unseeable in the world. You may tear apart the baby's rattle and see what makes the noise inside, but there is a veil covering the unseen world which not the strongest man, nor even the united strength of all the strongest men that ever lived, could tear apart. Only faith, fancy, poetry, love, romance, can push aside that curtain and view and picture the supernatural beauty and glory beyond. Is it real? Ah, Virginia, in all this world there is nothing else real and abiding. No Santa Claus? Thank God, he lives and he lives forever. A thousand years from now, Virginia, nay, ten times ten thousand years from now, he will continue to make glad the heart of childhood.

Charles Dana
Editor"

Our staff too, gives thanks for the eternal Santa Claus and hopes that he brings joy your way this holiday season! Merry, merry Christmas!

Wishing The Very Best

Monday afternoon, Dr. Francis G. Lankford, Jr., was officially inaugurated President of Longwood College. With this office come many great and small problems, duties, and responsibilities. Accepting this position requires only a few short words; however, meeting all the demands of it requires much more — mainly, cooperation from the administration, faculty, and student body.

As is true in any organization with a new officer, you meet new ideas and methods. Adjusting to a change always takes time combined with understanding and tact. We hope that to date Dr. Lankford has been regarded in such a manner by all of his associates, and we further hope that his new position with us will continue to run as cooperatively as it has thus far.

We, of the Rotunda staff, extend our "Congratulations" to Dr. Lankford, and look forward to working with him as our president for many years to come.

'The Moon Shines Brightly And Santa Comes Our Way'

By JACKIE MARSHALL

It's Christmas Eve, 1952 and as I push away the last snow cloud from my face, I look around on the little town below me and see the soft blanket of snow tucking in each little house for the night. Ah, it's a warm feeling to know that down there on earth families are together in a cozy circle of love, faith, and happiness. Which reminds me, I have a promise to fulfill. You see, it was exactly a year ago tonight that I was shining my way over Koren feeling a bit dejected about the condition of the world in general. Shining as brightly as I could, one of my moonbeams fell upon a soldier sitting alone in a foxhole. He was looking straight at me, so I listened and heard him say, "Hey, Mr. Moon, I sure wish you'd do me a favor. On your way back to the States, do a little extra shining over my house, will you? You see, I've got a wife and little boy who are probably a little lonely this Christmas. Just look in on 'em, please and wish 'em Merry Christmas for me."

Ten minutes later, that soldier was just another lifeless body on a battlefield. But I had seen, I had heard and I promised what he wanted. So, tonight, I have a little job to do before old man sun pushes me clean out of these heavens. That must be the house. Who else but a little boy could create a lopsided snowman like that one on the lawn? I see that the lights are on inside and there they are, mother and son, decorating the tree. They seem to be having a fine time. Whoops! The boy just dropped a Christmas bulb and his mother is playfully scolding him.

"Honestly, Jimmy, you're as clumsy as your father ever was. Here, you finish putting the tinsel on the tree and I'll go get another bulb."

"Okay, Mom.—There, Mr. Tree, you look pretty good to me, even if I am clumsy. Why, I'll bet that I did as good a job on you as Pop ever could have done. Say, let's pretend that Pop's right here—in this very room. He's sitting in his chair watching me decorate. He's kinda tired and after all, an eight year old boy certainly should be able to decorate okay. How's it look, Pop? Pretty, huh? Can I get you your slippers or your pipe? I'll tell you what, let me sit in your lap and you can tell me that silly old poem about Santa Claus and the moon again. Okay? I believe it starts off—"the moon was shining bright that night when Santa came our way —." What's the rest, Pop? I can't remember. What is it, Pop?"

Well, I see that Jimmy is crying. Crying perhaps for wanting the past back again or perhaps for seeing reality and knowing it must be accepted. Now here comes his mother. She calmly draws her son to her in mutual understanding.

"It's all right, Jimmy. Christmas makes everything all right. Here, now, I think I can remember that poem.

The moon was shining bright that night,
When Santa came our way.
The toys were stacked and piled and stuck
Way up high in his sleigh.

The reindeer pawed, Santa cracked his whip,
His trip was now begun.
He had to visit every house,
Before he woke the sun.

Santa was in such a hurry
He ran into the moon.
The toys spilled all over the sky
And Santa went into a swoon.

The moon saw all and acted fast
To send out strong moonbeams
Which caught the toys in midair
And saved all children's dreams.

That night while Santa rested,
Moonbeams full of toys
Slid into each and every home
For Santa's girls and boys.

We owe the moon a lot, you see.
It saved old Santa's night.
So, smile to the moon on Christmas Eve
And all will be right.

Well, they're both laughing now. Laughing with the natural cheer that Christmas brings. I don't believe that I can do any more good here, so, I guess I'll just pick up my moonbeams and travel on over the globe to a Scrooge or some such person who really needs looking in on.

Merry Christmas, people.

America's Hockey Founder Continues Interest in Game

MISS CONSTANCE APPLEBEE

This past weekend, Longwood was honored by the presence of Miss Constance Applebee who brought the popular game of field hockey to the United States. After a ten minute talk with her, it was obvious that she was still as much of a hockey enthusiast as she had ever been. Miss Applebee, after 53 years of association with this sport, continues to travel around the country from college to college, coaching and supervising hockey teams and clubs.

Miss Applebee, who played hockey first in England, came to America in 1902 to study at Harvard. It was at this time that she met the director of Vassar College who was interested in and curious about the game of hockey. The two enthusiasts interested a group of students in the sport and played a demonstration game under Miss Applebee's direction. She once taught 900 girls the game in one week.

The Vassar director, seeing the need for such an outdoor fall game, wrote to other colleges and the game of hockey was well on its feet before its American founder returned to England.

Miss Applebee came back to America and appeared in a great many hockey tournaments and exhibition games. When asked what her favorite position was she answered that she preferred right wing or right half back.

In 1922, the famous coach organized a summer hockey camp, with the help of twelve English coaches, who came over to work with the participants. The camp, originally for clubs and physical education majors, has increased so rapidly in popularity that it now extends to college and high school students.

The first hockey tournament was held in Philadelphia, in 1922. Virginia, Boston, New York, and Philadelphia were among the chartered members.

Miss Applebee, who now resides in Williamsburg during the winter, expressed pride that Virginia has produced several international hockey players and a great many officers in the hockey associations. A national tournament was once played in Williamsburg, bringing honor to the state.

Life is still very busy and full of hockey tournaments, games, and camps for the woman to whom we owe credit for one of America's most popular outdoor sports for women.

Talented Musician Plays, Constructs Organs As Hobby

By LINDA DOLES

James Carson, an artist with the ability not only to express at the keyboard but also to construct the instrument of his choice, has this year become a member of the Longwood music department.

Mr. Carson came to Longwood from Alexandria. However, he is not a native Virginian. Born James Cooke Carson in Madisonville, Tennessee, where he attended grammar school and high school, his first musical interest occurred at an early age. He learned to play piano by ear when he was seven picking up what he heard his older sister play. Another sister was also interested in music and therefore, he was influenced by his musical surroundings.

He began his college education at Maryville College in Maryville, Tennessee. Next he spent two years in the Army and the Air Force during which time he played the organ for services and bands. After being discharged from the service he continued his college studies at Emory University in Georgia where he received his Bachelor of Arts degree. For a year he taught music at the Jonesboro, Georgia, High School. He also attended two more colleges, the University of Michigan School of Music, and the George Peabody College for Teachers in

By LINDA GARRISON

It is very probable that few students realize the honors which have been awarded to Carolyn Stonnell, a sophomore transfer student, in the field of horseback riding.

During the years she has been riding Carolyn has been awarded 350 ribbons and 75 trophies, including the Amelia Bridle Club Challenge Trophy, having won it three times for possession.

She maintains that each ribbon has been a thrill to her and recalls a separate story, but she claims her greatest thrill to be this fall when she placed 5th in the Ladies Division at Madison Square Garden.

Carolyn started riding in shows in 1947 here in Farmville. Since then she has ridden in east coast shows, including Sedgefield, North Carolina; Norfolk; Fort Lee; Roanoke; and Washington, D. C. Also she has participated in the Pennsylvania National and the National at Madison Square Garden in New York.

Carolyn, a secretarial science major from Cumberland, says she literally started riding as soon as she was able to walk. Her whole family rides, including two younger sisters. Although Carolyn competes with her sisters, she pointed out that they work as a team in shows and expressed a great respect for their ability.

Carolyn and her sisters usually ride in ten or fifteen horse shows each season from spring to November. They have five horses and Carolyn claims two favorites. She rides both gaited horses and hunters. During the winter the horses are stabled at Washington and kept by her trainer. She had the champion horse for North Carolina and Virginia on the Tidewater Circuit in 1953.

It is interesting that her only formal instruction was received at Meredith College last year. She has acquired all of her skill through observation and reading, but mostly through experience.

College Plans to Develop Multi-Purpose Recreational Site For Activities of Students, Faculty, Alumnae and Friends

Caretaker's Quarters and the approaches to the permanent camp. Should this application receive favorable consideration, the College would undertake the following:

Years 1-2.—(1) Provide basic sanitary accommodations. That is, construct a septic tank and drainage ditches in accordance with the specifications of the U. S. Corps of Engineers.

(2) Erect a moderately-priced bath house (cinder block), equipped with the elementary facilities, but with provision for additions. This would be erected above the 320 MHW level.

(3) Build a temporary boat landing.

(4) Submit for approval plans for picnic tables, fireplaces and the like.

(5) Provide a water supply and have the water analyzed by the State Department of Health.

(6) Connect up with electric power lines.

(7) Construct or procure one or more buildings eg. Quanset huts.

Years 3-5 (1) Make detailed topographical maps and blue prints of long-range development. With expert assistance we would select the permanent campus site. Here, preferably in quadrangle, surrounding the future athletic fields and recreational zones, we would:

(2) erect a permanent pavilion.

(3) Lay out and put major recreational facilities in more or less permanent shape.

() Erect a variable number of family cottages for immediate rental.

(5) Construct passable roads and lay out nature trails.

All of the above would be done according to National Recreational and Camping Standards. The time element will, of course, depend upon success in procuring funds for development.

Proposals for Financing Development are as follows: (1) By Donations. A certain amount of preliminary work, (cleaning up, clearing, etc.) can be expected from faculty and administrative groups who could combine a day in the open with worthwhile accomplishment.

We would expect faculty, student groups, administration and alumnae to make small voluntary contribution of both labor, goods and money.

(2) By Economies. Materials that might become discarded and other economies in ordinary operations of non-budgeted items.

(3) By Appropriation. A formal request will be included in the budget to be submitted to the Legislature two years hence.

(4) By Grant-In-Aid.—We expect to explore the several philanthropic and educational foundations.

(5) Private Capital. Faculty and administrative personnel will be encouraged to build cabins on the land to become the property of the College, but with provisions for amortization through rentals.

(6) By fees and rentals.—Nominal fees and rentals will be charged for the use of all property at all times.

(7) By Concessions such as bottled drinks, etc.

Respectfully submitted,

The College now awaits a reply from the previously mentioned Corps of Engineers.

Carson

Nashville, where he received his master's degree in music.

At the completion of his master's degree, Mr. Carson went to Alexandria, Virginia to become organist and choirmaster at the historical Christ Episcopal Church. During that time he also catalogued music copyrights at the Library of Congress in Washington. He also served as organist for Temple Beth El in Alexandria.

For a short while he worked in an organ factory and learned how to construct the instrument. Although he is dedicated mainly to performing music, he is also interested in finding out how musical instruments "tick." It is evident that the organ is his favorite interest since he has taken the time and study to construct as complicated an instrument.

His next job was that of Minister of Music which included being organist and choirmaster at the Washington Street Methodist Church, also in Alexandria. Consequently Mr. Carson has spent the last four or five years in church work in that vicinity.

Here at Longwood Mr. Carson is teaching music appreciation, theory, and organ; and he directs the chorus. At present Mr. Carson has hopes to begin the construction of another organ, using Joel K. Ebersole's basement as a workshop. His first problem is to sell his other organ. So, if anyone is interested in buying a handmade organ . . . see Mr. Carson today!

Butler Encourages Campus Activities In Political Groups

Paul M. Butler, chairman of the Democratic National Committee has appealed to leading educators for cooperation in the National Committee's plan to stimulate political discussion and encourage political activities on campuses during the 1956 Presidential election year.

In a recent letter to presidents of colleges and universities throughout the country, Mr. Butler pointed out that he has written to Republican Chairman Leonard Hall to join in encouraging such activity. The Democratic National Committee's aim, he wrote the educators, is "to work with established campus groups and to encourage the organization of ones where they do not exist." Mr. Butler expressed the hope that restrictions against student political activities in some colleges and universities "will be reviewed and that further consideration will result in their repeal."

The following is text of Mr Butler's letter to the educators, copy of which was also sent to Mr. Hall:

"It is our hope that young people everywhere will take a lively and informed interest in the Presidential election next year, particularly young men and women of college age who are just becoming voters. My own feeling is that political activity is an undertaking that should be especially encouraged among students so that this responsibility becomes a lifelong habit.

"We at the Democratic National Committee plan to make special efforts to stimulate political discussion and activity among college students next year, and I am writing to you and other leading educators at this time in the hope of enlisting your cooperation.

"Many schools already have Democratic and Republican clubs. It is our aim to work with established campus groups, and to encourage the organization

Gina Frolics, Gerard Leaps In Gay Farce

By JOAN HEAVYSIDE

Gina Lollobrigida and Gerard Philipe are the young lovers of the French films, "Fanfan the Tulip," to be shown at the State Theatre, Wednesday, Jan 18. The second in Longwood's Foreign Film series, is described by Theater Arts as "a racy French farce for connoisseurs of the tongue-in-cheek."

Newsweek claims the 18th century drama as "a gay and sometimes raucous French burlesque boyed up by the spirits of Gerard Philipe . . . and swelled by the notable curves of Gina Lollobrigida."

Fanfan (Philipe) is a young rogue who joined the army of Louis XV to escape a shotgun wedding. Believing a young gypsy's (Lollobrigida) prediction that he will find glory in the army and come to marry the daughter of the King, Fanfan sets about to fulfill the prediction. Time magazine describes him as "a legendary French hero who . . . was a sort of Robin Hood and Roy Rogers. He . . . bounces through the title role with zest, leaping from balconies, rooftops, and cliffs."

"As the main object of his affections, Italian actress Gina Lollobrigida is so shapely that she seems to bulge from the screen in the best 3-D style" (Time). The daughter of a sergeant, she pretends to be a gypsy to fool poor Fanfan. She appears in costumes described in the Saturday Review as "period gowns that might well have given pause to the censors" and plays a good supporting role.

Marcel Herrard does an elegant portrayal of Louis XV and Noel Roquevert is a villainous comrade-in-arms of M. Philipe.

Christian-Jaque is the director of this film which happens to derive its title from an old French children's song, "Fanfan the Tulip" is claimed by Time as "an enjoyable French costume western" and by the New Yorker as "complete with decorative royalty, nasty peasants and swashbuckling soldiery."

Sophs to Give Production, "Dutch Treat"

Violet Marshall, Shirley Alcock, Nancy Galley, and Carolyn Waugaman rehearse for Friday's production. "Dutch Treat" will take its audience to the Zuider Zee.

Widow and Bachelors, Fishermen and Girls All Go Dutch, Friday

By ELLA CARTER

Friday, the 13th doesn't stand for bad luck or injuries this month. Instead there's a treat in store for you! The Sophomores are all in Dutch to bring you a treat instead of a treatment. What better treat could there be than "Dutch Treat," this year's production written and directed by Ann DeAlba and Jean Hopkins, of Warwick.

With the setting beside the Zuider Zee, "Dutch Treat" shows the Sophs on the stage for the first time in comic roles to present a witty treat filled with rollicking fun and laughter

Holland has her windmills as well as her Fishermen who are in a spin to catch pretty maidens. As pretty as the tulips and just as fetching are the Dutch girls, daughters of the Widow Johnson, played by Nancy Galley, of Colonial Heights.

"Maybe Mr. VanKirk will be your Papa yet!" says Widow Johnson convincingly to her daughters as they leave for the market place. Widow Johnson is out to get her man.

Getting out of her way is none other than the eligible bachelor, Mr. Van Kirk, played "Tee Pee" Waugaman, and he is determined to stay that way.

Seen as the eight Johnson Daughters will be Shirley Alcock, Violet Marshall, Shirley Hauptman, Dinny Coates Siersema, Emily Atkinson, Libby White, Anita Heflin, and George Ann Reynolds.

"Indulging in sin, always with grin" will be the eight fishermen played by Ginny Herre, Nancy Richardson, Janet Lloyd, Barbara Parkinson, Anne Rountree, Donna Benn, Carol Lash, and Nancy Webb.

The town gossip will be portrayed by Pat Walton. The roles of townspeople and folk dancers will include other members of the Sophomore class.

Others heading various committees are Sally Tilson, publicity; Shirley Alcock, costumes; Libby White, makeup; Jacque Trader, props and staging; Jeanette Stinson, dances; Sara Gayhart and Shirley Hauptman, tickets; Ruth Zich, program; and Tracy Faison, music.

Colonnade Writes

It has not been the practice of The Colonnade to publicize the theme of the magazine before it is printed. However since this next issue is the contest issue, we feel that our contributors would like to have some idea of what is expected of them.

The March issue of The Colonnade will be based on an Inter-racial theme. The staff feels that this is a very timely subject of today, and would also be a good follow-up to our last issue which was based on an American theme. The contest issue will include all countries, all races, and all types of people the world over.

Another change will be instituted with the March contest issue. Instead of having just short stories being judged, we are offering all types of journalism to be running in competition—this includes essays, short stories, poetry, cartoons, and letters to the editors.

The deadline for the contest will be February 18. All entries should be placed in The Colonnade box or handed to the editors. If any student has a question about the theme of the issue or any other details please contact the editors. Twenty-five dollars in prize money will be presented to the winners.

It is our hope that many students will enter this contest. Remember, The Colonnade is your college magazine. Why don't you contribute?

Religious Emphasis Week

You are a member of our Young Women's Christian Association. Are you a good member?

During the past year the "Y" has sponsored many activities for our campus and our community. Some of them you have noticed; others, you haven't. The cabinet has been busy each week making and carrying out plans. In September we sought to promote the spirt of friendliness by returning to school early to welcome the new girls and to make them feel at home. Previously we had written letters to them telling them a little of what they could expect and what they would need at our college. Each freshman and new student was given a "Big Sister" to help with any problems they might have. You remember the "Big Sister-Little Sister" party in the rec, and the rained-out-formal reception in the Student Lounge. Freshman Installation, when in the silence and candlelight you vowed not to leave God out of your growing life at Longwood—remember "Sings," the Union Vesper Service; when we, regardless of denomination, join together and worship our Lord, and our daily "Prayers" in the church across the street. At Thanksgiving you helped us supply the needy persons in our community with food, and at Christmas you shared your blessings by contributing $209.00 to the Farmville Welfare Department to be distributed to those less fortunate than we. You recognized lovely qualities and, as you thought on them, you chose a student to portray the Madonna in our Christmas pageant. You enjoyed the Christmas banquet and the caroling, and surely, 'mid all the beauty of our celebration, you realized it was Christ's birthday and thanked God for it.

Now we're starting a new year—there will be more parties, there'll be more "Sings," there'll be more Union Vespers, there'll be more "Prayers" . . . you'll gain as much as you give . . . Will you give it a try? Don't grow physically and mentally, and remain immature spiritually. God wants you to have a life abundant, and it's up to you to make it. As the days roll by and as classes and activities become many, I challenge you to give them your best, and take time to talk with God.

In a few weeks we will seek to place emphasis on religion. Of all the activities of our Y, this is the most important, and this is the one in which we need most of all your real interest and support. We need your talents, too, and in a few days you will be given an opportunity to sign up for committees and jobs which are necessary to make our Religious Emphasis Week a success. We want your help and there is a job for every student. Will you sign up then and do your task? It will be a blessing to you and you'll be a good member.

Mary Ann Wright
President Y. W. C. A.

Two Worlds For You?

Until students realize that college life is only a preparation . . . no matter how good a preparation . . . for life in the world today, they will continue to be frustrated. They will be frustrated because they are trying to evaluate college life with a level it was never meant to be evaluated with.

Idealism is a beautiful thing. It is something you hate to see crushed. It is reminiscent of beautiful childhood days. Yet unless people lose at least some of their idealism during their college days, their advent into the world outside will be pure, jolting reality.

A set of basic values should be formulated during these important college years; once the values have been definitely congealed, it shouldn't be too hard to make adjustments to individuals and situations as they occur.

But those who cling to the idea that college is life itself don't lose their idealism. They refuse to think of the hard, coldly impersonal world and they live an idealistic life in the only world they allow themselves to recognize.

Enjoy your years of preparation, but remember that some day this will no longer be your world.

Do Exams Panic You--Hmm? Then Don't Read This, Sis!

By JACKIE MARSHALL

The following is an almost incoherent, babbling account written by an exam-stricken young student which we have printed due to the lack of anything better to do.

Not much time to fill this space.
Exams, you know—
all over the place.
Think I'd better
write this fast.
Pardon my brevity,
but the dye is cast.
Noticed tonight—
all doors shut.
Wondered why.
Wondered for what.
Felt unloved.
Felt unwanted.
The hall was quiet.
The place was haunted!
Walked to my room.
Walked back out.
Walked back in.
Couldn't figger it out!
Suddenly saw—
many books on shelf.
They were sittin' and waitin'.
Had to sit myself.
Finally remembered—
I'd heard a story.
Exams soon coming.
Ash! How gory!
Sat there thinking—
"Oh, my soul!"
I'd rather eat worms
on a hot dog roll!
Began to get a familiar fear.
Same thing happened
Trouble is—can't study, you know.
Get claustrophobia.
Must get up and go.
Walked around.
Looked in doors.
Dern brainy hall!
Bunch of bores!
It worthless.
Returned to cell.
Open book—
It had musty smell.
What to study?
Probably fail.
Read anyway.
Hmmm—found a hangnail.
Stifled yawn.
Coffee-time!!
Drank stimulant.
Felt sublime.
Now in mood
to really work.
At last! At last!
I'm not a shirk.
Then Leonard came in.
She patted my back.
"Write Rotunda feature, my friend, Jack."
I just sat there—
clutching my book.
"Can't—must study."
(Got very nasty look.)
So, here's my last academic blunder.
If I flunk out—
I'll sue the Rotunda!!

Friendly Tea Room Hostess Declares Students Keep Her "Young in Spirit"

By LINDA DOLES

You've heard of talking of absurdities over tea? Well, one can learn many facts—far from absurd over coffee in the tearoom. For instance—This year marks the 16th year that Mrs. Louise Dugger has worked in Lonewood Tea Room and the 5th year that she has served as its manager. Mrs. Dugger is a well-known figure on the Lonewood Campus to most of the faculty and students. She can usually be found in the tea room, always kind and cooperative and willing to help the girls in any way she can.

Mrs. Dugger, originally from South Hill, attended Randolph-Macon Woman's College until she married. After living in Ashland, she moved to Farmville where she has lived the past 17 years. Soon after moving here, she began working in the tea room as Mrs. Katherine W Tabb's assistant and in the Post Office with Mrs. Margaret G. Cox. The tea room is not only Mrs. Dugger's work but also her hobby, and she thoroughly enjoys it. She also likes being the night matron during the summer session which brings her into closer contact with many of the girls. She enjoys being near the girls and thinks they are "always kind and thoughtful, so much so that it's hard to refuse them anything." She says that the girls keep her "young in spirit if not in age." She is devoted to and interested in all of the college and although she did not attend Longwood she has been made an honorary member of the Longwood College alumnae.

The history of the tea room goes back to 1922 when only sandwiches and drinks were served; the room itself being much the same as today. Much of the success of the tea room can also be accredited to the help of Blanche Brown and Ellen Miles who have been on the tea room staff since its opening. The warm atmosphere and friendly surroundings have always attracted many. Nowadays, regular meals are served for breaksfast, and for dinner, which is accompanied by delicious hot breads and desserts. Among the home-cooked meals, the most popular dishes are broiled chicken, which is by far the most demanded meat; hot cakes, coffee, and juice, a typical breakfast; hamburgers, hot turnovers; lemon ice box pie; and icecream with Mrs. Dugger's own recipe for caramel sauce. It is interesting to know that if anyone would like copies of any of her recipes, Mrs. Dugger keeps them conveniently at hand and will gladly give them to anyone. Asked if she has any secret recipes, "no", but also said that she could always leave out an ingredient in a released recipe if she wished to keep one secret. The following recipe is for turnovers, one of the most well-liked foods at the tea room, and ALL the ingredients are included!

Tea Room Turnovers

½ cup Crisco
1 quart Flour
1 teaspoon Salt
1 Yeast Cake

Dissolve yeast cake in cup of luke warm water to which has been added two (2) tablespoons of sugar. Beat 1 egg; add to 1½ cup of water and sift flour with salt—add the yeast mixture to the water and mix with flour—knead all ingredients together until a soft dough is made—Then put aside in a well-greased bowl to rise until about double in size—Melt a tablespoon of butter with a tablespoon of shortening—Roll out dough—Cut with biscut cutter (any size desired.) Dip each roll in melted butter mixture—Put in greased pan—let rise about an hour—Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees.)

Besides regular meals there are several feature of the tea room that perhaps few realize. The tea room opens at 7:30 and serves breakfast until 10. Lunch is served from 12 to 2. Until closing at 4, hamburgers, candy bars, nabs, hot doughnuts, and other snacks can be ordered. There is a banquet room adjacent to the tea room that is available for private entertaining for the college and townspeople.

Mrs. Louise Dugger checks ingredients for her popular "Tea Room Turnovers".

Soph Competitor Swims World Once In Color Contest

The Swim Around the World competition has been underway for some time now and it's a stiff battle between the colors for the first four places. In order to swim around the world, a swimmer must complete 250 lengths of the pool: Nancy has swum 250 lengths which is the equivalent of 18,750 miles in the contest.

The green and whites occupy second, third and fourth places. Loretta Kuhn has completed 197 lengths, Elaine Weddle has swum 165 lengths, and Sandy Fitzgerald ties Barbara McKnight for fourth place with 15 lengths. Linda Vess of the green and whites is close behind with 114 lengths to her credit, followed by red and white Ann Jeter with 86 lengths.

'Future Holds Few Changes' -Crystal Ball

Everybody likes an advanced peek at what lies ahead.

This curiosity is a human trait, as human as having mother-in-laws or the hosebleed.

Each year the editors of the Omega Almanac try to satisfy the curiosity by taking a look in their fuzzy crystal ball and making a few pertinent forecasts for the coming year.

Here are their picks for '56:

POLITICS — A drive will be launched to get both the Republicans and Democratic parties to back a bipartisan presidential election ticket—but cooler heads will prevail . . . both major party platforms will denounce ragweed and endorse motherhood, but each will remain silent on the crying question of the hour, "Shall the dandelion be made America's National Flower?" . . . It's too hot an issue for a campaign year.

BUSINESS — As usual, only more so. The nation will hit a 400 billion dollar income, and 9 out of 10 Americans will ask "Wonder who got my share?"

SEX It will go on as usual, too. No really significant developments in this important field appear on the horizon, although a slump in this widespread popularity is expected.

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS A calm year. The cold war between Elsa Maxwell and the Dutchess of Windsor will continue, but no open violence will flare . . . Babs Hutton will abstain from either divorce or marriage.

INDUSTRY Motor car sales, after a brief lag, will spurt tremendously after all firms announce they will give a year's free parking space with the purchase of each new automobile.

SPORTS — Britain will finally uncover a promising heavyweight boxer with a plastic instead of a glass jaw (but Rock Marciano will break it in 1957 anyhow) . . . An attempt will be made to include girl watching as an Olympic sport.

HEALTH— Women will go on living longer than men, and men will go on wondering why . . . Three eminent doctors will say the best way to stay healthy is to avoid emotional tension, and three other equally eminent doctors will say the best way to stay healthy is to blow your top when you feel like it.

LABOR As little of this as possible. New labor-saving devices will give most workers more free company time in which to ask the boss for shorter hours and more pay.

WEATHER—Feeble gust early in the year from Washington, followed by storm clouds over Chicago and San Francisco in midsummer.

TV Will continue as usual too, with Mickey Mouse Club and Billboard Question leading the popular Programmes.

SONGS — 16 Tons will remain No 1 on the Hit Parade for the better part of the year. Rhythm and Blues music will also remain top.

MOVIE STARS — Sincerely Yours starring Liberace will get the Oscar, each night thank you ladies and gentlemen."

LOCAL—As traditional homecoming will continue also.

of one where they do not exist. We think it would be a splendid thing for the country if the electorate were enriched by campus political clubs working within the framework of our political parties. Unfortunately, there are some college and university clubs which now foster existence of student political organizations. It is our hope that such restrictions will be removed and that further consideration will result in their repeal.

"I am writing to my opposite, Leonard W. Hall, Chairman of the Republican Party, to invite him to join me in encouraging such student political activity. Political enthusiasm and dialogue between all parties as well as the nation as a whole. It seems to me that there could be few more fruitful extra-curricular citizenship training activities. I would welcome an expression from you on this subject.

"With best wishes,
"Sincerely yours,

Rice, Stables, Parker Lead in Coming Play

The Longwood Players proudly announce their forthcoming production, Blood Wedding, to be presented in Jarman Hall Auditorium at 8 p. m. on March 8, 9, and 10. The leading roles will be portrayed by Patricia Abernathy Rice as the Bride, Fred Stables as her lover, Leonardo, and James Parker as her husband, the Bridegroom. All are veteran performers of the Players and will be remembers for their roles in such past productions as Blithe Spirit, Romeo and Juliet, Dark of the Moon, and Ring Around the Moon.

Blood Wedding, written by the late Spanish poet and playwright, Frederico Garcia Lorca, is a moving and unusual tragedy. The plot centers around the conflict between the Bride's love for Leonardo and her desire to be a good and faithful wife to her husband, the Bridegroom. The major part of the action takes place immediately before, during, and after the wedding ceremony. Dr. Walter Hartley of the Longwood College music department has written an original musical score which will accompany the action of the play and the production will be done in authentic Spanish costume.

Other members of the cast include Anne Brooking as the Bridegroom's Mother, Herb Goodman as the Bride's Father, Flo Sogholian, as the neighbor woman, Clee Koons as Leonardo's wife, Gloria Kratzsch as Leonardo's Mother-in-law, Donna Boone as the Servant Woman, and George Ann Reynolds as the Girl. Two characters symbolizing Death are Molly Workman as the Moon and Nancy Bruebeck as the Beggar Waman. Patricia Leake, Catherine Ozman and Lynne Higgenbotham, all freshmen, will portray three young Girls who appear in the last act. The wedding guests will be Hannah Halle, Elizabeth Riddle, Micky Duarte, Suzanne Faison, Jane Adams, Gale Branch, Vicki Brinkley, and Octavia Barnes. John Lynne, Bob Prince, and Bernard Warren will play the three Woodcutters.

The entire production will be designed and directed by Mr. David Wiley, assisted by Dottie Reetor. The stage managers are Pattie Billups and Patti Parker, who will also direct the dance choreography. The production area chiefs are Mary Mayo, costumes; Barbara Burnside, scenery; Nancy Cousins, lighting; Violet Marshall, sound; and Patricia Leake, publicity.

"El Clavo" Film To Be Sponsored By El Club Espanol

"El Clavo" (The Nail), by Pedro de Alarcon, is an account of a murder case which occurred in Spain during the 1880's. It is set in picturesque Andalucia, a southern district of Spain famous for its colorful songs and dances. Therefore "El Clavo" has the elements of mystery and romance woven into its exciting plot.

For the romantically-inclined, such scenes as the first, will provide entertainment. The story begins on a dark and stormy night when a young lawyer, Zarco, embarks on a stagecoach journey. Like all travelers, he wonders who will be his companions and then a beautiful young woman enters the coach. She apparently is a recent widow for she wears black and her face still bears the signs of great sorrow. Zarco becomes infatuated with her beauty which has been made even more strange by tragedy. They part and do not see each other for several years. The detectives in the audience

"Il Trovatore," Operatic Film, Featured Today

As is evidenced by the increasing number of films and the growing box office acclaim, opera has attained its place in the motion picture industry and in the hearts of moviegoers. This week, being shown at the State Theatre, is Verdi's immortal opera "Il Trovatore." A reviewer of the New York Post has called it "as actionful as any cop - and - robber thriller, and as romantic as a Hollywood heart-throbber."

Filmed in the hills of Spain the story is concerned with a gypsy's blood-revenge for her mother's murder.

In the castle of Alaferia in the province of Sarajozza, lived the Count of Lima with his two young sons. It is rumored that the younger son has been stricken by the evil eye of an old gypsy. The Count has the gypsy captured and burned at the stake. In revenge the gypsy's daughter, Azucena, kidnaps the younger child of the Count to kill him, but by mistake she throws her own child into the flames. The years go by and Ezucena rears the Count's son as her own, calling him Manrico. The old Count dies, leaving his remaining son to pursue the quest for his younger brother. Manrico enlists in the army of the Count of Urgel, pretended to acclaim the throne of Spain and adversary of County of Lima. He succeeds in winning his knight's spurs and defeating in a tournament his unknown brother, Count of Lima. At the same time he wins the heart of Leonora, young lady of the Queen of Aragons court, with whom the Count of Lima is deeply in love. In a fierce duel between the two before Leonora, Manrico disarms the Count. Later Leonora receives the news that Manrico has been slain in battle against the Count's forces, and she decides to enter a nunnery.

Old Shaky Skeletons Will Help in A Pinch -- Grab Yours And Attend 'Golden Splendor'

Got your date for Junior dance? Jackie Sawyer, from Norfolk, Virginia, general chairman of the dance, and the rest of us Juniors do hope you won't have to resort to diging up old skeletons, but we all agree that in any case you must not miss this even of the spring season.

Yes, even a skeleton would be thrilled at first sight of the gym in its "Golden Splendor." The decorating committee, header by Jeanne Saunders and Nancy Lenz, has been busy with beads, flashing foil and lanterns, creating an exotic atmosphere of the Far East.

The music for dancing won't be the tinkling strains of a Chinese Band, but it is guaranteed to follow the enchanting mood set by the decorations. The Collegians the fourteen piece band from the University of Richmond, will play from 8:00 to 12:00 p. m., furnishing lilting melodies along with bop and blues tunes to suit the fancy of each couple.

O special interest to the Juniors is the party to be held in the Tea Room after the dance. Mrs. Louise Dugger is in charge of the menu. An added attraction, Gloria's Combo, Longwood's own musical group, will provide music and entertainment during the party which will be in session until 1:00 A. M.

Shirley Blankenship Chosen Chairman

Shirley Blankenship, a senior from Rimesk, Virginia, has been chosen chairman of many of the minor elections.

The duties of the office require working with the committee on nominations for the Student Government, Athletic Association Council, Y.W.C.A., and the House Council. The names of the nominees are submitted to Dr. Lankford and Miss Cleaves for approval and then presented to the student body for voting. Major elections are for presidents, and minor elections for secretaries, treasurers, and vice-presidents.

While at Longwood, Shirely has participated actively in varsity hockey, the Monogram Club, Athletic Association Council, Wesley Foundation Council, and Student Standards.

Slaughter At P. O.

Recently the problem of the morning congestion in the post office was brought before the Student Standards Committee. After much discussion it was agreed that it has become increasingly harder for students to get to their box, get their mail, and get out of the postoffice without encountering a mob of other students and coming to an almost complete standstill until everyone is ready to move on.

Student Standards investigated several possibilities for removing this unpleasant confusion which occurs each morning as the mail is being put up. The first suggestion was that the partition between the post office and the hall be removed to allow a greater space around the boxes. The cost and inconvenience of doing this makes it almost an impossibility. Next it was suggested that the mail be put up earlier, and this too is almost an impossibility.

The idea of having shifts to get the mail was investigated. This would mean that the upper two classes would collect their mail at one hour and the two lower classes would get theirs at another time. It was felt that this idea would meet with much student opposition. It did not seem practical to make traffic through two doors of the post office one way, as this would inconvenience and confuse a great number of students who could more quickly enter and leave the postoffice from a different way. If the mail were put up at another hour entirely, it was felt that the congestion would still occur at a delayed time.

It was brought to light that one of the main causes of the jam in movement to and from the post office was the students who stood still by their boxes or against the wall, waiting for all of the mail to be put up or waiting for various other reasons. Thus the regular flow of traffic is temporarily stopped until these persons move.

In view of the impossibility and impractibility of the other means of controling this problem it seems that the most outstanding solution would be to keep the crowd around the post office moving rather than delaying it or dividing it into shifts.

Until something is decided, standing still in the post office area should be discouraged even in the occasional times when mail is not completely up at nine o'clock. Traffic must move although it may inconvenience a few students who will not be able to get their mail at that particular time if it is not all up.

Where's The Gong?

The library clock strikes no longer. The students complain abouts its loud and lazy reminder of the hour no longer. The faculty pays attention to its existence no longer.

A familiar, temperamental characteristic of Longwood's campus expired when the clock was 'de-belled."

For many years, the clock has stood as a beacon to the townsfolk as well as the college. Just in recent years it has become an accurate keeper of the time. When the first symptoms of inaccuracy became evident, doctors of machines were summoned to thoroughly examine every nut, bolt and spring. After a lengthy consultation, it was decided by these able men that the clock must lose its bell.

Since the day the clock last struck, members of the student body have had time to enjoy the absence of "gong-waves" in the air and, now, a sentimental feeling of loss has entered the emotions of those who have classed the clock as a campus fixture which had a personality of its own.

Once, it was more. If you failed to hear the alarm clock, the library clock managed to blast through to your subconscious and tell you to get up. During the course of the day, if the hour was forgotten, the clock called an attention-demanding reminder to go to class or a meeting. Late at night when you rolled, tossed and were sure you must be the only person awake, the clock called a comforting re-assurance each and every hour.

Now, it has temporarily failed us and many of us find ourselves missing it. Until it is proved that the timepiece can never strike again, we prefer to believe that the library clock is temporarily "under-the-weather."

Exam Fever

Longwood College is one of the few schools in the State of Virginia which does not have a reading period. Prior to its exam period, many of the students on this campus feel that this reading period, if only for about three days prior to our exams, would be very beneficial. It is believed that during this time the students would be able to concentrate better on the material they need to study or review for the exams. During this time it would be best if no classes were held, thus giving the students more free time in which to study or read any needed parallel.

Again there is the argument that the exam period should be extended so that no student would have more than one exam per day. If this system were put into effect it would not be necessary to have a reading period beforehand. It is a great strain on many students to have two exams on the same day. A great deal of study may be needed for both, and it has been very hard to divide this time. But if we only had one exam a day, the individual would be able to study a little more systematically.

Also, there is the feeling that a few more days of vacation between semesters would be helpful. A holiday of about four days would prove to be adequate time to rest before beginning a new semester. The time that we now have between semesters is not enough to allow some students to go home or for anyone to get a rest from studying before they start on their new line of studies.

If one of these ideas could be put into effect, many students believe that the exam period on this campus would not be such a test of physical, as well as mental, endurance.

Marshall Cites Clever Puns To Chase Away Your Blues

By JACKIE MARSHALL

Now see here, I've noticed a peculiar lack of mirth in the student body of Longwood for some time now. It is most disturbing factor and I believe personally life is too short a game to mope around in, — unless, of course you're a complex-ridden senior!

Therefore, it is with one well-worn thumb, two blood-shot eyeballs, very little originality and some very interesting research that I bring before your punneedy eyes the following gems of nonsense.

An old maid who gets married is like a wart—better off.

Some folks couldn't have a brain hemorrhage for the same reason that a snake couldn't have water on the knee.

He was getting well in the hospital 'till he took a turn for the nurse.

I come from a family of long livers—my uncle had a liver 10 inches long.

Students from the dental college choose their favorite play: "A View From The Bridge".

The reason why surgeons never ake their wives dancing is that al lother doctors are always cutting in.

In Russia they're trying to cross a photo of Perry Como with a sportscaster, and if they're successful they'll get a Red Barber.

Malenkov is doing a version of Edward R. Murrow's TV show in Russia. It's called "Poison to Poison."

And then there's the kid who was hit by a flying saucer. He wouldn't drink his milk.

Rumor has it that Queen Mother Mary, Queen Elizabeth and the entire royal family were ready to give their okay to the marriage between Princes Margaret and Group Captain Peter Townsend—but Danny Kaye turned thumbs down.

A Texan bought his wife a cadillac for a present; she turned to him and said, "Dope what question did you miss?"

Good friends are like tooth-less combs—hard to part with.

A pessimist is a guy who wears both belt and suspenders.

Why is evolution so hard to believe? A blonde can make a monkey out of a man in one single night!

Did you hear about the guy who threw a bar of soap at his mirror and had seven years' bad lux?

FROM PERSONAI COLUMN OF MIDWEST NEWSPAPER:— Millie, don't be stubborn. Papa has been confined to his bed ever since you left. Please come back at once, and bring back his pants.

Longwood in 44 Years - Or - Music, Maids, And Thinking

By FLO SOGHOIAN

Hmmm . . . Wonder what Longwood will be like in 44 years? Well, let's stretch our focus a bit. This is what I see . . .

Goodness—Longwood has "gone modern", is lush, out of this world! . . . 9 o'clock . . . We're in a dormitory now (an apartment affair, you know) . . . What is the soft restful music we hear? An early bird tells us it's ultra progressive jazz. You see it progressed so much that it's lost its shrillness and is really very nice to wake up by (Oh, they had stopped the bells in '56) . . . . After a leisurely, typical breakfast in bed consisting of egg omelettes, French pastries, coffee, and more coffee, the maid helps our Longwood Lady dress. The trend now seems to be to get oneself in a nice, relaxed frame of mind for the interesting, stimulating classes of such subjects as Philosophy, Psychology, English literature, arts, music, dance, etc., to follow. My! The whole college has gone liberal. Everyone is thinking these days. On our way to a classroom, we admire the extremely modern design of the building. Simplicity with genuine good taste . . . Nice . . . There's no prejudice of color —warm browns, cool greens, deep blues . . . subdued tones and unorthodox combinations . . . It's all very inviting.

Yes, let's go to the Theatre and reminise . . . twice as big now . . . red, black, white and gold—How

Tigers Face Roanoke College Tonight

Hampden-Sydney's Tigers, current leaders in the Little Eight Conference with a 7-1 record, invade Salem, Virginia, tonight for the second of a two game series with Roanoke College which could just about decide this year's champion.

The Maroons will be out to avenge an earlier 75-60 loss handed them at Death Valley in mid-January, and a win over the league leading Tigers tonight would give the Maroons the championship provided they can get by Bridgewater and Randolph-Macon later on.

However, a win for the Tigers would give them a pretty good chance for league laurels provided they are victorious against upcoming Bridgewater, Norfolk Division, RPI and Emory & Henry. If the Tigers win tonight and both teams go the rest of the way unbeaten in the Little Eight they would finish with a 12-1 record against an -2 for the Maroons. However, if Coach Buddy Hackman's five turns the tables on Hampden - Sydney and both squads go the rest of the way, then Roanoke would cop conference laurels with a 9-1 mark which would be a little better than the 11-2 the Tigers would hold.

So it will be a big game for both teams and a real battle is expected. The Tigers will be trying to stop big Dave Foltz, Roanoke's high scoring center who gathered in 18 points in the earlier Tiger-Maroon clash before fouling out in the final minutes of the contest. Hampden-Sydney pivotman Russ Holcomb was tabbed for this job earlier in the season and will probably take the role again tonight.

Coach Weenie Miller of the Tigers realizes that Roanoke will be tougher tonight due to their home appearance, but hopes for a dazzling performance from his squad.

Varsity Team Takes Games With Roanoke

The Longwood varsity basketball squad triumphed over the Roanoke College team in their third game of the season Monday night on the Longwood court. The final score was 67-49. A second game was played in which the Longwood team was again the winner.

The starting line-up for the first game included Ann Snyder, Jo Maxey, and Nancy Richardson as forwards, and Margaret Dowdy, Jane Lohr, and Willie Taylor played the guard positions. During the second half Linda Chambers came into the game as a forward.

The starting players for the second game were Gayle Cunningham, Tillie Worthington, and Delores Dove in forward positions, and Carol Wolfe, Loretta Kuhn, and Evelyn Skalsky as guards. During the second half of the game Sandy Fitzgerald, Lou Heier, and Nancy Andrews entered the game as forwards, and Joyce Tharrington, Violet Scott, and Betty Spivey came in as guards. The final score of the second game was 59-20.

The starting line-up for the Longwood team included Ann Snyder, Nancy Richardson, and Linda Chambers as forwards, and Jane Lohr, Willie Taylor, and Margaret Dowdy in guard positions. Jo Maxey entered the game as substitute. The score at the half-time was 33-19 in favor of Longwood.

During the second half of the game Jackie Waller and Margaret Dowdy entered the game at guard positions.

A second game was played and Longwood again defeated the Westhampton team with a score of 48-24. Richardson, Kuhn MacKnight, Jeter Take Swim Contest Red'n Whites Contributes Most Points Toward Color Cup

Mary Ann Barnett shows "Swim Around the World Winners," a stroke to be used in the Spring Water pageant.

The Swim Around the World contest, in competition for the color cup, has been completed recently, and the winners have become winners of one of the eight events in the spring swimming meet. Coming in first with a total of 400 pool lengths (the equivalent of 5.67 miles) was Nancy Richardson for the red and white team.

Loretta Kuhn came in second for the green and whites with a total of 342 lengths, followed by Barbara MacKnight of the green and whites with 299 lengths. Ann Jeter placed fourth in the contest adding 285 lengths for the red and white team.

Since each length represents 75 feet, the green and white team placed ahead of the red and whites, with a total of 99,300 feet or 18.8 miles to their credit. The red and white came in close behind with a total of 86,550 feet or 16.4 miles. However, because of the way the first four winners were placed, the red and white team contributes 6 points toward the color cup, where as the green and whites contribute 5 points.

Elaine Weddle, Sandra Fitzgerald, Linda Yess, and Ellen Callaway came in fifth, sixth, seventh, and eight, respectively. Those participating for the green and white team in order of their placing were Nancy Andrews, Jackie Pond, Betsy Richardson, Nancy Striplin, Delores Winder, and Barbara Wade. For the red and whites were Mary Ann Barnett, Jane Karicoff, Jane Eleanor Harvey, Jeanne Vestal, Sandra Cooley Waugaman, Charlotte Chadwick, Barbara Williams, Nancy Cunningham, Janice Haines, Janet Lloyd, Sara Hackworth, Shelby Flack Tracy Faison, Glenna Kesterson, and Shirley Adams.

Eight Dancers Attend Forum

Eight members of Orchesis, the modern dance group at Longwood College, attended the Annual Women's College Arts Forum at the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina, Greensboro, North Carolina, Friday and Saturday, February 3 and 4.

Members attending were Belle Fitzgerald, of Wytheville; Mary Mayo, of Norfolk; Jeanette Stinson, of Danville; June Strother, of Colonial Heights; Evelyn Rowe, of Kinsale; Nancy Taylor, of Big Island, and Mrs. Patsy Abernathy Rice, of Virginia Beach.

The Longwood group, under the direction of Mrs. Emily K. Landrum, associate professor of physical and health education, gave a dance demonstration, "Seascape" to the music of Monpou. Nancy Taylor was accompanist and Patsy Rice was the narrator.

Dancers from twenty colleges and universities in the East attended the forum at which Jose Limon, outstanding comtemporory dancer, and Mrs. Susanne Langer, instructor of dance at Columbia University, were special guests. Mr. Limon conducted a master class of dancers, and, with his company, gave a concert. Mrs. Langer lectured on "A Philosophical Reflection Upon the Dance."

"El Clavo"

will find the title "El Clavo," and its origin interesting. One day the lawyer and a friend stroll past a cemetery. Their attention is caught by a pile of human bones. In Europe this is a common sight but this pile is unusual. Through the top of one of the skulls a nail had been driven. What had happened? To whom did the skull belong? What kind of person could have devised such a fiendish death?

In the film version of de Alarcon's book, Amparito Rivelles portrays the beautiful widow, Blanca. Like most Spanish-born stars, she began her career on the legitimate stage where she appeared in the classics and Spanish adaptations of Broadway hits. It was while she was playing the lead in a translation of "Stage Door" that she came to the attention of Rafael Gil, director of "El Clavo."

This is her first film to be shown in the United States, and previous audiences have been charmed by her performance.

Playing opposite Senorita Rivelles in the part of the lawyer, Zarco, is Rafael Duran, one of Spain's handsomest leading men and one of its most excellent actors.

Rafael Gil, the director, is perhaps best-known for his production of "Don Quixote." As in that famous film Senor Gil has captured the beauty of the Spanish countryside in "El Clavo." By exploiting minute details, Senor Gil develops the mood of the story and at the same time transports his audience into an ornate and delightful era that of 1860'.

A knowledge of the Spanish language is not necessary for full enjoyment of "El Clavo" because English titles are given. Be sure to see "El Clavo" at 8:00 p. m., on Friday, Feb. 17, in Jarman Hall.

"Il Trovatore"

The Count of Lima, wild with passion, rushes with his followers to the cloister to stop Leonora from fulfilling her vows. Manrico, meanwhile, has been saved from death by his gypsy mother, Azucena, and arrives at the cloister in time to rescue Leonora from the Count and to take her with him to Castellor. The County of Lima will not abandon his prey. He captudes Azucena and prepares to send her to the stake. Manrico leaves his bridal celebration to rescue his mother, but he also is taken and placed in prison with Azucena. Leonora pleads for his life, and after promising to marry the Count in exchange for Manrico's freedom, she takes poison and goes to the cell to see that the Count's promise is carried out. Manrico, thinking she has betrayed their love, spurns her and refuses to leave. She falls dying in his arms, the Count comes upon the scene and realizes Leonora's treachery. Manrico understands her sacrifice too late and is sent to the executioner to be beheaded. The Count of Lima drags Azucena to witness her sons death, and as the ax falls she tells the Count that Manrico is his lost brother. With that, she falls to the ground, dying, and cries out, "Mother, you are revenged." The Count alone is still alive.

The romance of the necessarily complicated operatic plot leaves little room for realistic treatment, but the musical score is perhaps the most familiar and beautiful of Verdi's works. Among the best known are the Anvil Chorus, the lyrical gypsy arias, and the romantic duets, and to sing them are Enzo Mascherini as Conte di Limaa, Vittorina Colonnello as Leonora, Gianna Pederzini as Azucena, and Gino Sinimberghi as Manrico. There are English subtitles.

State-Wide Plans Underway For Jamestown Celebration

Jamestown may never be restored like Williamsburg, but the way of life of our first settlers, as much as possible, will be presented at the Jamestown Festival of 1957. The spectacular program will take place from April 1957 through July 1957 in the Jamestown - Williamsburg - Yorktown area with such dignitaries as the President of the United States, the Queen of England, the Archbishop of Canterbury, and the Bishop of London, invited to attend. This is the first great presentation of this sort, given to commemorate Jamestown's 350th Anniversary and all of Virginia is going "all out" to make it a big success.

The year-long and state-wide occasion will include such events as drama, pageantry, and art exhibits. The main part of the Festival will begin April 26 in the Norfolk-Virginia Beach area to celebrate the landing at Cape Henry. Then April 30 will see the Old Point Comfort Celebration as the site of the oldest, Continually fortified place in English America. Next, May 2 marks the celebration at Hampton Roads, commemorating the colonists landing at Newport News. On May 13 the Jamestown Settlement Celebration will follow, and finally on July 30, the anniversary of the first legislative assembly in America, at Jamestown will be commemorated. Yorktown, where Cornwallis surrendered to Washington, and Colonial Williamsburg are also included in the main Festivity places.

The State of Virginia, the National Park Service, and Rockefeller's Colonial Williamsburg, Inc., are all contributing greatly in many ways to the occasion.

A state park near Jamestown Island with a 1,000-car parking lot and numerous visitation centers will be the site of most of the main celebration. A highway, the Colonial Parkway, will connect Yorktown, Williamsburg, and Jamestown, many other improvements will be made in the area.

Many authentic restorations will be seen such as the flagship Susan Constance and other ships which brought the Jamestown Colonists over the James Fort; the "glasshouse" where manufactured glass become America's first skilled industry; the Abby A. Rockefeller folk art collection; a new drama by playwright Paul Green; exhibits at the second oldest college in America, William and Mary; and many more interesting subjects telling the story of the early history of our country.

Another theme of observance will be that the United States has been a patron as long as it was a colony.

Glory Opens Cast Tryouts

Tryouts will be held for the tenth season of the "Common Glory" to uncover new talent in the fields of acting, singing, and dancing in Virginia. The Jamestown Corporation, which produces the historical drama by Paul Green, announced that the preliminary tryouts will be held Saturday afternoon from 1:00 p. m. to 3:00 p. m. at the following places: Lexington, February 25, at the Troubadour Theatre, Washington and Lee University; Williamsburg, March 3, in the Wren Building, College of William and Mary; and at Charlottesville, March 10, in Minor Hall, University of Virginia. The final casting audition will be held all day from 8:30 a. m. Saturday, March 31, at Matoaca Lake Tphitheatre, Williamsburg. The final audition for dancers will be held on the same day in Williamsburg at the Matthew Whaley School.

This popular and talented husband and wife team arrived in America recently after an extended tour through Australia and New Zealand, where they appeared in concerts in all the principal cities. The current tour will be their first concert appearance in America, though they have been heard many times in most of the leading American cities as members of the full D'Oyly Carte Opera Company troupe.

Miss Roberts, especially well known to Gilbert and Sullivan fans, was originally trained for Grand Opera in Italy, where she played the soprano leads in such operas as Dan Pasquale, Tales of Hoffman, and Pagliacci. She has also appeared on Broadway.

From Michigan State College, where the Roberts and Walker team performed in 1953 came this comment: "Our audience was captivated by the outstanding performance."

Music Symphony Will Perform Here Next Tues. at 8 p.m.

The National Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Dr. Howard Mitchell will be here for the 1955-56 Farmville-Longwood College Artist Series next Tuesday at 8 p. m.

Longwood Students will remember the hit scored by the National Symphony during its appearance here in 1953 as one of Prince Edward County's Bicentennial events Dr. Mitchell and his 88 instrumentalists played then to a packed audience.

One of the selections on the program will include "concert Overturer, written recently by Dr. Walter Hartley of Longwood's Music Department. The audience may also expect to hear a varied program featuring works from several different musical eras including one number at least from the recent American scene.

The National Symphony Orchestra was founded by Dr. Hans Kindler in 1933 in Washington, D. C., during the height of the depression. It is the one orchestra that can be called the "regional" orchestra for the Virginia-North Carolina area. It gives countless concerts throughout this region every year, and has played annually for the past 15 years at such institutions as Sweet Briar and Randolph-Macon Woman's College.

Known as the "Orchestra of the Presidents," the National Symphony performs every Wednesday in Washington, D. C., where it gave 40 concerts last year. It is particularly noted for its appearance at the Carter-Barron Amphitheater in Rock Creek Park, Washington, where it also was the accompanying orchestra for other events during the 13-week season at the theater. Last year these events included the "Saint of Bleeker Street," "Ballet Theater," "San Carlo Opera," "National Ballet of Canada," and "Jose Greco and His Spanish Dancers."

Dr. Mitchell took over the reins of the orchestra from Dr. Kindler in 1952, having served in the meantime as assistant conductor, first cellis, and director of the children's concerts. An American conductor, he last year showed foresight enough to make three major recordings with Westminister featuring the work of American composers. So sold was he on the idea that he even invested his own money. The result was that the orchestra's recording of Aaron Copeland's "Appalachian Suite" and "Rodeo" from Billy the Kid and others on this major disc stayed in the top ten of the classical recording poll for six months.

No Scoop, Just Farewell

With our final issue of the Rotunda, we senior members of the staff wish to express our appreciation for the cooperation rendered us during our term of office, and to extend our congratulations and best wishes for many "scoops" to the new staff.

A newspaper can never become an independent operation because its success depends upon the support of the general public. In particular, we think our associates at the Farmville Herald--Harry Lancaster, "Doc", and "Peewee". It has been a pleasure and a worthwhile experience working with them. With everyone's backing, we were able to keep abreast with the college's happenings.

It was our aim in every printed word to keep students, faculty, administration, and alumnae informed of current campus affairs, to reflect the opinions of all the college campus; and to serve as a chronicle of college activities. Above all it was our desire to promote and strengthen the spirit and the finest qualities and standards of Longwood College.

We may at times have expressed views that did not agree with everyone's feelings, however; we believe that in most cases we have presented the ideas of the majority.

Naturally, we as amateurs, have made mistakes and for this we extend our apologies.

In reviewing our last year on the staff, we are reminded of many last minute fillers, 3 a. m. bedtimes, provoking headlines, and hilarious misprints. These combined to make our year one of work plus fun. It has been an experience for each of us that we no doubt profit by throughout life, since scrubbing will never remove the stain of printer's ink. We have learned much in regard to journalistic practice and we will always keep in mind that the presses must continue to roll! Therefore, we now turn our duties over to the in-coming staff. We have great confidence in their ability and we believe that they will successfully uphold the standards of this publication.

With our most sincere appreciation to all -----farewell!

Chi Writes

Chi, founded as an orgainzation on our college campus in 1900, was established and has been maintained in secrecy. It is secrecy which is continued in order to make the work and the purpose of the organization possible. And it is because of this need that Chi endeavors in this article to present our purpose to each student of Longwood.

Chi seeks to embody in our college life the Longwood spirit--that intangible spirit which includes every phase of our daily activities: the deep friendship between individuals; the hearty welcome to visitors in an earnest attempt to show them that which makes our school dear to each of us; the honesty and integrity made possible in all our work by our Honor Code; the pride in broadening our minds through educational experiences; the inspiration to achievement in superior leadership and "followship" in each organizational undertaking; the devotion of alumnae to our Alma Mater upon graduation. We exist to do our part in upholding this spirit and to remind others of their obligation in doing likewise.

Chi has become increasingly aware this year of a thoughtless disregard of this spirit as shown in students' lack of respect for our most perfect symbol of the spirit of Longwood -- Joan of Arc. She stands in the center of all activity and on the long white Colonnade to keep alive the inspiration of our Alma Mater, our love for each other, and the need in our lives to be of service to others. Her ideals of womanhood, of leadership are high and strong but not too far out of reach of any Longwood girl who will accept her challenge to a life of service.

As has been our custom each year, Chi has undertaken a project which will be meaningful to each student. We shall have the Listening Statue of Joan of Arc redone in the hopes of intensifying the beauty of this symbol in our Rotunda. We urge each of you to join us in giving her the respect due our patron saint and to allow her influence a chance to strengthen and to grow in each new day at Longwood.

—Chi

All the classes are to be commended on their participation and school spirit displayed in this activity.

It's Your Choice

This is one of the most important, if not the most important, times at Longwood College. The opportunity and responsibility of choosing your own leaders are yours for the taking.

Election time at Longwood calls for sobriety of thought and wisdom in choice of the candidate in whom you have the utmost faith and confidence. It is necessary to realize that the future successful functions of this student body depend upon your selection of leaders and your staunch support of the services they render you.

TEach candidate is known to be a responsible and capable person and the victors in the election will be those persons in whom the majority of the student body places its unwavering trust. The student body dedicates itself to the support of these leaders in the performance of their duties.

As a whole, the student body of Longwood has the maturity of mind to act in its most intelligent capacity. Therefore, this need only be a reminder of the vast importance your vote carries as you go to the polls.

The candidates are the leaders' choices. The pertinent results of the election remain to be seen --- your choices. We urge your deepest thought, consideration and cooperation in these elections.

I Say There, You Old Dears I May Shed Bully Big Tears

By Jackie Marshall

They say that the best way to treat any subject bording on the verge of emotional distress is the British way. You know—Cool, crisp, and bored.

When I realized that as a staff member of the ROTUNDA, this was to be my last experience of beating my head against the wall in a desperate effort to grasp the merest idea for a feature, goose pimples rose upon my freckled arms, my heart pounded within my rib cavity, and dizzy sensations washed through my brain. Can't figger whether I'm glad sick or grievous!

At any rate, I have decided to try to avoid any possible display of sentimentality that could occur on such an emotional occasion as this because it would be entirely of character. Therefore, I hereby cast my final entry into the well trod annals, well--beating by past unliterary idiots, in the bored British style.

(To be read boredly)

"Oi say there, old girruls. Me toime of duty is 'bout op, eh wot? Oi 'aven't much toime to pawss with you, so give me your undivided attention for a moment, will you? (yawn) Oi've decided to relate to you those things which have become most deah to me at this institution of higher learning. The customary thing for old tomers like me to do, though 'tis a bit of a bore, you know, (yawn) Oi will now proceed to categorize experiences on the campus in a simply ghastly imitation of that lovely means of expression—poetry. Oi'll also throw in a few characteristics which have become (pahdon the expression) deah to my cold, cold heart. Oi do so hope that you girruls will learn to cherish these things as much as I do. Pip, pip, Bully. Tally ho and read on.

CLASSES.....(thank the fawthers they're nearly ovah)

I'll remember the noisy water pipes in philosophy every Monday, Wednesday, Friday at 8:05, (yawn) and the formaldahyde in the Science Building.
(through absorption, I was embalmed while still alive.)

And those phy.ed. clawsses Soon will awl be gawne.

My deepest regards go to the underclawssmen,

And as the "big brass" would say, "Hup 2, 3, 4, girruls. March on!"

Ah, those pages after pages of taking each and every note.

Example: "The Versailles Treaty was—illegible pause)

(Then—) Have you seen my new fur coat?"

Then those teddible examinations.
Bringing the most active time of the tear.

'Twas, by far, the most tiresomely restful,

Unfriendliest social week up here.

PROFESSORS . . .

May they all keep on teaching.
Getting married and giving tests.

May they all have their individual personalities. And wear their scotch plaid vests.

SNACK BAR . . .

The scene of the academic crime,
And locale of the famous coffee break.

A retreat Oi'll really miss Plus Tooty's super duper milkshakes.

ROTUNDA . . .

The lurking malesand the hanging banners.
The smell of fresh wax on the floors.

Joan of Arc,—and take care of her.
Respect her, for her ideals are yours.

PEOPLE . . .

At this point, I feel I must stop,
My cool crispness has begun to expire.
If I tried a bored British goodbye,
I couldn't do it, I'd be a liar.
So, to heck with the bored British way.
(But long live the Queen.
And all hail, Alma Mater.

Religious Emphasis Week Message

Don't Hold God Back In His Plans For Your Life, Collegians Advised

"As long as you live you'll never be anybody but yourself, and making that person the very best that you are capable of is to be attuned to the Divine Plan for mankind," Dr. A. E. Acey told Longwood College students Tuesday.

"This seeking to know one's portion in life is a quest that need never end. There's no telling how far it can take us if we let God have his way with our lives", the Danville minister declared.

Dr. Acey, superintendent of the Danville District of the Methodist Virginia Conference, addressed students in Jarman Hall in an early afternoon assembly as part of the college's Religious Emphasis Week observance. His five-day campus visit was sponsored by the YWCA.

His address, interspersed with witticisms which kept students chuckling as well as thinking, was an extension of his first observation: "It is all right to have; it's well to know; it's better to do, but it's best to be."

In the process of becoming the person God intended for us, it is right to hope, expect and work for material things. They are necessary to the proper enjoyment of life, but it is essential that men prevent "things" from mastering them, Dr. Acey declared.

The "becoming" process also has ample room for knowing. "Understanding one's own resources, and getting the feel of our place in God's scheme of things are essential to a healthy, happy outlook on life," Dr Acey said. The mark of a reasonable adult who has made a happy adjustment to life is that of "wanting to know and understand all of humanity, life and the truth", he said.

Getting Closer

When men reach the "doing stage" they are getting reasonably close to God, the speaker declared. "Constitutional inertia—laziness—has no divinity in it", he said. It is a fundamental error similar to the bad thinking in the title of a Spiritual: "I Want to Git to Heaven Sittin' Down."

"The greatest tragedy in life that can happen to us is to be denied the privilege of work," he said "There are too many adults, however, who, like the little boy in expounding on what he wanted to become in life, replied, "A returned missionary."

The very highest peak of the process is the "being part," Dr. Acey concluded. It is God's hope that each of us will assess our resources then be the best person that they enable us to be.

When we do that, everything else falls in place naturally, he declared.

Italian Children's Choir To Present Concert In Local Curch, March, 23

The children's choir from the Casa Materna orphanage in Naples, Italy, will give a concert March 22, at 8 P. M. in the sanctuary of the Farmville Methodist Church.

The choir has made two concert tours in Europe but this marks its first appearance in the United States. In four months the children will fill more than 100 engagements in 21 states returning to Italy June 24.

The Casa Materna orphanage is celebrating its 50 anniversary this year. It was founded by the Rev. Riccardo Santi, a Methodist minister, in 1905 when he took several destitute orphans into his home from the slums of Naples. The orphanage now houses 280 children and opens school classes to 250 additional day students. Dr. Fabio Santi, son of the founder, now directs the orphanage and will accompany the choir to the United States.

Casa Materna suffered heavy damage during World War II. Some buildings were completely destroyed by bombs and other buildings were severely damaged.

The children's choir hopes to acquaint the American people with the work of Casa Materna and to raise sufficient funds through free-will offerings to provide adequate housing for all the children.

The choir was organized and trained by Joel Warner, an American volunteer social worker who is managing the tour under the sponsorship of the Casa Materna Aid Society. It is composed of 25 children from nine to nineteen years of age. The program will include classical, liturgical, operatic and folk music.

The concert is open to the public and an offering will be collected during the program.

THE TALLEST AND THE SHORTEST TIGERS—The long and short of the Hampden-Sydney Tiger basketball team have made good records. Left to right, Ted Shepherd, 6' 6", of Washington, D. C.; Captain Chuck Mottley, 5' 9", of Alexandria, and Russ Holcomb, 6' 6", of Alexandria.

Tigers Depart Tomorrow For Capitol To Enter Into Mason–Dixon Tourney; Mottley, Richards, Key Leave Team

With a regular season record of 14 wins against 10 losses tucked away, Hampden - Sydney's Tigers depart for Washington, D. C., on Thursday morning for another crack at Mason-Dixon tournament laurels. The Bengals, fifteen strong are seeded in fourth place in the tourney pairings and will meet Catholic University at 8:35 p. m. on Thursday in the CU gym.

The flip of a coin by conference commissioner Paul Menton in Baltimore on Sunday morning broke the deadlock and pushed American down to fifth place while allowing the Tigers to retain their fourth place of a year ago. As a result the Tigers meet 6th place Catholic while American must cope with the third seeded Roanoke in the opening round.

The Tigers find themselves in the same bracket with Loyola of Baltimore, the number one seeded team, which plays Washington College in the opening round. Second seeded Mount St. Mary's takes on eighth place Bridgewater to round out the first day's action.

In the opening round of last year's tourney the Tigers easily got by Bridgewater, but ran into trouble against Loyola on the second night. Loyola stopped the Tigers twice this year in regular season 67- 53 at Hampden - Sydney, but recounting, the Tigers feel that their performance left something to be desired, and would like another shot at the Greyhounds. And if they can get by Thursday's clash, a possibility, and Loyola can down Washington, a probability, then the stage would be set for the two to meet on Friday.

Captain Chuck Mottley, a guard from Alexandria, center Phil Key of Roanoke, and Lynchburg forward John Richards will be making their final appearances for the red and gray during the three day affair. All are seniors. Mottley has been the Bengal's sparkplug for the past two years and has a deadly accurate shot which has paced the Tigers to several wins this season. Key, in his final appearance of the season turned in brilliant performances, rebounding well under both boards and hitting double figures several times. Richards has one of the best set shots on the team and has been improving rapidly of late.

In addition to Mottley, the Washington gathering will be somewhat of a homecoming for two other Tigers, center Russ Holcomb and forward Ted Shepherd. The two are the tallest men on the Tiger squad, standing at 6-6, and both will see starting action. Shepherd, a native of Washington, took over his starting role a week ago after losing it to Horsely Putt against Lynchburg College earlier this month. Putt has been sidelined for a week with a back injury), but is expected to be able to see spot action in the tourney. Holcomb, from Alexandria, is the Tiger's high scoring ace with 378 points, this season.

Guard Doug Joyce and forward Warren Carter, two definite starters who hit well in Hampden-Sydney's strong finish, are expected to be big assets as the Tigers take to the Catholic U. hardwood.

Coach Weenie Miller is optimistic about the upcoming slate, and he has a good right to be. His Tigers finished their season very strong with wins over Norlfolk Division. Bridgewater and Richmond Professional. In two of the three clashes his chargers hit better than 90 points. In commenting Miller said, "We've been pointing for the tournament all season, and we don't plan to go up there and not make a good account of ourselves.

Players Group To Present Fateful Spanish Tragedy

By H. V. LANCASTER, JR.

"Blood Wedding" by the Twentieth century Spanish playwright, Frederico Garcia Lorca will be presented by Longwood Players March 8, 9, and 10 in Jarman Hall at 8 p. m. Rehearsals are now underway for the expressionistic tragedy which will feature Mrs. Patsy Abernathy Rice, a senior of Virginia Beach, James W. Parker, senior from Farmville, and Fred M. Stables, junior from Crewe, in leading roles.

Fred Stables will play the part of Leonardo the central character of the play whose love for the bride, played by Patsy Abernathy Rice, is the chief source of tension in the drama. James Parker is the bridegroom. Although Leonardo is his first major role, Fred Stables has appeared in many plays on the Longwood stage and is particularly remembered for his portrayal of the villianous Marvin Hudgens in "Dark of the Moon" last spring.

The play itself is a vivid demonstration of how fate can affect the lives of people. The bridegroom's father and brother have both been killed, and his mother, played by Anne Brooking, is determined to perpetuate their family through her only remaining son. The bride, torn between her love for Leonardo and her duty towards the bridegroom, goes to the altar with the latter only to discover that even then she cannot overcome destiny.

Love Wins Out

Leonardo who has already been married to another woman for several years, is unable to suppress his love for the bride. His love for the girl he cannot have is revived and made unbearable by her wedding and results in a crisis culminating in death. Loca, the playwright, heightens the tension and the feeling of impending tragedy throughout the play through the use of minor characters, townspeople on all-night errands and finally through the appearance of two mystic characters, the Moon, played by Molly Workman, and Death, in the disguise of a beggar woman portrayed by Nancy Hendricks.

Other members of the cast are: Donna Benn as the servant; Herbert Greenberg as the groom's father; Carl Scott as Leonardo's wife; Connie Edwards as Leonardo's mother-in-law; and Flo Soghoian as the neighbor woman. Patricia Leake, Catherine Osman and Lynne Hagenbotham portray three young girls who appear in the last act.

John Carter, Ben Prince, and Bernard Warren will be the three woodcutters and wedding guests.

The part of the bride will be played by Hannah Haile, Elizabeth Riddle, Micky Duarte, Suzanne Falson, Jane Adams, Gale Branch, Vicki Brinkley, and Octavia Barnes.

"Blood Wedding" is being designed and directed by David C. Wiley, of the Longwood College English department, assisted by Dorothy Rector, president of the Longwood Players. Dr. Walter S. Hartley, assistant professor of music, has composed special background music for the play. Patt Billups and Pattie Parker are the stage managers.

Other members of the production staff include Mary Mayo, costumes; Barbara Burnside, scenery; Violet Marshall, sound; and Patricia Leake, publicity. Pattie Parker will also have charge of the chorography.

Gasp!! Wierd, Eerie Gifts

By Flo Soghoian

Don't be so downhearted. I've found the "ideal" gift to give that special friend of yours--thanks to Sam Kramer of the STUDIO OF SAM KRAMER in the fabulous city of New York (Phone GR 7-6291). Oh, yes--dear Sammy just wired me of the following overwhelming offer:

". . . Dear Impulsive Friend! ; We coax and torture sullen silver and gold into the most amazing objects. Gigantic rings, necklets and brooches, tie clips, cuff-links, and even wedding rings. . . but like nothing seen before: Germs and worms and amoebas and tissues and kidneys. Yes, and fragments of whitish coral, like decayed bone, clutched by silver . . .startled eyes with teardrops dropping. . schizophrenic dancers, pendant . . and nightmare creatures alive with tourmalines and perilot and chrysoberyl. . malachite and chalcedony . . . and moonstones glimmering. Harry Friend, it will make you glad!"

If you're wondering where Sam's studio is situated here are his unique words:". . . On a famous street, in a famous section of a famous city there is a legendary and unexpected place. A mushroom is painted on the window. The doornob is a bronze hand, uncanny, with fingers extended. Here's an alchemist's workshop crossed with a museum and a madhouse. Oh what great and magic gifts. . . for women, men and monsters! Recently a calloused critic gasped a single comment. . . 'GASP! he gasped. You will say the same! (Yes--we're open evenings. . .)"

Don't panic. It's really a very fine offer.

Down Beat

It has been a little more than two years since Down Beat magazine selected Ralph Marterie as "the Down Beat orchestra" and began to follow his career closely in the hope of (1) learning about some of the ailments of the dance band industry and (2) seeing what difficulties and woes might lie in store for an orcehstra setting out in troubled times.

At that time, Ralph had only recently given up a comfortable job as staff trumpeter on the Chicago ABC outlet to try his hand at becoming a leader. Several records he had made for Mercury with a studio orchestra had not only sold encouragingly well, but stirred up enough interest among ballrooms and colleges in the area to warrant taking a chance at quitting ABC and hitting the road.

A couple of months after the Down Beat orchestra went on the road in earnest, it got its first major break. The Marterie disc of "Pretend" hit the shops and became the first dance band instrumental in many years, to top the hit parade.

Then, just as "Pretend" had about faded from the picture, Marterie tapped the jackpot once more with his infectious, uptempo "Caravan" which leaped to a million sales.

With many signs pointing to a big resurgence in dance band popularity, Marterie now has the experience and know-how to capitalize on it in a big way. He is, as they say, in business to stay.

Stables, Junior From Crewe, Brings Experience To Stage

By H. V. LANCASTER, JR.

History and drama are the major interests of Freddie Stables, a junior at Longwood College, whose portrayal of the young and passionate Leonardo will be featured in the Spanish tragedy, "Blood Wedding," to be presented this week by the Longwood Players.

Freddie's interest in dramatics extends back to his days at Crewe High School where he participated in several plays. One of these, "Happy Journey," in which he played the role of the father, was given in State-wide competition at the one-act play festival in Charlottesville.

Lives In Crewe

When not in Farmville, Freddie lives on a 270-acre dairy farm near Crewe with his family. He is a member of St. Matthews Methodist Church in Nottoway, where he served as church treasurer for one year. He also was treasurer for the John Wesley Jones sub-district of the Methodist Youth Fellowship. Recently he joined the staff of Radio Station WSVS in Crewe as part-time announcer.

On the Longwood campus, Fred Stables has taken an active part in many extracurricular activities. He is the president of the Men's Student Government Association and Honor Council, vice-president of the Longwood Players, past secretary of Tau Theta Pi, social fraternity, and is a member of Alpha Psi Omega, honorary dramatic fraternity.

Bachelor of Science

Enrolled in a curriculum leading to a Bachelor of Science degree in secondary education, Freddie is majoring in social sciences and history. For him the economic interpretation of history, as expressed in the writings of such men as Charles McLean Andrews, is particularly fascinating. Freddie feels that though economics is not the only factor involved, it is the key to a greater insight into the why's and wherefore's of history.

Besides social sciences and history, Fred hopes to be certified to teach English so that he will be better qualified to help with dramatics in high school and to provide himself with a broader background for teaching.

Freddie Stables, portrayer of Leonardo, will be among those appearing in "Blood Wedding" tomorrow night.

After graduating from Longwood College, he plans to teach high school for several years and then perhaps begin study for his master's degree.

Distinguished Himself

As an actor, Fred Stables distinguished himself in the role of Marven Hudgens in "Dark of the Moon" last spring. More recently he appeared as the sophisticated Patrice Bombelles in "Ring Around the Moon." He has also portrayed the Rev. Cannon Chausable in Oear Wilde's "The Importance of Being Earnest" and Prince Escalus in Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet." In addition to appearing in numerous one-act plays, he directed the one-act comedy, "A Good Woman," which was presented last year as a part of the annual men's production sponsored jointly by the Men's Student Government Association and Tau Theta Pi.

Leonardo, the character which Fred Stables will portray, is both the hero and the villain of Frederico Garcia Lorca's tragedy, "Blood Wedding." He is a character filled with conflicting passions, a passion to restrain himself and to conform to the dictates of so-

Care Of Orphans Gives Big Reward To The Rev. Santi

A story of suffering and deprivation is behind every child composing the choir which will present a concert here Thursday, March 22, at the Farmville Methodist Church. This group is cared for at the orpanage of Casa Materna in Naples, Italy.

The orpanage was founded by the Rev. Riccardo Santi, who in June, 1905, befriended two destitute youngsters selling matches in the Naples slums. When he learned that they had no home, he took them to the parsonage and shared his family's meager rations with them. He kept them overnight, intending to send them to an orphanage in the morning. Since no place could be found, they became members of his family.

Within a few weeks, he had befriended other children. He and Mrs. Santi were caring for them with the help of the parishioners. They soon had to move to larger quarters as the "family" continued to grow. Since then, thousands of helpless children have found a home at Casa Materna, and many people of all races and creeds have provided for the continuation of the work of the Rev. and Mrs. Santi.

During World War II, the build-

Elections To Begin For Minor Offices

Minor elections will be held the the third week in March. At this time the student body will select vice-presidents, secretaries, and treasurers for the major offices chosen last week.

The Dining Room Hostesses will be nominated by Student Government and will also be voted on by the students next week.

Shirley Blankenship, chairman of major and minor elections, stresses the importance of these elections, after reporting a high percentage of voting for major offices. She encourages an equally high number of voters for the coming minor elections.

Alumnae To Meet Here March 10; Doors Of Alumnae House To Open

Founders and alumnae will be welcomed into the new Alumnae House for the first time.

Longwood College alumnae will meet on the campus March 10, the Seventy-Second Founders' Day, to become acquainted with Dr. Francis G. Lankford, Jr., the new President of the college, and to see the Alumnae House which will be opened for the first time for the ocasion. The college has recently made the house, which was built in the late 1830's, available to the Alumnae Association.

Activities of the day will begin with a coffee hour in the Alumnae House to be given for visiting alumnae and the faculty of the college by the Farmville Alumnae Chapter.

An academic procession of the faculty and seniors will proceed to Jarman Auditorium for the Founders' Day Session at 11:00 a. m. Mrs. Mildred Dickinson Davis, chairman of the Founders Day Committee, will welcome the guests; and Mrs. Margaret Simkins, President of the Longwood Alumnae Association, will introduce Dr. Lankford, who will give the main address.

New Room Welcomes Workers For Rotunda

The Rotunda staff has moved into its new room located at the rear of the Home Economics Building.

This is a much larger room with an outside entrance off the back driveway of the main campus. Redecorating, which was begun and completed in the past week, consisted of painting the entire room light green with white below the chair rail.

Among the outstanding features of the room is a long, narrow, black-topped table built the length of one wall, which is quite suitable for typing space.

The room, which has not been occupied for the past three years, was once Miss Tupper's upholstering classroom.

Furniture and equipment were moved in Monday. Here in their new office the Rotunda staff hopes to better serve the students of Longwood College.

It's Up To You

It seems that an increasingly small amount of students are aware that there is a large white house about two miles from here which is available to us anytime we wish to use it. It would be interesting to ask ourselves how many of us have taken advantage of the facilities offered by Longwood Estate.

The problem of maintaining Longwood House for use by the student body when it isn't really used is now under study. An endeavor has been made to discover why the Estate is not more in demand by individual students, organizations, and groups.

After some investigation it became evident that one of the main difficulties involved in student use is the matter of accessability to the House, or, in other words, transportation to and from there other than walking.

A possible solution might be found in use of the Longwood bus for this purpose. The bus, like the House, is available to the students as the need for it arises. Arrangements might be made for transportation to Longwood Estate at almost anytime an appreciable group wishes to go.

The bus has already been scheduled to make a trip at 5:30 on Sunday evenings for the waffle supper. A similar arrangement might be made for another specific night of the week when student groups would be particularly planned for.

If adequate provisions were made for transportation, it would be fitting that the various organizations and clubs on campus consider use of Longwood House for their annual banquets and dinners.

The entire matter is now in the process of consideration by a faculty and student committee. At this time suggestions by students or student groups are welcome and will be considered. If Longwood House is to be maintained and to remain a pleasurable tradition, some means should be taken to make it more closely associated with and accessable to student activities.

The Time Is Now

Here, there, everywhere, and Longwood College is no different! It's that time of year again! Our campus takes on a new light as these warm, sunny months begin to arrive. The resolutions, so faithfully made with the new year, begin to become dim remembrances in our lives. It is much better to put off parallel another week, wait a few days before completing the research paper, or leave those lesson plans for another night, as the spring fever "bug" invades our campus.

This year is no different from any other, as far as capturing the melancholy mood of living. Roof sessions, bridge games, TV hour, and lengthy walks are all characteristic of this favorite season at Longwood.

"Why waste time studying during study hour when it is too noisy anyhow? Why not get late lights and then study awhile? What's the use of taking phone duty tonight; I know the calls won't be for me. So what if I wear bermudas in the dining hall? Only one call down and that doesn't mean anything! Who cares if she does have two tests tomorrow, I'm ready to hear this new record by Mitch Miller. As for sweeping under my bed, all I have to do is let my bedspread touch the floor. This business of living by rules is getting me down. I'm ready to give up and declare a mid-semester siesta for a month or so!"

These are only a small number of our remarks made during the spring months. It's no pleasant task to continue being careful of the dormitory regulations, as this season for relaxed living approaches. "All winter we've been pretty good about these rules, so now is the time to forget a few and really live it up!!"

Maybe if we could stop for a minute or two, and think over the times we've wanted a quiet night to study, someone to answer the hall phone, or resisted the urge to break the record playing twenty-five consecutive times next door. It is hard to be considerate all of the time, especially if we've done our required assignments, and feel like playing the rest of study hour.

Even though we are guilty of these thoughts as spring arrives, we should try to continue abiding by our dorm rules. It will be difficult for each of us with these March winds, April showers, and May sun tans, but we would find it no doubt well worth the effort!

Books For Better Living

During Religious Emphasis Week the Y. W. C. A. displayed a group of books which marks the beginning of a new and more up-to-date library. Fifteen new books are now available to the student body in the "Y" Cabinet Room and by following a simple "checking out routine" students may take these books to their rooms for a period up to two weeks.

Several types of books have been purchased. Those who may be called upon to lead prayers would find such books as "Christ and the Fine Arts," "Abundant Living," and "Imitation of Christ" helpful. Those feeling the need of challenge or inspiration would find it in "A Faith for Tough Times," "Live With Your Emotions," and "Life Looks Up."

Poem and verse lovers should take notice of "The Best Loved Poems of the American People" and "Light From Many Lamps." There are a couple of novels also, such as "Gift From the Sea" and "In His Steps" which make for profitable leisure reading.

It is hoped that students will find these books helpful and will use them freely. Instructions for checking the books out are printed in the Cabinet room.

Carter Announces May Day Progress

The fantasy-type theme for this year's May Day, which is now being written by "Baby" Carter, is nearing completion. For the first time the theme for May Day is an original creation.

The story, centered around a dream of Raggedy Ann and Andy, will have a fairy queen as its main attraction, along with many other imaginary characters.

Several dances will also be performed, three by physical education classes. The others will be selections by different students.

"Baby" Carter, also head of the theme committee, reports that the story will soon be entitled, too.

LC Lady, The Friendly Type, Encounters Monster—Yipe!

by Jackie Marshall

I have been told—in confidence, of course, of the most amazing incidents which once occurred in the life of a Longwood lady. The fantastic relation of the incident was of such an incredible degree that I could hardly believe the actual words as they swam down my tortured auditory canals.

However, the look of anguished horror which crept onto the face of this L. L. (Longwood Lady, you idiot) as she told of her harrowing experience, proved beyond the shadow of a doubt that—this—was—her—life!!!

I shall do my utterly utter best to remember each gory detail and to tell it to you, my horror-hungry buddies.

It seems that this L. L. was at home alone due to the fact that there was nobody else home. She was in the tedious process of trimming the cat's whiskers when a knock came at the front door. She could tell it was at the front door because of the harsh splintering sound of the wooden paneling as it shattered into shreds. She quickly tip-toed into the hall and threw open the door knob. (That's all there was left.) And what to her wondering eyes should appear but a miniature monster wearing strange gear.

It was very, very small and she nearly stepped on it when it squealed indignantly. It was less than a foot tall but was rather plump. It had well-manicured toenails, prominent knee caps, and four rotten cabbage colored green eyeballs.

Being the friendly type she was, L. L. passionately threw her arms around the green-warted body and shyly asked it to come in. It immediately sprang to its hands and trotted in L. L., being the friendly type, asked its name, it answered, "My name is Nekiboy-soyboy. I'm from planet Z. My wife's name is Hokeygirlgirlgirl, and we have produced 350 future citizens of planet Z.

"I was passing over the earth in my flying seltzer bottle when my carbonated water tank sprang a leak. I'm in need of nourishment. Have you any chlorophyllized Alka Seltzer? It's good for my complexion, you know. Brings out millions of green warts. We Z-ians are quite proud of our warts. They show so much character, love of frogs, and provide excellent exercise for body lice.

"May I hang from your ceiling by my feet? The blood ends to settle to them after a length of time." L. L. being the friendly type urged it to do so while she prepared its nourishment. It climbed into the glass, absorbed the mixture through the tops of its warts, then burping with satisfaction ate the glass.

The drink must have had an odd effect on it because suddenly it lost its cuddly, green-warted charm and all four rotten cabbage colored green eyeballs fastened greedily on L. L.—who was the friendly type.

Feeling a slight air of danger as it pulled out knives, torch guns and atomic bomb capsules, she shrank behind a chair, but immediately grew again when its hand touched her leg.

At this point, I, being the friendly type, take the greatest pleasure in announcing to you (you idiot) that it pulled the leg of L. L. who was the friendly type just as I am pulling the leg of you who are—the friendly type?

"Listening at Longwood," Radio Show, To Reveal All—Well—Almost All

by Flo Sogholan

Tea for four at three proved to be quite entertaining and enlightening. The four consisted of Jeanne Saunders, new editor of The Colonnade; Carolyn Stoneman, The Virginia's newly-chosen editor: Linda Garrison, The Rotunda's new editor; and I sat in as the fourth. (Tea consisted of a very worn tea bag and some lukewarm water.)

We had lots of fun talking about various activities on campus and readily exchanged views on them. The girls enthusiastically revealed some of their plans and aims for future publications, creating most interesting conversations.

Why not tune in your radios next Monday afternoon, March 12 at 2:45 to "Listening at Longwood" and—who knows—Carolyn, Linda, and Jeanne might supply us with answers to these questions and even tell more!

Flash! Traci Faison will be featured at the keyboard, so don't miss "Listening at Longwood."

According to the "Inventory of Economic Research Studies" in the Fifth Federal Reserve District, only three Virginia colleges are listed as producing studies in economic education. These are Longwood College, University of Virginia, and the Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

The "Inventory of Economic Research Studies" published and distributed by the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, is the sixth inventory of research studies of the economy of the Fifth Federal Reserve District. Included in it are the studies completed or in process from January 1, 1955 and December 31, 1955, in Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina and South Carolina.

According to the "Inventory," Mrs. Ruth Taliaferro of the Department of Business Education of Longwood College is proceeding with her research entitled "Accounting and Financial Policies of the Civil Aeronautics Board in Relation to the Air Transport Industry." Dr. M. L. Landrum, chairman of the Department of Business Education, says that Mrs. Taliaferro expects her study to be completed in 1956.

Nabs, Nickels Profit Frosh

"Do you have two nickels a dime? If you are one of those people who spend endless time going from door to door in search of change, here is a point of interest for you.

The Freshman Class has provided Longwood College with its latest means for spending money. There have been installed in our hallowed halls six large, attractively designed, and very tempting Lance nab machines.

If you are one of those people who firmly believes that a nickel just won't buy what it used to buy, you have surprise in store. Only five cents will secure for you any one of seven delicious Lance products.

Our Freshman Class, which makes a percentage of the profit from these machines, needs your support. They are working night and day to keep the machines filled with Lance "goodies," so disregard your diet and run, don't walk, to your nearest nab machine.

In the near future, the Frosh hope to provide change-makers for the machines. Meanwhile, from any member of the Freshman Class you may purchase three regular size five cent pieces made of pure nickel, for the rediculously low price of twenty-five cents!

Beginning Tryouts For Common Glory Get 30 Applicants

Production officials of The Common Glory will return home Saturday, March 3 for the second of a series of three preliminary auditions looking toward the casting of the 1956 edition of the Paul Green historical drama.

The first of the tryouts, conducted last Saturday at the Troubadour Theatre of Washington and Lee University, Lexington, drew a turnout of more than 30 persons, principally from western Virginia, interested in participating this year for the first time in the drama.

All categories of production employees, with the exception of orchestra members, are being auditioned at the three "preliminaries." Members of the choir and of the technical crews will be chosen on the basis of the early tryouts. Qualified actors and dancers, however, will be invited to a final casting audition at Matoaka Lake Amphitheatre on March 31, when they will be required to compete against former members of the company, and against new applicants from outside Virginia.

This Saturday's drama auditions and technical interviews will be held in the Wren Kitchen (basement of the Wren Building), College of William and Mary. The choral applicants will be heard at the College's music building, and dance tryouts will be conducted in the gymnasium of the Matthew Whaley School there. The hours for all tryouts and interviews will be conducted at the University of Virginia, Charlottesville, March 10.

A big event in the college each year is the winning of the Color Cup. This is awarded, by the Athletic Association, to the class color winning the majority of the athletic events held on the campus. Sister classes support each other and strive to win each event contested.

Each year the Cup, which is placed on the mantle in the Home Office, bears the colors of the classes winning the most points during the preceding year. The Green and Whites have won it four years, and the Red and Whites have had possession of it for the past two years. However, for this year, the Green and Whites are now ahead with 15 points.

Since these coming class games will count points toward the winning the Color Cup, it is urged that everyone come out and support her class and her sister class teams.

Holcomb Honored On All-Little Eight; Carter, Mottley Take Second Place Posts

Russ Holcomb, Hampden-Sydney's big man, was named for the second consecutive year to All Little Eight basketball team. The 6' 7" junior from Alexandria led the Tigers during the 1955-56 campaign with a point production of 378 for an average of 15.8 points a game.

Joining Holcomb on the first honor quint were two other repeaters, forward Dave Foltz and guard Larry Pence. Guard Dorsey Clayton moved up from his second team berth of last season and forward Jimmy Smith was a brand new addition in the mythical lineup.

Foltz, Roanoke's hardwood king, led his team to it's fifth Little Eight crown in as many years as he rang up 415 points during the regular season and boasted a game average of 19.9.

Bridgewater College, which managed to grab a third place in the league, placed it's high-scoring combo of Pence and Clayton among the top five small-College players in Virginia. Clayton, a 5' 8" fast-breaker, averaged 20.4 points a titl, while his teammate, Pence, hit the hoops for a 18.7-point average.

Doug Joyce, ace playmaking guard of the Bengals, grabbed an honorable mention berth along with Tiller and Ruiz (Lynchburg) Rodgers and Howard (RPI), Sperger and Hauks (Roanoke), Smith (Norfolk Division), and Bennett (Emory and Henry).

The honor squad was chosen by Virginia sportswriters, sportscasters and Little Eight head coaches.

Foltz was the only senior named to the first quint. The remaining four stars return for another year of hardwood action.

Macon managed the fifth slot on the first five after a tight ballot between Mottley (H-S), Haupt (Roanoke), and Knickerbocker (Norfolk Division). The 5' and 11" forward scored 304 points for a 14.6 average.

The Tigers, runners-up in league standings, placed two performers on the second team of the recognition squad. Chuck Mottley, H-S captain and number one set-shot, captured a second string berth for the second year in a row. The hustling little guard ended the season with a 10.3-point average.

Warren Carter ranked next to Holcomb in his team's point totals. The lanky junior forward hit on 108 field goals with a total of 278 points during the campaign just completed.

Rounding out the second team selections were Harry Knickerbocker, Norfolk division forward; Ken Joyner, Randolph-Macon center; and Bruce Haupt, Roanoke guard.

various phases of school life were enacted as the history of the classes of 1895, 1905, 1911, and 1917 were reviewed. Dr. Jarman's address for the program was called "A Rambling Walk."

There was also an afternoon event and a baseball game as the alumnae tried to "pack all of the love and loyalty of preceding years" into one day.

WFLO Names New Facility; Defense Measures To Begin

WFLO announces that it has added to its facilities another public service. The WFLO 1000 Watt transmitter has been modified to permit broadcasting on 640 kilocycles in addition to the assigned frequency of 870 kilocycles. The 640 frequency is one of two assigned for use in event of a national emergency. In the latter case all standard AM stations will broadcast on either 640 kilocycles or 1240 kilocycles.

WFLO will also broadcast a Conelrad test alert once weekly at various times to acquaint it's audience with this national defense measure. The test alert will be preceded by an announcement that a Conelrad test is about to be broadcast. The transmitter will then be turned off for 5 seconds; returned to the air with no modulation for 5 seconds, and again removed from the air for 5 seconds. The transmitter is then returned to the air and a 1000 cycle tone will be heard for 15 seconds followed by an announcement that the preceding was Conelrad test conductived in cooperation with Civil Defense in the interest of national civil defense.

In the event of an actual alert WFLO will broadcast a Conelard alert which will differ from the test alert only in that the alert will not be preceded by an announcement, and the announcement following the tone will state that a radio alert has been received and will advise listeners in the Southside area to switch their receivers to 640 kilocycles to receive civil defense information for this area. At the conclusion of this announcement WFLO will leave its normal frequency of 870 kilocycles to switch to 640 kilocycles. In the event that an alert is received after WFLO's normal broadcasting hours the station will be on the air on 640 as soon as the information is received.

Since there will be many other stations on the 640 frequency, the reception will not be as clear as for the regular station frequency. Other differences from normal operation will include: the station will not be identified by it's call letters since the purpose of Conelard is to make radio navigation by an enemy bomber impossible. The announcer will give ciety and convention and a passion for a girl he can neither legally nor morally possess. The conflict brews like a storm within him, and is heightened by the girl's declaration to marry another man.

Stands Aloof

Throughout the play, Leonardo stands aloof, withdrawn, and seems to be only vaguely conscious of what is going on about him until he finally takes action. It is significant to note that of all the characters only Leonardo is given a specific name; the others are designated as the Bride, the Bridegroom, the Father, etc.

The chief problem confronting Freddie is to convey to the audience the emotional struggle within Leonardo and to sustain and intensify it as the play progresses.

Use of Symbols

The use of symbols is an important means of intensifying the somber mood of the play. First there is the knife which the Mother abhors because both her husband and son have been stabbed to death. Then there is the chorus which seems to echo certain passages as reminders of happiness which should but do not exist or as hollow warnings of things to come. Just before the climax, two symbolic characters appear. They are cold, impersonal Moon and Death in the guise of a beggar woman.

Shakespeare said that all the world is a stage. We might venture to say that the reverse is also true; that a stage is the world, a world which is concentrated and condensed for our inspection, a world where human desires and emotions are thrown into sharp focus, and a world where characters are pitted against destiny for our entertainment, enlightenment and edification.

Freddie Stables and the cast of "Blood Wedding" will do their best to present some evidence in support of this argument.

his name and the names of local officials which will serve to identify WFLO to listeners in the Southside area. Local and national civil defense information will be broadcast. Another difference to be noted is that the station will not remain on the air without interruption but will be on the air for 30 seconds followed by an "off the air" period of one minute. This cycle will be repeated continuously for the duration of the alert and information for the area will be broadcast during the 30 second on the air cycle.

Stay tuned to WFLO, the only station in this area equipped to continues service when it will be most needed—in the event of a national emergency.

'Heidi' Noted Swiss Classic, To Be Shown Here Tonight

Lately, there seems to have been a deluge of pictures about mountains, mountain - climbing and the terrors and joys of such experiences. Here is yet another film about such terrain, but with an idyllic quality that ideally suits this latest version of the children's classic by Johanna Spyri. Producer Lazar Wechsler again chose Switzerland as a background for a film and his on-the-spot locations have pastoral beauty and quiet realism.

For U. S. audiences, the picture has been dubbed into English with the American voices doing a better acting job than is usually found. The synchronization, though, is still far from perfect, which distracts from the general charm of the film. However, the children, which form the greatest market for "Heidi," should find this a disturbing element in a film that should please them greatly. While adult audiences may get restless at some of the more obvious plot developments, they too may well find it a picture of considerable charm.

The familiar story tells of the little Swiss orphan girl who lives with her grandfather in the mountains. His quarrels with the villagers have kept them apart. One day Heidi is whisked away by her aunt to a new life in the big city of Frankfort. The aunt works for a wealthy man there whose daughter appears to be a hopeless cripple. Heidi becomes the girl's playmate and through Heidi's ecouragement and patience, she learns to walk again.

Her father, out of gratitude and love, wants to keep Heidi, but her homesickness becomes almost unbearable. So back she goes to her mountain village, making her grandfather so joyous that he once again makes peace with God and his neighbors.

A lovely and talented little Swiss girl named Elsbeth Sigmund plays the title role with a great deal of professional skill. She is surrounded by a capable cast of Swiss and German players. Luigi Comencini directs from the screen play by Richard Schweizer and Wilhelm M. Treichlinger.

SCA Group Plans Delinquency Idea

Mr. Quarker' and Richard Preston will be the principal speakers at the SCA State Convention at Longwood March 16-17. Mr. Quaker is a colorful costumed speaker who personifies the spirt of the 18th century Quakers, who left their permanent impressions on America's freedon and liberties.

Mr. Quaker, portrayed by Val Gould, has traveled more than 200,000 miles in the past year waging a campaign against juvenile delinquency on the behalf of the principles of American liberty.

Through his talks to school audiences he stresses the importance of becoming well informed and ready to assume leadership of our government which well-informed teenagers will soon take over themselves. In his talk to the convention he will illustrate the basic principles and fundamentals of Americanism and good citzenship.

Richard Preston, the second speaker, is a memer of the Maryland Executive Committee of Student Councils. He is a senior at Preston High School in Preston Md.

Preston has been amember of the Student Council for five years and is presently serving as president of the statewide Upper Association of Student Councils of Maryland.

The two-day convention of members of high school students in Virginia will bring more than 700 boys and girls to Farmville.

450 Alumnae Hear Lankford Speak On LC Readiness For Swelling Rolls

Four hundred and fifty alumnae of Longwood College heard President Francis G. Lankford, Jr., outline his plans Saturday for expanded facilities and continuation of the selective admissions program as a two-fold means of taking care of the expected influx of students in the next few years.

Dr. Lankford gave the main address at the Seventy-Second Founder's Day program held in Jarman Auditorium at 11 a. m. He said that the increase in enrolment at Longwood College over the past few years and the increase in applications for admission to the college next fall necessitates a new dormitory building. If the college is to carry out its mission of preparing an adequate supply of qualified teachers for the public school system.

The size of the student body has increased from 715 last year to 818 this year, and applications for admission next fall have increased 11 per cent. In the next biennium Dr. Lankford expects a dormitory building to house 200 additional students and a building for the business education department to be completed. In the meantime 15 additional students can be housed in the Sanford House recently purchased by the college. Plans for further expansion of facilities during the two succeeding biennia include additions to the library stacks and wings, a modern demonstration house for the home economics department, and a building for classrooms and offices.

Dr. Lankford said, "It gives me great satisfaction that the dominant purpose of Longwood College is the preparation of teachers. I hope I may be able to prove worthy of the traditions of this grand old college." He pointed out that although teacher education will remain the primary function of the college, modifications may be made in other aspects of the program from time to time. He said that this year for the first time, Longwood has entered into a medical technology program with the cooperation of the University of Virginia. Students entering this program of study will attend Longwood for three years and the University of Virginia the fourth year. Upon completion of the required study, Longwood will confer on the candidates a B. S. degree in Medical Technology.

He also made mention of the graduate program recently established at the college of the services offered by the college to the public schools of Virginia and extension work available in Southside Virginia. Such extension courses are offered through the University of Virginia but are taught by the members of the Longwood faculty.

Dr. Lankford explained the co-new State Council of Higher Education as to curriculum and expansion of facilities. The bill establishing the Council has been passed by both houses of the General Assembly, and the Governor is expectd to sign it.

In speaking of the selective admissions program established at Longwood in 1947, Dr. Lankford said, "Not all secondary school graduates have the scholastic ca-

Mystery Of Swamp Marks Production Set For March 23

By NANCY BRUBECK

Around the word, quicksand, there lurks mystery. That is the key to Freshman production. "Quicksand" is an an original mystery designed to keep you guessing for the entire performance. However, if you are not a mystery fan there are songs and dances to keep you entertained.

This year's Freshman production is set in a swamp and a small town located there. It is centered around Ben, who is a hermit living in the depth of the swamp. Ben, played by Sandy Sandidige of Lynchburg, is constantly bothered by a young girl, Jody, who loves the swamp. Jody is played by Betty Griggs.

Following one of Jody's visits Ben is surprised by a stranger who takes a shot at him. Luckily he is only wounded, but this incident starts him on a search for this mysterious person.

His search takes him to town where he is mocked and shunned because of the strange life that he has led. In town he meets Jody and her boyfriend Bo, played by "Sandy" Fitzgerald, who is in the store of Jody's father, Todd, played by "Weedie" Norman.

The search continues but not until the last scene is the stranger identified as - - - - - I almost told. You will have to come to "Quicksand" and see for yourself!

Other characters in the production are two women and a young girl about to be married. These are played by Elaine Weddle, Barbara Ensman, and "Cass" Connor. The children are played by Barbara Odom, Betty Spivey, Shirley Grizzard, Betty Maynard, Ann Glover, and Dot Boswell. A timid little boy who is always picked on is "Runt," portrayed by Fran McLoughlin.

Freshman production, under the direction of Vicki Brinkley and Nancy Brubeck, will be presented in Jarman Hall on March 23, at 8 p. m.

Roberts and Walker, World-Famous Team, To Present Scenes From Popular Operas

Helen Roberts and Richard Walker, famous Gilbert and Sullivan duo singing team, will be heard in Jarman Hall Tuesday night.

Helen Roberts and Richard Walker, the famous Gilbert and Sullivan duo singing team, who will be heard in a recital here on March 20 at 8 p. m., are husband and wife in private life, and theirs is a true romance of the theatre.

Gilbert and Sullivan brought them together originally, and they have Gilbert and Sullivan to thank for keeping them together. Very few members of the theatre have the good fortune to be able to travel the world and at the same time play their respective roles together. More often than not, the huband is playing one theatre and the wife some other, consequently, their marriage inevitably has to take a second place to their professional careers.

Not so with Helen Roberts and Richard Walker, two Gilbert and Sullivan artists who are currently touring America. They have planned, and so far have been lucky enough to keep their marriage and careers a partnership, and one which has taken them completely around the world.

In 1944, when the Doodle Bombs were falling on London in very rapid succession, they were both members of the world famous D'Oyly Carte Opera Company. While they were entering a restaurant in Piccadilly one lunchtime, one of these bombs fell about 50 yards away and blew them completely through the door and into the dining-room. Nearly smothered with flying debris and covered with broken glass; and incidentally minus lunch, they helped each other to their feet and decided to return to the theatre. On he way, Mr. Walker remarked: "Helen, if that bomb had been about thirty yards nearer, we wouldn't be here now. Let's get married. It's later than you think."

Their work together had started about four years previously, when he was the coach of the

Ebersole Duo Plans Recital

There will be a joint voice recital given by Joel K. Ebersole, tenor, with his wife, Janet Brater Ebersole, soprano, in the small auditorium, March 23 at 8 p. m. They will be accompanied by Dr. Walter Hartley.

The program will be varied with sacred songs, operatic arias, concert songs, duets, and contemporary songs, including works by Dr. Walter Hartley and Mr. John Powell.

He is also completing requirements for his doctorate. Mrs. Ebersole, a native of Cincinnati, Ohio, is a graduate of the College of Music of Cincinnati with a Bachelor of Music degree in voice and certificates in organ and piano.

His work in the field of music has taken Mr. Ebersole over much of the world and before many audiences.

H-S Choral Group Presents Program

The Hampden-Sydney College Glee Club presented a musical program in Jarman Hall yesterday. The program included excerpts from the Glee Club's Current program, which contains such numbers as "You'll Never Walk Alone," "Stout-Hearted Men," "The Creation," and the"The Lord's Prayer."

The Glee Club is directed by Mr. T. E. Crawley. Mr. Crawley graduated from Hampden-Sydney College in 1941. After serving in the Navy for five years, he taught English at Hampden-Sydney until 1951. Mr. Crawley then did graduate work at the University of North Carolina. He will receive the Ph.D degree in English in June.

The group has presented many programs during the year. In December the Glee Club gave Christmas concerts at Petersburg, Grace Covenant Church in Richmond.

A Bill Worth Notice

A bill has recently passed the House and Senate of the Virginia Legislature calling for the esablishment of a Council of Higher Education, to provide for the coordination of the State-supported system of higher education. As Longwood is one of the ten institutions affected by the proposals of this bill, it would be worthwhile to review a few of the outstanding features concerning the bill.

The need for this bill has arisen from the realization that in order to house the expected college enrollment within the next fifteen years, the capacity of state colleges and universities must be doubled. Facilities which now house 20,088 residents must be expanded to take care of a possible 52,000 students by 1970. With numerous and varied expansion programs underway on the state campuses, it is imperative that some means of coordinating the programs to obtain the best possible facilities for the limited income available be adopted.

The main purpose of this Council as stated in the bill is "to promote the development and operation of a sound, vigorous, progressive, and coordinated system of higher education in the State of Virginia." The members of the Council will consist of nine persons selected from the state at large without regard to political affiliation, but with due consideration of geographical representation.

The Council will have the power, with the approval of the Governor, to plan for the curriculum offerings of the institutions so as to conform to the plans adopted by the Council, allowing sufficient time to make the necessary adjustments in personnel and facilities.

In cooperation with both public and private institutions the Council will determine the probable number of students who will seek a college education and based upon this, what locations are suitable for branch institutions or extension work; choose the existing State institutions which are best suited to operate such branches or extensions; and ascertain the cost to the State of such branch or extension institutions as are found to be required and report on these matters in 1957 and biennually thereafter.

Those institutions which will be affected by the work of this Council are Longwood, Madison, Mary Washington, Medical College of Virginia, Radford, William and Mary, University of Virginia, Virginia Military Institute, Virginia Polytechnic Institute, and Virginia State College.

There's Room For More

The success and value of any program, and especially athletics at any college, is geared directly, not only to the number of persons participating, but more important, to interest. Through the various sports offered here at Longwood and in competitive class games as well as athletic activities with other schools, a certain amount of interest has been created. However, as anyone knows, "there's always room for more."

Through the demonstrations, class competition, et cetera, the Athletic Association strives for increased interest as well as participation. The opportunity to be a part of these athletic functions is open to any who so desire and who are keenly aware of the advantages of such strong participation.

You know you don't necessarily have to be a good player in order to be a good sport. Your interest can be just as high in spectating as in playing the game. A team can sometimes be judged by its cheering section which shows that good sportsmanship can be everywhere.

If there is something in the way of a game or sport that you would like to see more of or an addition to the present program we will be glad to consider your comments or suggestions.

Longwood College has taken great pride in providing the students with the athletic facilities now present. Your use of them is invited. Organized effort means a better school and a better place in which to live. Sports can be a part of that effort. Your recreational activites are what you make them. By working together a better understanding and consideration are developed.

Nancy Striplin
President of the Athletic Association

Ladies Or Litterbugs?

A roof is a covering of any building, house, or dwelling; that is, the summit or the top. But at Longwood in the springtime a roof becomes a place for innumerable greasy and scantily-clad bodies to lie exposed to the beaming rays of the spring sun. The roof brings glowing tans to some and bothersome burns to others. At any rate, the roof becomes a second home to the majority of campus sunseekers, as many happy hours are spent picnicing, gossiping, and generally taking advantage of the warm roof and the bright sun.

However, from the appearance of the roof after a day of sunshine, it would be appropriate to ask whether or not the roof is being taken advantage of to a larger extent than is desirable. Many of the girls who so readily leave their roasting places, taking their attractive suntans, leave behind them a collection of trash which results in a most unattractive roof.

If there is any doubt as to whose responsibility it is to pick up the littered paper and coke bottles, it would be a natural solution to assume that each person should collect that trash which is the result of her sunbath before leaving each day.

In the sunny days ahead, if each sunseeker would remember to collect her trash before leaving the roof, it would be an even more popular attraction and much more enjoyable to all.

SOCIAL NOTES

By Violet Marshall

This weekend I snooped and hunted around,
In hopes that news for this space could be found!
Once I got started—oh what a tizzie,
For many a girl has been quite busy!

Sandy Andrews, from Norfolk, should feel like a king,
He gave Barbara Brinkley a beautiful ring.

Barbara Tyer is wearing a sparkler so bright,
From Wattie Ward who gave it with delight.

Martha Joyner can be seen wearing a grin
For she is wearing a KA pin:
Her beau's name is Fred Robinson, I must say,
And he now attends Med school at U. Va.

At Wake Forest, Sandra Dyer was the cutest by far.
When she attended the Kappa Sig's party "Come As You Are."

Away these girls went with the weekend begun,
To the University of Richmond to have much fun:
Betty Fentress, Suzie Barr, and Bobbie Carter.

All of these girls were really cute belles,

When they went to Randolph-Macon to attend Pan-Hels:
George Ann Reynolds, Anita Heflin, Lou Wilder, Jo Ann Maitland, Peggy Dickerson, Elva Jane Wynne, Faye Salmon, Delores Barnett, Sylvia Moore, Sylivia Wright, Jo Ann Sloop, Delo Dove, Frances Harmon, Aggie Lowry, and Dale Brothers.

On Friday night I looked around,
But not many students were easily found.
I looked for the formals which were hung with such care,
But the hangers on the doors were very much bare.
I wondered to myself, "Now where could they be."

I had forgotten the formal at Hampden-Sydney!
The attraction on Saturday was Sauter-Finegan's band.
Many people have said that they really were grand.
The dance and the combos offered much delight.

For all those who attended on Saturday night:
Martha Alexander, Shirley Alcock, Emily Atkinson, Barbara Booher, Loretta Brooking, Pat Burdette, Anne Caldwell, Ellen Callaway, Betty Cantrell, Linda Chambers, Elaine Chaffin, Alice Cheatwood, Shirley Childs, Annette Crain, Norma Jean Croft, Joan Darnell, Deanna Davis, Nancy Dee Deaton, Adele Donaldson, Nadine Dazell, Judy Eckstrom, Judy Elliott, Pat Farrington, Pat Ferguson, Elba Flynn, Gloria Gardner, Linda Garrison, and Ann Glover.

Hannah Haile, Charlotte Hall, Ann Hancock, Ann Hart, Judy Hayes, Virginia Herre, Jerry Hines, Jo Lynn Holland, Sandra Hover, Gail Howard, Mary Jo Hutchinson, Betty Jean Jenkins, Pat Jones, Martha Joyner, Jane Karicofe, Carol Keister, Margaret Layman, Carolyn Lewis, Violet Marshall, Bettye Maas, June Lee May, Betty McAden, Lynne McDade, Mary Miller, Anne Miller, Norma Miller, Margaret Miller, Julie Moncure, Bonnie Moore, Liz Mosteller, Virginia Obenchain, Lois Ogburn, Sally O'Malley, Mary Sue Owens, and Catherine Ozmon.

I've just about come to the end of this space,
At parties and dances LC girls are "ace".
If we all stay this busy the rest of the year,
There'll never be fretting over what goes here!

ROOF-ROOSTING!

Seniors Woefully Reminisce To Recall 'Golden Moments"

By JACKIE MARSHALL

In these last few fleeting months of the academic year, those creatures of high honor and dignity known as the seniors, have been reminiscing of past experiences which stand out above all others in a sentimental splendor. In my travels of the Longwood campus, I have caught snatches of memorable pleasantries, but to remember them all— I find that I am intellectually deficient. It seemed imperative to me to capture at least a few cherished memories and record them in the impressive Rotunda files under the caption of "THE MOST GOLDEN MOMENTS."

Therefore, with a pencil behind my large right ear, paper in my grubby left fist, and a twinkle in my middle blue eye, I set out on a surveying journey through the massive dwelling place called senior dorm.

I first ascended into that regal realm of third floor where dwells the ruler of all Longwood peons. Having shown my social security number to the spectacled lady at the desk, I was ushered into the plush domain of Miss Louise Wilder. Bowing low, I asked my question of the day. "What has been your most golden moment." I said in an awed whisper. "My most golden moment was the night I folded (folded, not rolled) my hair and it stayed folded till morning," she said.

I was then ushered out whereupon, hearing monotone Muriel Boswell singing in the showers, I immediately dashed to her room. Being the more modest type, I shouted my question through the bathroom door. "My most golden moment was selling Avon deodorants to the needy," she sang, or rather, attempted to sing.

Mrs. Audrey Owen Beale and Mrs. Louise Turner Caldwell boredly informed me that they had never had golden moments, so I trucked it down to a room where several sedate seniors were lounging. Here, I received varying answers concerning golden moments. Catherine Meeks' was Dr. Brumfield's class; Mary Davis' was selling eight dozen hot dogs in ten minutes, and Shirley Kemp's was that period of academic training known as student teaching.

My next stop was second floor where Patsy Hamner, young physical education and biology major, was busily practicing golf strokes and mating dropsophila flies. Her most golden moment was jumping off the dining hall roof in an honest effort to fly. At this information, I hastily left her room and fled panic-stricken to Bootsie Miller's room only to learn that she has never had a golden moment.

Then Anne Brooking swept in and batted her blue-green eyelids in my direction. "Dahling," she said in her most vibrantly vibrant voice, "My most golden moment was the fading of the lights on the last scene of "Blood Wedding." I'll always remember the feeling of finality as the stage grew dark and the audience broke forth—" At this point, I removed my unnecessary presence from the room as she broke forth into dramatic gestures before the mirror.

On the way to first floor, Shirley Willhide informed me that her moment came at the foreclosing of her debt at the snack bar. Returning to my own camping grounds, I employed the mental activity of my own little mental mates and came up with a true golden moment. Becky Fizer and Phyllis Nurney recalled a golden moment with varying degrees of emotion. "We'll always remember playing "Farmer in the Dell' behind the library." (indeedy, do!)

Betsy Welbon laid down her violin, raised one hairy eyebrow and growled, "I'll always remember the hall doing a choral reading of that best-seller "My Husband Our Baby" while the sexy voice of Marlene Dietrich droned in the background.

Helen Warriner will remember the moment she hung the symbolic tassel above the door to senior annex and Jane Blake Lawrence will cherish the memory of raising a white slip to half mast on the flagpole one blustery winter's day.

Georgia Jackson peered from over her Shakespeare and affirmed my suspicion that she was in a cutured mood. I asked the question anyway, but had to be content with a "tarnished" golden moment from her files of L. C. events. "The moment five thousand freshmen crashed through senior circus apron will always live vividy in my memory." With that, she crawled, backed "into the yellowed pages of Willy," and I departed.

Thus ends my journalistic trek into unknown wilds of the senior master-minds. Before concluding this novel bit of parallel, I'd like to convey to you my most golden moment. I must warn you that I haven't lived that moment yet, but I look forwward to its ultimate conception any day. My golden moment will come the day that a fire drill will be held at 3 a. m.; the dining hall doors will be locked on Miss Gleaves, Miss Moore and Mrs. Keller; and all card-players, sock-knitters and roof-bathers will be forever banished from the Kingdom.

Art Classes To Participate In Department's Exhibiton

The annual student exhibition of paintings, crafts, ceramics, and art education will be held in the browsing room of the library during the month of May.

All of the art classes will take part in the exhibition, two of which are graduate classes for craft techniques and silk screen painting. Craft techniques, taught by Miss Bedford, has three advanced students, Jackie Adams, Jane Harlow, and Virginia Lee Obenchain, and one graduate student, Sally Lee Cook. Miss Cook had an exhibition in the library during January showing what crafts she accomplished in the class which specializes in working with enamel on copper.

The second graduate class, silk screen painting taught by Mrs. Lemon Tuesday nights, includes three county school teachers and Sally Cook.

Another interesting class is art education taught by Mrs. Lemon for instructing students in teaching elementary and high school crafts. Recently the class, divided into six groups, gave skits and exhibitions. The group under Mary Ann Barnett made marionettes representing different countries and presented them with records of folk songs from the respective countries. These puppets can now be seen in the art department along with the hand puppets made by the group under Eleanor Crowder which depict the story, "Billy Goat Gruff."

Another group, led by Ellen Hamlet gave a skit showing various scenes in Mexico using colorful Mexican-flavored costumes and props to describe the customs.

A satire on the past and future was presented by the group headed by Sylvia Moore which was highly imaginative. A skit about a shoemaker and elves was led by Daisy Spain, and Jackie Pond headed the group that gave a presentation of the Seize of Troy. The purpose of this is to show prospective teachers how classroom work and activities can be dramatized. This class is now choosing topics for their project which will be floor and table displays.

The oil painting class too, has been very busy and the students have completed some very interesting paintings. This class, also taught by Mrs. Lemon, will continue with their paintings and take part in the exhibition, too.

The freshman art classes are doing several different things including the study of types of architecture, title settings for mosaics to make trays and tables, working designs out on paper; and they plan to study sculpture soon.

Besides the exhibition, the art department also plans to have an auction this year as in the past. The funds from this go partly to the student who did the work and partly to the fund for the purchase of paintings by Virginia artists. Also contributing to this latter fund is the money from the potato chip vender in freshman dormitory which is maintained by the art department.

Longwood is fortunate in having this department as well equipped as it is, for there are many opportunities for art majors and others in this field of teaching.

Mary Washington College, and Hampden-Sydney College. Since Christmas it has given concerts at Randolph-Henry High School, and the Second Presbyterian Church in Richmond.

On May 11, the club will combine voices with the Madison College Glee Club to present Haydn's "Creation" at Harrisonburg. On May 12, the oratorios will be presented at Hampden-Sydney. Such noted singers as Florence Manning and Delbert Anderson of New York will perform the solo parts with the combined group of 140 voices. Concerts to be given before then include Hopewell, Danville, South Boston, and a tour in the western part of the state.

Mrs. E. Hundley Is Founder's Day 1st

Mrs. E. E. Hundley, of Farmville, a member of the Class of 1888, was the oldest 'grad' to return for parts of the Longwood College weekend festivities. She is one of Longwood's oldest living-graduates whose interest in 'learning' education, Christian education and culture remains undiminished.

Mrs. Hundley has seen four of her own children receive degrees at Randolph-Macon Woman's College and Hampden-Sydney; three of her four grandchildren graduated at Sweet Briar, VPI and VMI. Her intention now is to see the graduation of her fourth grandchild, now an 8th grade pupil, and her two great-grandchildren.

The Rotunda wishes to correct two mistakes which were inadvertly printed in last week's issue.

In connection with the varsity basketball team, the team has played six games and lost one which was to the Norfolk Division of William and Mary. It was the second team which has won all five of its games.

In regard to the Color Cup, the red and white team has held the cup for six years. The red and whites are the only team to have held the cup for two consecutive years.

pacity or the personality to make successful teachers. Indeed, the same may be said of a college education in general. Secondary schools cannot properly be expected to prepare all of their graduates for successful continuation of their education in college. It is as unreasonable to expect this of high schools as it would be to expect colleges to prepare all of their graduates to continue their education in university graduate study.

"For some this principle of selection in college admissions is in conflict with our democratic belief in equal opportunity for all. For those who see such a conflict, I would remind them that the great genius Thomas Jefferson; believed in equality of opportunity, but he proposed a selective system of education for Virginia. He simply would have started the selective process much earlier than the twelfth grade."

Dr. Lankford pointed out that formal universal education must stop at some level because many reach the ceiling of educational achievement at some point between high school and graduate study, and also because the tax resources of the state will not finance the continuation of education for all. He suggested that high school graduates not qualified for college work could continue to learn from informal study, from training programs in industry, night schools, and opportunity schools.

H2O To Give "Dreamer's Holiday" Friday

Committee chairmen Kate Kreibel, Ann Snyder, Frances Patton, and "T. P." Waugaman help over-all chairman Mary Ann Barnett select appropriate flower sprays to be used in the water pageant.

By FRANCES PATTON

Do you realize that the big day is just about here; that is March 16, the day of the 1956 Spring Water Pageant given by the H2O Club at five and seven o'clock? The pageant will not only be shown at Longwood, but also in Richmond at the Y. M. C. A. on March 22 at 8:00 p. m.

You will not want to miss this, spectacular pageant, "Dreamer's Holiday." The swimmers spin you right into a dream with them as they swim up the "Stairway to the Stars" and see "April Showers" and then maybe "Over the Rainbow." You will probably see "A Little Bit of Heaven" and maybe even some "Stardust." It will be a "Hap-Hap Happy Day" for all those that are a part of this wonderful dream.

Yes, the pageant is only two days off, and Mary Ann Barnett, chairman, has said there will be some new experiments used in this water pageant which haven't been tried before. They will be using swings, hanging down over the pool, in one of the numbers, and also in "April Showers," they hope to have real showers. In another number, fancy diving off of the board will be presented as a different feature.

Ann Snyder, chairman of props, has Lou Heier, Ann Rountree, Carolyn Kelly, Judy Holderman, and Amanda Dillon working with her. Costumes are headed by Kate Kreibel. Working with her are Betty Mann Gates, Ann Rountree, Betsy Richardson, Peggy Hopkins, Elaine Weddle, and Linda Vess. Working with Frances Patton on publicity are Lynne Higgenbotham, Carole Stroupe, Lou Heier, Hannah Haile, Sandy Fitzgerald, Nancy Striplin, Sarah Gayhart, Carol Lash, Nancy Andrews, and Elaine Weddle.

Carolyn Waugaman, as business chairman, has Sarah Gayhart in charge of programs. Shirley Alcock will be working the lights for the different numbers, and Ann DeAlba is in charge of the tickets.

Dr. Jeffers To Lead Panel Discussion

Dr. George W. Jeffers, of Longwood College, will serve as leader of a panel discussion group during the fourth national convention of the National Science Teachers Association to be held in Washington, D. C., March 14-17.

Dr. Jeffers' panel will discuss "Helping Young People to Learn How to Find Out in the Biological Sciences."

NSTA is the national professional organization of science teachers at all levels of instruction. It is a department of the National Education Association and an affiliate of the American Association for the Advancement of science. More than 1000 teachers are expected to attend the four-day convention at the Shoreham Hotel in Washington that will have as its theme "Problem Solving: How We Learn."

Jo Ann Fivel, LC Freshman, Leads Active Musical Life

By LINDA DOLES

Not only a violinist, but also interested in all music, including playing the viola and singing in choirs, Jo Ann Fivel has proven herself to be worthy in all these fields.

Her musical interests cultivated at an early age, Jo Ann has always been attracted mainly to the violin. Born in Roanoke, she began violin lessons when she was eight years old and continued her instruction through her graduation last June from Jefferson Senior High School. For a short period she also took lessons for the viola, a rather complicated instrument to learn to play.

Jo Ann's performances equal her instruction, for she has played publicly many different times. While still in elementary school she gave violin solos for different activities and in junior high school she took part in a string quartet that played at different schools, stressing the works of Victor Herbert.

In high school Jo Ann received the honor of attending the All-State String orchestra at Richmond and served as assistant concert mistress of the concert orchestra of advanced players, consisting of 120 musicians. Also in her first years of high school she gave church solos on the violin, sang in the high school glee club, was soloist in her church choir, and was concert mistress in high school.

In 1952 when the Roanoke Symphony Orchestra was formed, Jo Ann became one of its first members. She has played with them ever since and last year was advanced to the head of the second violin section. In addition, she has performed for several seasons with the Bluefield, West Virginia Symphony Orchestra.

JO ANN FIVEL

She is interested in playing with quartets and, having played at one time with professional musicians, she organized her own group last summer.

Although she had already given several private lessons in violin, Jo Ann does not plan to teach music, but is enrolled here at Longwood as an elementary education major. Besides continuing her work in the orchestra at Roanoke, she has participated in several activities at the college. A member of the Episcopal Church choir, she has also entertained for several social occasions.

Jo Ann's hobby is collecting the musical scores from operas and she also likes to read. Recently, she took part in the Roanoke orchestra's presentation commemorating the 200th Anniversary of the birth of Mozart. The concert featured his famed "Requiem" very successfully.

Roberts and Walker

D'Oyly Carte Opera Company, and she the principal soprano. He had taught her all of her roles. Then came the war, and both were compelled by a government law to remain with the opera company. No one was allowed in those days to change their employment. Eventually, although, singing seven and sometimes eight operas per week, they began to entertain the troops and also the war workers all over the country.

They played continuously throughout the war, and in many cities, particularly Liverpool, Sheffield, Plymouth, Hull and Portsmouth, to the falling of bombs. They played at the Hammersmith Theatre in London during practically the whole of the Doodle Bomb period.

It may be of interest to note, that although the members of the audience were always warned of the approach of enemy raiders, very few people ever left the theatre. In fact, very often the artists stayed on after the fall of the curtain and entertained far into the early hours of the morning in order to keep people off the streets.

Then the war ended, and once again they travelled to New York with the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company, but on their return to England six months later, decided to leave Gilbert and Sullivan for a change, she to return to her old love, Grand Opera, and he to do production work. Although Miss Roberts did manage to sing "Butterfly", "Don Pasquale" and "Pagliacci" and Mr. Walker the father in "Hansel and Gretel" and a season of pantomime at the Prince's Theatre in London, they were destined not to be separated for long.

It was about this time that they conceived the idea of doing a Gilbert and Sullivan lecture and recital, but this had a very limited scope in England owing to the copyright laws, and so they decided to attempt the same thing in America. Before they could get started, however, they were approached by J. C. Williamsons of Australia to do a tour of that country, she as principal soprano and he as character comedian in a new Gilbert and Sullivan company being formed. Both agreed it would be a nice change to see what things looked like "Down Under" and so, for the next three years they traveled the breadth of Australia, and the length and breadth of New Zealand, and had a wonderful time.

At the end of that tour, the question again arose, "Are we going to try and continue together or shall we have to work individually?" Didn't Tennyson say "He who travels fastest travels alone?" They decided to head home via New York and leave the decision of their careers until after they had completely relaxed and enjoyed a well-earned rest.

In the meantime, having given quite a number of Gilbert and Sullivan lectures and recitals before leaving Australia, they suddenly decided to return to their original idea and try their chances in America. Now with the tour being booked by NCAC and knowing the Americans' great love for Gilbert and Sullivan, the decision has again been made for them. They are still going to be together.

In their program here, Miss Roberts and Mr. Walker will present scenes, as well as songs from some of the most popular of the Gilbert and Sullivan operas, including parts of "Patience," "Yoemen of the Guard," "Pianaforte," and "Princess Ida." Other operas included in their program are "The Mikado," "Trial by Jury," "Gondolliers," "Ruddigore," "Iolanthe," "Pirates of Penzance," and "The Sorcerer."

Versatile Program By Youth Choir Set For Thursday

American and Italian folk-tunes will share the program with classical, operatic and liturgical music Thursday, March 22, when the Casa Materna Children's Choir from Naples, Italy, presents a concert at Jarman Hall at 8 p. m.

The choir is making its first American tour under the sponsorship of the Casa Materna Aid Society and will sing in more than 100 churches in 21 states before returning to Italy June 24.

The program will include classical selections by Beethoven and Schubert; operatic choruses from "Aida" by Verdi and "William Tell" by Rossini. There will be a group of American songs including "The Lord's Prayer" by Lee and "God Bless America" by Berlin. The final section will consist of Neapilitan songs such as "O'Sole Mio," "Torna A Surrienta," and "Funiculi' Funicula."

Casa Materna is a haven for orphaned and abandoned children at present totaling about 250. In addition it opens its school to an additional 300 day students. A silver offering will be received at the concert here toward construction of a new dormitory.

Members and friends of the Farmville Methodist Church will be hosts to 25 young singers in the Casa Materna choir, which will present a program of classical religious and folk music on Thursday, March 22, at 8 p. m. in the church sanctuary.

Mrs. C. O. Kidd is chairman of a committee planning a supper for the children in the social hall.

Assisting her are parents of the Methodist Youth Fellowship members.

The choir is touring the United States on the occasion of the 50th anniversary of Casa Materna Orphanage in Italy. A free-will offering received at the concert will help provide badly needed housing for all the children. Some of the youngsters have to live in a stable, since Casa Materna is still recovering from severe bomb damage during World War II.

"Ben," Sandy Sandidge, and "Jody," Betty Griggs rehearse lines from Freshman Production to be given Friday night.

Inauguration at H-S Set For Friday; Robert Named President Officially

The inauguration of Dr. Joseph Clarke Robert as seventeenth President of Hampden-Sydney College will take place in Johns Auditorium at 11 a. m. on March 23. Sir Percy Claude Spencer, K. B. E., Q. C., Australian Ambassador to the United States, will deliver the inaugural address.

Dr. Frank S. Johns, Richmond surgeon and chairman of the Hampden-Sydney Board of Trustees, will preside at the exercises. Dr. J. McDowell Richards, moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, U. S., and president of Columbia Theological Seminary, Decatur Georgia, will deliver the invocation.

Sir Percy will be introduced by Judge A. C. Buchanan, Justice of the Supreme Court of Appeals of Virginia. Following the Ambassador's address, Dr. Johns will administer the oath of office to Dr. Robert, and present him with the college charter. After President Robert's acceptance of the charter, Dr. Benjamin Rice Lacy, Jr., chaplain of the college and former president of Union Theological Seminary, Richmond, will pronounce the benediction.

Cotillion Club To Give 'Cinder Capers'; McIntyre To Play For Cinderella's Ball

Plans are nearing completion for "Cinder Capers," the Cotillion Club dance, which will be held on April 7. The dance will be in the gym from eight until twelve.

The theme for the dance is based on Cinderella's ball, and the story will be depicted by large murals around the walls of the gym. On entering, there will be a large golden coach which will set the atmosphere for the dance. The ceiling will be elaborately decorated with multi-colors rising to a point in the center. At this point a chandelier will add its charm.

During the evening there will be a figure composed of senior members, club officers, and committee chairmen; and the night will end with a party for Cotillion Club members and their dates in the main "rec."

The band all America loves, famed for its modern rhythm—this is the caption given to Hal McIntyre who will play for the dance. This young, personable saxaphonist and bandleader, whose MGM Records and jam packed personal appearances have made him a stand-out, is one of today's brightest stars on the musical horizon. Before bringing together his thirteen-piece band, he had played with such bands as Benny Goodman and Glenn Miller, staying with the latter for three years.

HAL McINTYRE

In the last few years it has been clearly demonstrated that there is no substitute for records in terms of reaching the top of the musical ladder. McIntyre lost no time in getting on the recording hit parade. His band was just a few months old when RCA Victor signed him.

Hal McIntyre is one of the foremost prom favorites today on college campuses all over the country. Hal's musical ideas fit in with the desires of young people who want a little more than the ordinary in their dance music. He features a style that is all his own.

AKG To Begin "Length For Lancaster;" Campaign To Raise Scholarship Fund

The "Length for Lancaster" campaign has just been opened by Alpha Kappa Gamma, national honorary fraternity, in order to raise more money for the Dabney S. Lancaster Scholarship.

The scholarship was started last year by the Student Government Association in effort to help some worthy Longwood student continue her education.

Qualifications for the scholarship are:

1. the student must have been at Longwood as an undergraduate student at least one year.
2. she must have a cumulative average of C or better.
3. the need of the student is to be given full consideration.
4. the recipient must give promise of becoming a worthy example of educated womanhood, and she must have demonstrated that she has acquired the spirit of the college.

The scholarship will be given for only one year since the purpose is to recognize and assist as large a number as possible. No student will receive the award for two consecutive years. Members of the Senior Class who are on Student Government will act as the screening committee.

Any student or member of the faculty may suggest the name of a person deemed worthy of consideration. No more than one nomination may be made by any person. Nominations should be in writing with reasons why the girl should be considered.

In order to obtain more money for this scholarship Alpha Kappa Gamma has come up with the idea of having the student body measure their height and put length wise on a piece of scotch tape the number of pennies. This money will be presented to Dr. Lancaster on April 10 in chapel.

Members of Alpha Kappa Gamma will be around to the rooms April 9 to collect the money. The name of the winner will be announced in an assembly during May.

Easter Exemplified

"Have you thought about that new hat? Are you ready for the Easter Parade on Main Street, U. S. A.?" These are just some examples of the many things that enter one's mind during the Easter season. Often we are so weary in our plight to find new outfits and fancy bonnets that we overlook the message of Easter. The inspiration at this time of year should be a challenge to the faith of us all. Do we really understand what the cross symbolizes? Are we aware that because of the cross, Christ lives—for us!

All around us, we are aware Christ has risen. We can see this particularly in the springtime, for everything that grows is an example of the awakening. The flowers, once dead, now come forth in beauty; the buds spring out in a lovely array to remind us of the newness of life. And the beautiful, symbolic, white Easter lily, pure and stainless, stretches forth as a trumpet to herald Christ's resurrection from the tomb.

This continuity in nature can be attached to our faith as well. As Easter flashes its light about us and gives us new visions of hope and confidence, it should remind us to give praise unto our God in thanksgiving for the cross and its meaning. It should help us to understand the true meaning of Easter—Christ arose and He lives today.

Mid-Semester Maze

When grade estimates are turned in Friday, the Longwood students and faculty en masse will breathe one long and well-earned sigh of relief. The day the grades go in is so eagerly awaited and anticipated that the actual handing out of the grades is almost an anti-climax.

If one were to attempt to explain this reaction, it would be necessary to observe the activities on campus for the two weeks before this grade period when estimates are compiled.

A natural momentum is gained by the campus organizations and clubs in preparation for the various spring projects and social functions. The choir prepares for a concert trip and an operetta, H2O gives a spring pageant, Longwood Players perform a play, the freshmen have their production, and the students attend the Artist Series, foreign films, and class games in addition to their regular meetings and classes. the students look upon two or three weeks before Easter as a maze of extra-curricular activities.

The faculty, equally busy and pressured by the deadline for estimates, view this two-week period as the time to find out what their classes have learned since January. The wee hours of the morning see students cramming for their two or three tests each day with the same zeal they apply at exam time.

Without criticizing or emphasizing the importance of either student activities or mid-semester tests over the other one, one would be able to see that the pressure of this period greatly strains both faculty and students and fails to produce the best results in an academic or extra-curricular capacity.

It would be desirable if both faculty and students would look upon the mid-semester mark as a period of time for evaluating and summing up the learning and the activities which have taken place beforehand and in that way better distribute the tests and the organizational activities in order to decrease the pressure and strain on all concerned.

Letter To The Editor...

Conduct In Consideration

Several times during this year, the social conduct of our girls has been brought to attention. It seems as if many of them have been forgetting themselves to a certain extent in the places used for dating.

We all feel and realize that there is somewhat of a strain placed upon us when we have dates at school and in school. Nevertheless, there are people around, and we must taken them into consideration.

Were parents or outsiders to observe this conduct, I feel sure that they would be surprised and disappointed. Places in the school have been designated and fixed up especially for dating. If people will use the parlors and so forth with the appearance of their conduct to others in mind, certainly much embarrassment to themselves and others could be avoided.

As a student who is affected by this situation, I can see both sides. Before those in authority have to take steps, I think we should watch our conduct and conduct ourselves with others in mind.

Last Tuesday at four o'clock was the time;
Wishes of the best come from our well,
To Mr. and Mrs. Bill Cridlin, who are under love's spell.

Margaret Howell is so happy that she could sing,
For she is wearing a beautiful ring;
To her and Milton Perry congratulations go,
May their lives with happiness always overflow.

A Phi Delt pin has Loretta Brooking,
Who for a time over the field has been looking;
Jack Gasswint is her chosen man, chosen man,
He goes to Lehigh University in Yankee land.

Patti Parker's wearing a Kappa Sig pin we see,
From Lloyd Dobyns, who's a junior at Washington and Lee.

The boys at the University of Richmond almost had a fight,
When Martha Alexander and Barbara Parkinson came into sight;
With slits in their skirts and berets on their heads,
They fit right into the theme, might well be said.
At the Kappa Sig house, if you stopped in by chance,
You really would have thought that you were in France.

Ellen Callaway, Peggy Dickerson, Betty Mann Gates too,
Didn't have trouble finding something to do!
Of much fun they had to tell,
When they returned from parties at W & L.

The Psi O's at M. C. V. with much delight,
Had a shipwreck party on Saturday night;
No S. O. S. signals were needed at all,

Reviewer Gives "Blood Wedding" Cast Congratulations, Critical Comments

by MARY P. NICHOLS

Congratulations to all who contributed to making Federico Garcia Lorca's tragedy, Blood Wedding (Bodas de Sangre), an artistic performance. From the opening scene with the red-orange, cubistic set, the cast sustained the brooding resentment of blood and death, a tragic sense of destiny. The excellently spoken poetic lines of the play supplemented, with the variations of original musical compositions and heightened the atmosphere of doom.

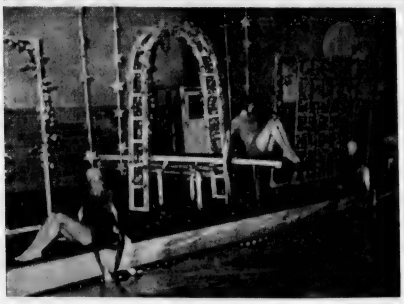
With the groom's stoical mother's obsession with knives and bitter memories of death, with the bride's passion for a former lover yet strong sense of honor in her promise to her groom-to-be, and with the lover, Leonardo's, restraint and outbursts of passion, the dialogues were forcibly given.

Especially well did Cle Koons as Leonardo's wife and Gloria Kratzsch as the mother-in-law portray the symbolism of the poetic cradle lullaby. With the music reflecting the symbolic spirit and in the gloomy lament and the legend of the horse of life, which did not like the living water but would drink of the bloody stream of death, the symbolical became a part of the real by reference to Leonardo's hard-ridden horse and by the sound effects of the trotting horse together with the running melody of the music.

Both in the poetic dialogue and by skillful contrasts in the lighting effect, the color symbolism was especially effective. There were hues of the yellow of the wasteland which never cooled even at dawn, the green (as in gangrene) of death, and the red of blood.

Especially effectively staged were the woodcutters, dimly seen through a gray-green gauze curtain. With incantations of rising and lonely death, the fairylike woodcutters were sadly cutting the living tree of forty branches and foretelling the certain death of the lovers. Foreboding were the sinister beggar woman, Nancy Brubeck as Death, and Molly Workman as the "lovely moon," the "sorrowful moon," the cold moon that would warm herself in the hot blood of the dead lovers. As the Moon rose behind dark clouds, the stage lighting changed from shadowy effects to an intense blue radiance revealing again the white-faced woodcutters, then changed back to ominous shadows for the climactic, forest death scene. The Moon and Death were allied to turn yellow.

In contrast to the death scene with the music and the lighting, with total absence of shadows, gave a spiritual quality to the scene of the girls winding the red wool and implication to the mother's line, "The hour of blood has come again."



Never was the mood of the play lightened. A brooding spirit hung over even the off-stage choral reading, the dances both on and off stage, the occasional laughter of the dancers, and subdued the effect of the Spanish guitar music. Most effective were moments of no stage action, characters turned austerely from the audience, and the timely contrasts in slow and quick curtains. Indeed to be congratulated are Mr. David Wiley and his assistant director, Miss Dorothy Rector, together with Dr. Walter Hartley for his original, musical compositions reflecting the mood of the play.

Much of the success of the artistic production of Blood Wedding, while skillfully directed and heightened by every dramatic device of lighting and staging, must in the last analysis be attributed to excellent acting, the characters feeling and living their roles. Ann Brooking, as the obsessed Mother, played her part without flaw. She was always in character; by her gestures, facial expressions, movements, and especially by the contrasts in her vibrant, tense tones of voice with occasional tones of quiet submission, the stoical Mother was brought through tragedy "by tears from her heart" to a full realization of a sense of destiny. Ann was the spirit of the play; the spirit of the play was Ann.

Patsy Abernathy Rice as the Bride portrayed well her every mood of dark sullinness, frightened daze, eager anticipation, ranging from aversion and sarcasm to love and tenderness with passionate selfincriminations. She was a wild flower compelled beyond her will to cause tragedy and have a bloody wedding without love. Most telling were the movements of her hands, upward and downward tilts of her chin, and the tone qualities of her voice in expressing her varying moods. Patsy always had the sympathy and affection of her audience. One agreed with the Mother, "It was not her fault."

As the Groom, James Parker

One of the numbers from the Spring H2O Pageant

Successful Spring Water Pageant Scheduled For Richmond Tomorrow

Many complimentary remarks have been heard, concerning "Dreamer's Holiday," the spring water pageant, which was directed by Mary Barnett.

Everything combined - swimming, decorations, music, and the moderator-gave a most vivid picture of a dreamer's holiday, making one feel as if spring were really here.

Particular attention should be called to the solo numbers as "Swinging On A Star" and "A Blossom Fell," which showed fascinating perfection on the part of the swimmers. The novelty number, "Hap-Hap-Happy Day," was also very enjoyable due to the gay mood which it possessed.

All of the numbers showed different and unusual combinations and the swimmers seemed to enjoy participating in them.

The cast will travel to Richmond, Thursday, March 22, to present the same pageant at the Y. M. C. A. for all students in that area who are interested in entering Longwood next fall.

Congratulations, Mary Ann and the entire cast, for a pageant well done!

The athletic department of Hampden - Sydney has announced that there is no charge for admission to any of their home athletic events this spring.

With attractive schedules in baseball, track and tennis, the College is hoping that the Longwood student body will feel free to come out to any of the events.

End of Artist Series Brings Noted Actors

On Monday night, April 16, Jarman Hall will play host to the final program of this season's Artist Series. "Two's A Company," starring the celebrated Edith Atwater and Albert Dekker, is a production provided by the world's best-loved authors and playwright including Shakespeare, Poe, Frost, and many others.

Both Miss Atwater and Mr. Dekker are veterans to the stage, having appeared in numerous plays on Broadway, in summer theaters, and on tour. Their experience on the stage includes such performances as "Time Out for Giner," "State of the Union," "Once Upon a Honeymoon," and "Death of a Salesman."

"Two's A Company" promises an evening of sophisticated comedy, simple humor, and human tragedy.

Radio Show Turns French To Denote Popular Music

By FLO SOGHOIAN

The most wonderful thing happened to me the other day. My "French Cheerful Cherub" sent me a neat package containing five neat French records. I've decided to share my good fortune with all of you good people who tune in to "Listening at Longwood" on Monday afternoon at 2:45 p. m. (I realize that it would be much more effective to do the show live from Paris, and I'm working on it . . .)

Genevieve Joatton tells me that Georges Brassens is probly France's most popular singer at the present time. Typically francais and possessing a loop, deep voice and a humorous, yet poetical quality, Monsieur B. plays the guitar while he sings. A most clever man, Georges Brassens is some times satirical and occasionally uses French slang in his songs, many of which he is the composer.

Then there's Gilbert Becaud, a young and very attractive TV entertainer in France today. Quite a versatile Frenchman who also sings his songs, he has style to fit your every mood. Two of his wonderfully fast, happy numbers are "Viens" (Come) and his interpretation of "Quand tu Danses" ("When You Dance")

Possibly the youngest in this group of five is Mouloudji, who has a low, soothing voice. His "Un Jour tu Verras," which he wrote for the movie "Secrets d'Alcove," is a song one cannot easily tire of.

And then there's the fabulous Juliette Greco, a French version of Marlene Dietrich. Mademoiselle Greco originally started singing in the districts of Paris where the Existentialists linger in dimly-lit cafes. She might have then been classed as a "Dark Lady," wearing black and singing very effectively in her unique style of sadness and simplicity for the prevailing atmosphere and surroundings.

A clever comedian-type singer is Phillippe Clay. With the use of a slightly off-tune piano, a present French fad, he successfully produces a crazy, contagious rhythm and effect. The best number to illustrate this French innovation is "La Goualante du Pauvre Jean." The melody will probably be familiar to many of you as "The Poor People of Paris," popular in America at the present time.

Why not join us on the fun next Monday afternoon, March 26? Au revoir mes amies . . .

A A Plans Tourney For Indoor Sports

The Athletic Association has announced that plans are being made to run tournaments in, pingpong, shuffleboard and badminton. Participants will begin playing after the class basketball games are completed and tournaments will be held later in the spring.

It is urged that anyone interested in participating in these games sign the paper which will be posted on the A. A. bulletin board.

Green and Reds Tie

As a result of the recently completed class volleyball games, the Green and White and the Red and White teams each won five points toward the Color Cup.

As a usual rule, ten points are given to the class color winning the most games, but this year, since both class colors won four games, the points were divided.

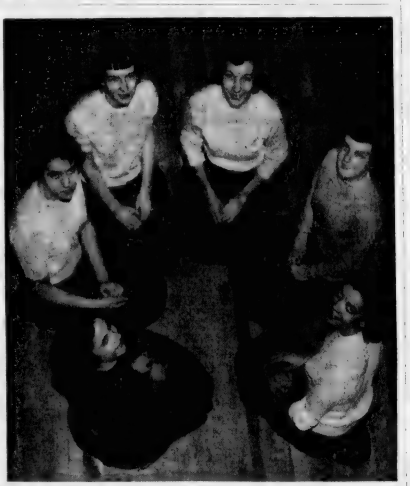
In the final tally, it was disclosed that the Sophomores won three games, the Freshmen and Juniors won two games each and the Seniors won one game.

2 Representatives Attend Convention At Madison Friday

The Longwood College Athletic Association sent two representatives to the Virginia Athletic Federation of College Women convention, which was held March 16 and 17 at Madison College. The nine Virginia colleges which were represented at this convention were: Longwood, Mary Wasington, Hollins, Westhampton, Madison, William and Mary, Mary Baldwin, Radford, and Emory and Henry.

Some of the activities included a discussion on "Ways to Encourage More Participation in Intramural Programs," led by Longwood's representative, Ann Wayne Fuller and Annie V. Weaver. Also, Dr. Ellen Kelly spoke on "How Does A State Association Benefit the Campus Organization?"

Plans were completed for the next V. A. F. C. W. convention which will be held next spring here at Longwood. Next year's president and secretary of this organization will come from Longwood and will be elected later in the spring.



Longwood Sends Delegates To LaCrosse Clinic March 17

Saturday, March 17, a Lacrosse Clinic was held at Sweet Briar College. Those attending from Longwood were. Miss Eleanor Weddle, Elaine Weddle, Nancy Andrews, "Peanuts" Winder, Margaret Dowdy, Nancy Striplin, Barbara Benedict and Ann Miller.

Lacrosse techniques and skills were demonstrated and the visitors, representing various colleges in Virginia, were given a chance to participate in an actual game.

Lacrosse is a Canadian game of Indian origin, played with a netted bat, called a "crosse," and there are twelve players on each team.

After lunch the highlight of the clinic was a game between the experienced players of the Baltimore and Virginia teams.

Six Varsity Players Named To Basketball First String

Pictured above are the six girls who played in six per cent or more of the varsity basketball games and are considered the "first string varsity." Because of this achievement, they are not eligible to play in the class basketball games.

Jane Lohr is a senior and has played guard on the varsity squad for four years, serving as captain during the past season. Margaret Dowdy, also a guard, is a sophomore and has been on the varsity for two years. Filling the other guard position, and completing her first year on varsity, is Willie Taylor, the only freshman in the group.

Nancy Richardson, Linda Chambers, and Jo Maxey filled the forward positions and have all played on the varsity team for two years. All three of these girls are members of the sophomore class.

Patsy Hamner, LC Senior, Receives 'Grad' Scholarship

Although Patsy Hamner will be graduating from college in June, her school days are not yet over. In September she will enroll as a graduate student at the University of Tennessee.

In January, Patsy received a graduate fellowship scholarship to the University of Tennessee in Knoxville, where she will get her Masters Degree in Physical Education. When she is not attending school, she plans to work in the Eastern State Hospital, a mental institution in Knoxville.

Along with four other girls, Patsy will plan various forms of recreational activity for those in the hospital who are capable of participating. The Scholarship Patsy has received is the same as that received by Sue Webb and Elsie Wente last year.

Patsy comes from Norton, Virginia, and has a double major of Biology and Physical Education here at Longwood. Most outstanding in athletics in college, Patsy has played hockey and basketball for three years and has been a member of the H20 Culb for four years. Patsy is a member of Alpha Kappa Gamma. She will attend the University of Tennessee from September, 1956, to August, 1957, after which she will begin her teaching career.

Patsy wishes to mention that she is extremely grateful to Dr. Lankford, Miss Gleaves, Miss Iler and all who helped her to receive her scholarship.

Assembly Program To Feature Thorp

Beore Eh Thorn, honorary English society, will sponsor Dr. Willard Thorp, professor at Princeton University, in the assembly program on March 27. Dr. Thorp will speak to the student body on "Why College Students Don't Write Well."

A graduate from Princeton, Dr. Thorp was appointed Holmes Professor of Belles Lettres in 1952. Among many other works Dr. Thorp is the author and editor of The Literary History of the United States and American Issues. His latest work is entitled A Southern Reader.

On March 15, at an informal tea at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Richard Meeker, Dr. Simkins told Beore Eh Thorn something about Dr. Thorp, whom he had become well acquainted with while at Princeton. He noted that Dr. Thorp "had a superstitious reverence for the South."

Among the forthcoming plans for Dr. Thorp are a small luncheon on March 27 in his honor and an informal meeting of Beore Eh Thorn and Pi Gamma Mu at which he will speak.

Blood Wedding

played superbly the difficult role of the unloved lover, the only living son of a death-obsessed mother, and the child of destiny. James' role was subordinated in every scene except for his well-enacted after-the-wedding scene in which he was repulsed by his bride and advised by his mother. James played the scene with sympathetic tenderness and restraint. Again with the beggar woman he maintained an excellent ambivalence in his acting.

In the leading role of the rejected lover and the unhappy husband, Fred Stables was both a hero and the villain. Fred, almost without exception, never overacted his varied scenes of frustration in his family life, his dark moments of duplicity, and his passionate scenes of jealousy, and tender moments of love. Fred, as Leonardo, the only named character, was restrained both as "a hot-blooded man" and as an ardent lover. One felt Fred's restraint as well as his vibrant fervor. Never before has Fred played so sympathetically.

Again to be highly praised are Cle Koons and Gloria Kratzsch for the clear, poetic quality of their voices. To their roles can be attributed much of the success of the symbolism being felt as well as said. Not to be underestimated in implementing the feeling of the play were Herbert Goodman and the Father who saw need in bringing things together and the faithful, old servant, Donna Boone, full of curiosity and expressions of the joys of married life. The neighbor woman, Flo Sosnoian, portrayed through her kindly sympathy an excellent contrast to the stoical Mother, Flo, with her especially lovely voice, painted up the idea of the futility of grief and vengeance. "We are old. . . We must be quiet."

All supporting characters — Youths, Girls, Little Girl, wedding guests, attend the symbolical moon, the beggar woman, Death, and the mystic yet realistic woodcutters to make the unreal seem in Blood Wedding.

15 Brave Weather As VIPA Delegates

The students representing Longwood's publications traveled through sleet, snow, and hurling winds to attend the Virginia Intercollegiate Press Association Convention held this past weekend at Madison College and Bridgewater College jointly. Approximately ninety college students met to become better informed concering their publications which include newspapers, magazines, and yearbooks.

Attending the convention from Longwood were Ella Carter, Frances Rosenkrans, Linda Garrison, Winnie Louhoff, Jane Brugh, Linda Doles, Patsy Powell, Judy Eckstrom, and Ann Glover from the Rotunda; Carolyn Stoneman, Jane Kell, Frances Raine, and Gayle Peoples from the Virginian; and Margaret Miller and "TiPi" Waugaman from the Colonade.

Noted speakers at the convention were John H. Colburn, managing editor of the Richmond Times-Dispatch, and Ben Gilbert, city editor of the Washington Post-Times Herald.

Speaking at the opening banquet Friday evening, Mr. Colburn discussed the students' responsibilities as they seek to inform their fellow students of news about their campus. A foreign correspondent during World War II, Mr. Colburn impressed upon the students the need for a free and honest press as a necessity for world peace.

Members of the Rotunda staff heard Mr. Gilbert, who gave criticisms and ways to improve newspapers on the campuses. Students working on the Virginian heard a critique by J. R. Michols, representative of Stone Printing and Manufacturing Company. Members of the Colonnade staff heard a discussion by H. D. Crawford, director of Journalism at the American University in Washington.

At the business session, Frances Rosenkrans, business manager of the Rotunda, was elected as director of Public Relations for the coming VIPA year. Linda Garrison, editor of the Rotunda, was appointed to serve on the executive committee for next year's convention. Winnie Louhoff, out-going secretary of VIPA, received praise for her outstanding work during her term in office.

The association was invited by Roanoke College to meet on their campus at the next annual convention.

Frosh Set Record For 1956 Summer Facilities Planned

Applications for the 1956-57 session have been received by Dr. Boggs on the average of 50 per week. To date, 184 students have been accepted as freshmen, a number which is more than twice that of this time last year. An announcement has also been made concerning new facilities for next year.

New housing accommodations include the Sanford House, which the school has recently purchased. It is now being remodeled and will accommodate sixteen students and a hostess. It is still undecided as to what class will occupy the new home. The Sanford House is a temporary facility which will be replaced by a new dormitory within two years.

Within the next two months, sprinkler systems will be installed in Post Office Hall and in Tabb Attic. By next fall the baths in Post Office Tabb and Student will be repaired, and both dormitories and classrooms will be equipped with new wiring for better lighting facilities. The dining hall kitchen will also undergo a few changes, which will include new flooring. There will be work done on the tenins courts which will improve the groundwork of the courts.

Five Longwood students participate on "Understanding" panel Saturday. Ruth Denton, SCA President, joins Genevieve Joatton, Betsy Welbon, Anita Heflin, Celina Leon-Gomez, and "Mickey" Duarte.

SCA Conventioneers Depart With Praise For Cooperation And Effective Program

Attendance of nearly 800 delegates, excellent cooperation from Longwood College and Farmville High School and an effective program made the 1956 state convention of the Virginia Student Cooperative Association "one of the best ever held."

So stated Miss Elizabeth V. Lloyd, of Richmond, executive secretary of the SCA, Saturday afternoon as delegates left Jarman Auditorium and the closing session to pack for the trip home.

At the closing session Henry Shue, Wilson Memorial High School, Fischersville, was installed as state president, together with Judy Oates, Norview High, vice president, and Kathryn Russell, Annandale High, Fairfax county, secretary.

During the session, delegates accepted the invitation to hold their 1957 convention at Mary Washington College.

"Mr. Quaker" Talk

Saturday's guest address was delivered by "Mr. Quaker," living trade-mark of the Quaker Oats Co., who, colorfully costumed to symbolize American tradition and principles, outlined to his teenage audience the responsibilities that will be theirs as the first generation to take over the stewardship of America at a time when this country is the recognized world leader.

He said America's new position demands higher standards of U. S. citizenship, and that the youth of today must prepare to cope with the challenges and tests with which they are going to be "surely confronted."

Saturday morning foreign students attending Longwood College composed a panel discussing "Understanding People of Other Lands." Genevieve Joatton, France, Berta Duarte, Mexico, Celina Leon-Gomez, Honduras, and Betsy Welbon, who lived two years in Japan, appealed for toleration of differing customs and traditions, a sympathetic approach to national peculiarities, and a genuine interest in the language, customs and traditions of other peopics as the surest road to understanding.

Highway Safety

Friday's guest address by Richard Preston, a Maryland high school state student council officer, called for "productive leadership" from among today's youth to improve the teenage driving and accident record-the worst among age groups.

He said unless improvement is made, teenagers can expect legal reprisals from those who would protect themselves from abuse. "If it becomes law that we will not be allowed to drive after dark-we'll have only ourselves to blame," Preston declared. He said the SCA is one of the best youth organizations for affecting a change for the better.

Much of their 4 hours here was devoted to small group discussions all based on "understanding"-the convention theme. In these, the bridge of understanding between students and their communities, faculties and P-TA's was strengthened. Numerous sessions were devoted to discussing methods of improving the effectiveness of the SCA among students.

Friday night's banquet and dance were the social highlights of the convention. During the dance delegates selected a "Mr" and "Miss" State SCA, the honor going to Shirley Carpenter, James Blair High, Williamsburg, and Ann Shultz, Marion High School.

Schenkman to Judge Young Musicians In Annual District Music Festival

Fourteen bands, twenty-four choruses, twenty-six soloists, and fourteen ensembles will arrive on the Longwood campus Saturday to participate in the annual Distinct III Music Festival.

Among the judges for this year's festival will be Mr. Allen Bons, head of the music department, Duke University, Durham, North Carolina; Mr. Herbert Carter, director of music, East Carolina State College, Greenville, North Carolina; and Dr. Carl A. Fehr, director of choral music and the Common Glory choir, College of William and Mary, Williamsburg, Virginia.

Other judges will be Mr. Edgar Schenkman, conductor of the Norfolk Symphony Orchestra, Miss Emily Clark, Longwood College, and Joel K. Ebersole, Longwood College music department.

Edgar Shenkman will be remembered by Longwood students because of his appearance here last year with the Norfolk Symphony Orchestra. Until May 1948, Mr. Schenkman was head of the orchestra department at the Juilliard School of Music. He went to Norfolk in September 1948, to assume the conductorship of the Norfolk Symphony Orchestra and Norfolk Civic Chorus.

Mr. Schenkman's work in orchestra and choral conducting has been praised by major critics in New York newspapers and magazines. He has conducted premiere performances of many choral woks of Juilliard, where he began teaching in 1934. In addition, he has served as guest conductor for concerts in cities as far west as Denver. During the war, Schenkman did considerable work for the government in recording and arranging for documentary films.

Aside from his civic work, Mr. Schenkman has directed a chorus at the Norfolk Division, College of William and Mary-VPI. He is also a lecturer in music history.

Founder and former conductor of the Toledo, Ohio, Friends of Music Orchestra, Mr. Schenkman has been a guest conductor of a number of leading symphony orchestras. Mr. Schenkman has recently organized and directed Norfolk's first Youth Symphony.

A graduate of Juilliard and a violinist in his own right, Schenkman is married to a Juilliard graduate. His wife, a violinist and soloist, is a member of the Norfolk Symphony Orchestra. Schenkman, who is 48, his wife, and five children lived in Larchmont, N. Y. before moving to Norfolk.

Dr. John W. Molnar of Longwood College, chairman of the District III Music Festival, invites everyone to attend the festival being held Saturday in Jarman Auditorium. Choruses will be presented starting at 8 a. m., and band will begin performing at 1 a. m. There will be no admission charge.

DR. WALTER HARTLEY

Hartley, Jesson, Two Noted Pianists, To Combine Talents In Joint Recital

A joint piano recital will be given in Jarman Auditorium on April 24 by two well known pianists, Dr. Walter Hartley and Dr. Roy Jesson.

Dr. Hartley, assistant professor of music at Longwood, and very prominent in the musical field, has taught here since the fall. Dr. Jesson, a native of England, taught at Longwood for two years recently and is now with the University of Richmond.

The program of three selections for the recital will be performed by the artists on two pianos. The "Concerto in F" by W. F. Bach, son of the great composer Bach, is a sonata for two pianos, and will be the first rendition. Then a "Sonata in D Major" by Mozart will be played by the two pianists followed by "Variations on a Theme by Haydn" by Brahms.

Dr. Hartley, a native of Washington, D. C., where he received his early education, served in the Army nearly two years before entering the Eastman School of Music in Rochester, N. Y. From Eastman's he received his Bachelor's Degree in Composition, his M. M., and his Doctorate degrees. The 29 year-old player, teacher, and composer has already won national recognition in the latter field. In 1952 he received the Virginia Collier ward for compositions, and in 1954 he was commissioned to do work by the Kdoussevitsky Music Foundation; he completed this successfully.

Recently Dr. Hartley was awarded a $300 prize for his overture submited to a contest held by the National Symphony Orchestra of Washington, D. C. Longwood recently had the pleasure of hearing this work of the young composer when the National Symphony Orchestra, performing here on March 6, played his "Concert Overture" as their opening number.

Dr. Hartley's co-recitalist, Dr. Jesson, was a member of Longwood's faculty from 1952 until last fall. Born in England, he graduated from the Royal College of Music with the equivalent of our B. S. degree. After serving as captain in the British army, he at-

Lancaster Speaks, Receives Money For '56 Scholarship

Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, President Emeritus of the College, spoke to the student body yesterday in assembly. The topic of his address was "The Teacher Situation in Virginia—Past, Present, and Future."

During the assembly program Alpha Kappa Gamma presented Dr. Lancaster with the money which was donated by the students in the "Length for Lancaster" campaign.

Approximately $300 in pennies was presented in a wheelbarrow to the former president by Becky Fizer, chairman of the AKG project. To this Dr. Lancaster added a $300 check donated by friends.

Dr. Lancaster has spent a great part of his life trying to raise the standards of the public school system in Virginia so that the college graduates will work in the manner of "the educated man." Since retiring from Longwood College on July 1, Dr. Lancaster has been kept busy working on and giving speeches for the betterment of education throughout Virginia.

Governor Thomas B. Stanley appointed him as the Director of the State Referendum Information Center in Richmond. The main objective of this center was to inform the voters of the State about the correct facts concerning the referendum.

Dr. Lancaster was appointed as chairman of the Board of Trustees of Sweetbriar College, and he is also on the Board of Trustees of Episcopal Seminary. The former president is a member of the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce Committee on Education, and on the standing committee of the Diocese of the Episcopal church in Virginia.

After a visit to Florida, Dr. Lancaster now resides in Bath County.

Lohr Selected As Representative To Annual Apple Blossom Festival

(Agee Studio, Farmville, Va.)

Jane Lohr, Longwood's representative to the Annual Apple Blossom Festival, leads an active life on oampus.

Mary Jane Lohr, a senior from Hood, has been chosen by a faculty committee as Longwood's representative to the annual Shenandoah Apple Blossom Festival. The Festival, which is held each year at Winchester, will take place on April 26 and 27 this spring.

Jane, a physical education major, is president of the Athletic Association, having also been secretary of the A A the previous year. She was a winner of a white blazer award this fall for outstanding athletic achievement.

Also along the line of athletic participation, Jane has played varsity hockey for all of her four years at Longwood, and this year she was elected captain of the varsity basketball team, having played on the team all four years. She is a member of the Monogram Club and the H20 Swimming Club.

This versatile senior was selected as a member of Who's Who in the American Colleges and Universities and was tapped into Alpha Kappa Gamma this spring. She is an ex-officio member of Student Government. During her sophomore year she served as treasurer of her class.

A member of the Pan-Hellenic Association, Jane belongs to the Pi Kappa Sigma social sorority. She is appearing on May Court for the second time this spring.

Highlighting the ceremonies of the first day of the Festival is the Coronation of Queen Shenandoah, which will take place at 2:30 on Thursday afternoon. Immediately afterwards will come the Pageant of Springtime, which includes a cast of 1200 participants.

The Firemen's Parade, with bands, floats, and marching units, composing the largest aggregation of Volunteer Fire Companies and equipment in the United States, will be at 6:00 that afternoon.

The concluding event of the day's festivities will be an aerial fireworks display at 8:00 p. m.

Friday's calendar presents the Grand Feature Parade, a three-hour spectacle, composed of sixty-five bands, fifty-five floats, a drum and bugle crops, majorettes, riding clubs, antique autos, and marching units.

Both days offer concerts, dances, big value bands, square dances, orachards to view, and historic places to go. Each year a record number of visitors are brought to the Valley of the Shenandoah for the beautiful and widely-famous Apple Blossom Festival.

Government Girls Attend Convention

Yesterday Longwood saw three of its government girls leaving for Mississippi. Lou Wilder, Nancy Lea Harris, and Frances Patton were on their way to the Southern Intercollegiate Association of Student Governments being held on the campus of Mississippi Southern College in Hattiesburg, Mississippi. The convention begins on April 12 and ends April 14. This is the forty-first annual conference to be held.

The theme for the convention will be "Student Awareness on the Southern Campus." There will be a series of discussion groups which will center around such questions as the definition of Student Government and an evaluation of it.

Former President, Methodist Pastor To Speak In June

Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, President Emeritus of Longwood College, will deliver the address at the commencement exercises to be held in Jarman Auditorium, June 3. Dr. Lancaster retired as President of the college last July.

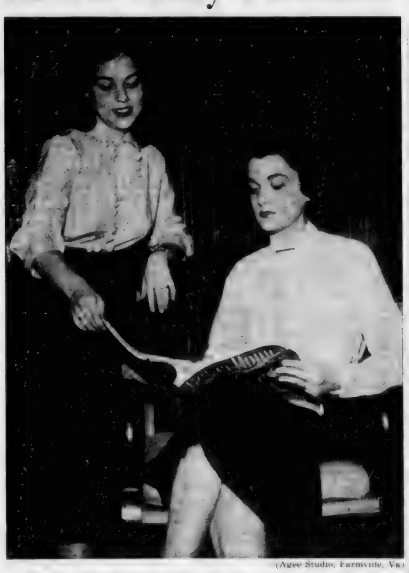
The Rev. A. Purnell Bailey, Pastor of the Centenary Methodist Church in Richmond, will deliver the Baccalaureate Sermon. While a chaplain with the First Cavalry Division during World War II, Mr. Bailey was the first Christian minister to broadcast a continuous daily devotional service over the Japanese radio network. He now has a national daily broadcast, "Daily Bread" and writes a syndicated newspaper column, "Bread of Life."

Representatives of Virginia Colleges To Attend Woodrow Wilson Institute

In nations across the seas, in universities around the world and in many of our states the memory of the great world leader, Woodrow Wilson, will be honored in 1956, the centennial of his birth. In his native state, Virginia, many events have taken place and many more are planned. One of the significant weeks will be during the last week in April when visitors will come to Staunton to honor the ambitions and achievements Woodrow Wilson.

Because he was a great Christian statesman, it is appropriate that the week begin with a religious emphasis. In Staunton's First Presbyterian Church, where his father was pastor when Woodrow Wilson was born, a distinguished minister will preach at eleven o'clock on Sunday, April 22. That afternoon the choirs of the city will unite in a Choir Festival.

On the evening of Tuesday, April 24 at eight o'clock the Church Peace Union of New York will present a Tri-Faith Panel of Speakers at King Auditorium, Mary Baldwin College, which institution has on its campus the original church in which Woodrow Wilson's father was minister and in which Woodrow Wilson was baptized.



On Tuesday and Wednesday, April 25 and 26, the beautiful homes and gardens in Staunton will be open to visitors as observance of Historic Garden Week, sponsored by the Garden Club of Virginia and the Augusta Garden Club. Luncheon will be served each day at the home of Mrs. W. J. Ferry.

On Thursday, April 26, Virginius Dabney, Editor of the Richmond Times-Dispatch, will hold a Woodrow Wilson Institute in King Auditorium, Mary Baldwin College. During the morning Dr. Thomas J. Wertenbaker, of Princeton University, will speak on "Controversies which Wilson had as President of Princeton," and President Harold Dodds, of Princeton University, will tell of "Woodrow Wilson's Educational Philosophy."

In the afternoon Arthur Koch, of the New York Times and Dr. Robert C. Clothier, former President of Rutgers University, will

Longwood's Queen, Maid Of Honor Reveal Many Pastimes Of Royalty

(Agee Studio, Farmville, Va.)

Joan Darnell, Maid-of-Honor, looks over May Day Queen Patsy Rice's shoulder to view the latest in homes and furnishings.

by SANDRA DYER

There is no need for boys to attempt to get a date with the two outstanding beauties at Longwood! Of course, we're referring to Patsy Abernathy Rice, May Queen, and Joan Darnell, Maid of Honor, in the coming May Day festivities.

Patsy, a black-haired, brown eyed beauty standing five feet three and one half inches tall, has already attached a Mrs. to her name. Woody, her lucky husband, is a member of Uncle Sam's service for the time being and is stationed in Germany. Our May Queen doesn't intend to let an ocean stop her, though, for she plans to join him after graduation. On their return to the States, Patsy will probably teach while Woody completes his college term.

Being elected May Queen this year is certainly not Patsy's first beauty honor. Why even when she was six, Patsy entered and won a beauty contest! She was chosen Queen of the Ocean Bowl in High School and has been consecutively on May Court while attending Longwood.

Beauty is definitely not Patsy's only outstanding trait. We who have witnessed her acting in many Longwood Player's Productions know of her dramatic talent. Patsy participates in these plays for enjoyment and is very enthusiastic about them. This is only one of the many things that she enjoys, however. Walks on the

The "Y" And You

Although the academic year is nearing an end, the work of the Young Women's Christian Association on this campus goes on. For this work we need you and your support. Won't you help?

Yes, we know that directly after supper is a perfect time for walking, but would it not be a perfect time for meditation and prayer too? We all need this quiet time after the hustle and bustle of the day to think things over and to talk with God. For this reason the "Y" Cabinet urges you to attend Prayers each evening.

The aim of our Y. W. C. A. is to unite girls of all faiths. One way by which we try to carry this out is the holding of Union Vespers Services in the various churches of Farmville. These services are planned by the different church groups, especially for the students of Longwood. The last of these services to be held this year will be at the Presbyterian Church on May 13th. Let's make our attendance better on this date than we have during the rest of the year.

We would also like to suggest that you become familiar with the "Y" Library. If there are any books which you would especially like for us to buy, please give your suggestions to a member of the Cabinet.

Soon we will be signing up again for "Y" Little Sisters. Since each of you knows what it is to be going away to college, to not know anyone, and to seemingly be all alone in the world, we are sure you will add your name to the list. However, do not stop here. Write your little sister during the summer and look her up as soon as you get to school so you can visit her during the year. In this way you will be giving her the "first glimpse of the Longwood spirit."

With your prayers, your help, and your support we will be able to give religion its proper place on the Longwood Campus.

President, YWCA

Success in Sight

Within the next thirty days Longwood Estate will play host to another Longwood May Day. Each year this traditional event is witnessed and enjoyed by a great number of people. The success of May Day has and will continue to depend on the participation of the students in it.

Work is well underway for the 1956 May Day, but much work lies ahead of those in charge and those working under them. Help is needed for both the very large and the very small jobs to make this year's event the success it has been accustomed to.

Many students have indicated their interest already by signing up and volunteering for jobs which have been announced. These students are urged to back up their signature and agreement to work by showing up when the time for the actual work comes around. Between now and the actual day of the celebration, the committee heads will find it necessary to ask students to do specific jobs. A good spirit of cooperation helps tremendously in getting these jobs done.

Whether your job be one of dancing, sewing costumes, working on props, or one of the many less conspicuous duties, you have a large, but greatly rewarding, job ahead of you—and your best is needed.

Fire's Not Folly

With the March winds barely blown out and promises of hot and dry weather ahead, the need for fire defense becomes increasingly important all over the country. We here at Longwood, with memories of a fairly recent and disastrous fire still in mind, have a lot to do in order to insure ourselves against a more catastrophic result in the event of another such ordeal.

The College is regularly inspected and is installing adequate fire equipment continuously. However, a disaster of the worst kind cannot be prevented if the protective equipment is improperly or unwisely used. Fire drills for the students are as important to fire protection as is the most modern and scientific equipment and safety devices.

Fire drills at Longwood are a drudge to some and a joke to others, but it appears that few of the students are taking these p l a n n e d evacuations, particularly the night drills, with a great degree of seriousness. There is a great lack of realization that fire drills are necessary and planned with the intent of better enabling the students to meet the hazards involved in a fire.

Students should be reminded that speed is of the utmost importance in a drill, and that if a drill were successfully and speedily completed, there would never be a need for a repeat drill during the same night.

In review of the fire drill rules, students are required to switch on the overhead light and to pull down the window of their room. Upon leaving the room, each girl should be wearing a coat, shoes, and scarf, as well as carrying a towel and book.

Fire drills, since they will undoubtedly continue, could be made much more tolerable as well as profitable if they were carried out by each girl with regard to their purpose.

Spring Fervor and Fever

"Spring is busting out all over," as witnessed by the droopy, dreamy-eyed, sunburned college girls at Longwood these days. And in the spring a young woman's fancy turns to love too (probably she thought about it in the first place), and all over the school are blinding flashes of diamonds on that fourth finger, left hand.

Throughout the dorms enthusiastic girls are writing letters, filling out applications, and talking about camps, national parks, offices, and all sorts of summer jobs. The roofs, piled with sunbathers, look and sound like Coney Island minus a few gallons of water and men.

And what enters into the midst of all this beautiful season of Spring Fever? Classes! And what's more—tests! With warm sunny days and green scenery outdoors, who stays inside to study for tests? In fact its even hard to just get to classes-period!

But to get on a more serious note, we should all stop and think. There are barely two more months left in school; enough to get a lot done and too much to throw away.

So throw a cold splash of water right in the face of that lazy "Spring Fever." Reconcile yourself to the fact that you'll never be as brown as Redskin Indian (who didn't get his tan by cutting classes). As for love and diamonds, well, congratulations! But don't go overboard about your summer job. Gain your best start for the summer holiday by finishing these last two months with the same fervor applied previously this year.

Six Seniors Eagerly Bow To New York To Extend Regards To 'Old Broadway'

By JACKIE MARSHALL

Once upon a time, six little hicks peered longingly over the craggy peaks of Willis Mountain and yearned for the cosmopolitan life of that perennial paradise—New York.

There was a dramatic hick, a pony-tailed hick, a red-headed hick, and a hick with a nose. They were all extremely ambitious hicks and before long, they had accumulated enough medical supplies, steeled their nerves, and collected a few paltry pennies to see them comfortably through five days of wine, wonder and song.

Soon, the open highway found itself supporting one overloaded Ford which had the peculiar but lovable affliction of groaning, shaking, and wheezing all the way, stopping only at those Esso stations which boasted the good hopekeeping seal of approval.

Although the pilot of the expedition was wearing foggy bifocals, the trip was a safe and uneventful one with the exception of three weak-winged birds, two bony cats, and one very old hound. We also rode into a major turmoil of the elements commonly called a storm at which time we must have closely resembled a Noah's Ark of the highways.

Throughout the trip, those weak-stomached ones who had doped up with Dramamine, slept; the driver and the backseat driver merely dozed fitfully; and the others alternated between boredom and mild cases of travelers' hysteria.

At New Jersey, we paused to park the car at a fellow-hick's house and loaded up into another helpful hick's car to complete our journey into New York. We travelled underground most of the way, through Holland—the tunnel, that is. Almost immediately upon emerging from the tunnel, our helpful hick was stricken with traffic-panic, and we were quite suddenly unloaded at the Fourth Police Precinct. My, how it was precipitating. There we were—wet, bedraggled, carrying all manner of cardboard suitcases, bags of shoes, and left-over, water-logged saltines—standing alone — in the middle of New York—at Fourth Police Precinct. This was a golden moment!

From that time on, we were on the town. We walked and walked and walked and walked. Where did we walk? Let me tell you where we did walk. We walked to places of cosmopolitan value. There were plays and automat food. There were high heels caught hopelessly in those confounded New York sidewalk grates and that was automat food. There were nights and nights of standing and shivering with cold as we waited vainly to obtain admission to Steve Allen's show.

There was the Taft Hotel's bar room, "kickapoo joy juice," "naught" Charlie Drew, the wnton warblers and then there was the automat food. There was window shopping, clearance sale shopping, midnight snacks of ten cents worth of cabbage, walking down Fifth Avenue barefoot at 2 a. m., and there was the automat food.

We had culture hour, too. We gapingly appreciated skyscrapers, the U. N., the Metropolitan Museum, church on Easter Sunday and the automat food.

As for society, we made our debut on Fifth Ave. in the Easter parade and developed 10,000 blisters hogging the TV cameras for our fans back home. We said "cheese" from the audience on that "show with a heart"—"Strike It Rich," and we ate—automat food.

By the last night, we were all lying prostrate in the hotel feeling a variety of emotions. This was the last night of returning home on our run-over heels. This was the last night of brushing our teeth to the tune of a temperamental water faucet. This was the last night of sitting down and counting our dwindling money, plotting our next day's course, trying to remember our names, massaging our feet, and thawing out gangrenous fingers. This was the last night we'd go to sleep to the lullaby of impatient horns, screeching tires, and voices of people we didn't know.

We had entered New York in a wet, torrential splash of glory! we had developed runs, warts, bunions, varicose veins and "coffee-" nerves; we had accumulated play programs, Robert Q. Lewis shopping bags, a genuine love for prunes, and an intense dislike for girdles. We had all this and we had each other—6 out of 10,000,000 faces were familiar!

We left New York in a mental and physical fog at six o'clock in the morning. We went, we saw, and we were bushed. 'Twas great, 'twas terrific, 'twas the most, to say the least.

In all due respect to the people with whom we jostled intimately each day—we attribute to them our wonderful time! to the clerks all over the city—we attribute our poor financial status due to tips (the holy custom and law of the city); to the miles and miles of sidewalk we attribute our flats, which used to be heels; and to the city itself—we recommend a more modern 4th Police Precinct, birth control, and more automats. My parting words are—Give my regards to Broadway and long live small towns everywhere!

Editor's Note: In case there's any question as to the identity of these venturesome travelers they are Jackie Marshall, Dottie Rector, Georgia Jackson, Helen Warriner, Jane Blake, and Phyllis Nurney.

Final Artist Series Program To Star Atwater, Dekker In 'Two's a Company'

"Two's a Company" starring Edith Atwater and Albert Dekker comes to Jarman Hall, April 16, as the last program of the Artist Series for this season.

This will be an entirely unconventional presentation as the stars use only a table with a pitcher of water, two chairs, and brilliantly-lighted stage for the background in scenes and sketches of love and imagination from the world's great poetry and drama, some of which are by Shakespeare, Sandburg, Mark Twain, Robert Frost, and others equally as well-known.

Edith Atwater, one of the most versatile actresses of the American Theatre, is uniquely qualified for the many different characters that she portrays in "Two's a Company." She has played almost every type of role from gold digger to match girl; wife, mother, and mistress; siren, vixen and queen; young and beautiful; old and mean. Her glowing beauty has doubtlessly been an asset in the variety of characteristics she has portrayed .

Miss Atwater, a native of Chicago, began her stage career on tour with Henry Hull in "Springtime for Hill." Within a year she was on Broadway creating such roles as Maggie Cutter, the romantic secretary in "The Man Who Came to Dinner."

As so many professional people of shaw business did during the war, Miss Atwater gave her time and talent for the troops overseas by recording poetry to music.

Besides her Broadway appearances, Miss Atwater has appeared in every important summer stock company in the country. She has made numerous television appearances, her most recent being the "Armstrong Circle Theater."

Playing opposite Miss Atwater and no less a star, Mr. Dekker is known to millions of picture-goers and a great television audience. He has starred in such productions as "Death of a Salesman," "Deep Are the Roots," "Woman of the Town," and others of this caliber

Mr. Dekker graduated from Bowden College, Maine, and even as a student he was interested in the philosophy and teachings of Sandburg, Robert Frost, and James Stevens who came to Bowden to teach. While still in College, he toured New England, reading his favorite poems. However, these were not his only interests as his husky, six foot, three inch stature helped him earn his letter as an All-Maine tackle, and he was at the time pursuing a pre-medical course.

After graduation he was persuaded to go on Broadway where his career as an actor began. Several plays followed before his twelve successful years in Hollywood.

These two artists, Miss Atwater and Mr. Dekker, came together in "Two's a Company" to provide an exciting and laugh-provoking ,yet thoughtful and inspiring, evening.

Noted British Film Scheduled April 18

by PAT JONES

"The Cruel Sea," which Universal-International is releasing in this country, was filmed for the J Arthur Rank Organization by Ealing Studios; the same studio made such popular successes as "The Lavender H ll Mob," "The Promoter," and "The Man In the White Suit."

Based on the best-selling novel written by N.cholas Monsarrat, "The Cruel Sea" opens April 18 at the State Theater.

The book ranked among the world's best sellers and has been published and serialized in newspapers and magazines in almost every country in the world. In Great Britain alone, it has been read by an estimated four million persons.

The story behind "The Cruel Sea" can be traced back to the early days of the war when Monsarrat, then a relatively unknown writer, decided that idealistic passive resistance could never win a war. He had entered the battle at first as a stretcher-bearer. After five months, he made up his mind to take a more active part in the fight and volunteered for the Navy.

He was a sailor for the next five and a half years. He commanded a corvette, was later transferred to frigates, and was mentioned in dispatches.

"The Cruel Sea" is fiction in presentation, but starkly real in fact, and Monsarrat has at no time(d on imag.nation. The horrifying incidents are factual reporting. The film, of course, has been made with a rigid adherence to the book, allowing, naturally, for editing for dramatic purposes as well as for length.

Compressing a two hundred thousand word novel into a movie lasting slightly over two hours requires a judicious choice of material to be used. Eric Ambler, in writing the script for the screen, chopped Monsarrat's 414 pages to 125.

The film was cast with little-known players from British films and stage in order to inject as much reality as possible into the story. In hemoving the personalities of well-known film stars from the picture, the producers felt that most of the emphasis would be on the story itself, where it properly belongs.

The film tells the gripping story of a professional sea captain and his civilian crew. On board the "Compass Rose," a seaworthy corvette, they ride out the rough seas, combat enemy submarines and in the process, shape their own characters.

The point of both book and film is that the sea is the main antagonist. It is summed up as neatly as anyone could ask when the British seasman greets a German submarine man struggling brokenly up the boarding net out of the oilsoaked ocean. "Give us your hand, matey."

The romantic relief is provided in the gracious role of the girl import who lives through the agonies of her man at sea, waiting for his safe return after each hazardous adventure.

The acting follows a tight pattern of competence. There is no waste motion, no flicker of emotion that does not penetrate to levels beneath the surface. Jack Hawkins presents a strong and profoundly moving portrait of the captain, and Donald Sinden provides a sensitive and capable first officer, while Virginia McKenna is his love, Julie Hallam.

Directed by Charles Frend, "The Cruel Sea" is an outstanding achievement.

beach along with collecting shells are favorite pastimes for Patsy. She also loves to read, dance, and listen to music. She cooks quite well, too. All of her friends claim, though, that she loves to talk more than any of these.

Here at Longwood, Patsy is a member of Alpha Sigma Alpha Social Sorority, Vice-President of Alpha Psi Omega, Vice-President of YWCA, a member of Longwood Players and the Canterbury Club. She was chosen to membership .n Who's Who this year.

Joan hasn't added a Mrs. to her name yet, but the sparkling diamond on her left hand assures us that the event is in the near future. The lucky guy is John Cowley, a junior at MCV. After graduation at the end of Summer Session, Joan plans to teach the first grade in Hampton.

A beauty of five feet three inches tall, brown hair and brown eyes, Joan has been in many beauty contests. She represented Wythe District in the Firemen's Convention held in Phoebus and participated in the Miss WEV-TV Contest in Norfolk. In 1953 Joan was selected Miss Hampton and represented her city in the M.ss Virginia contest.

Beauty isn't foremost in this Maid of Honor's mind, for Joan likes all water activities, particulary boating, both speed and sailing. She is quite adept at surf board riding and enjoys it along with boating. She also likes to listen to music.

At Longwood, Joan is a member of Future Teachers of America, Cotillion Club, and Pi Kappa Sigma Social Sorority.

Eight freshmen participate in lively folk dance during their physical education class.

Traditional Folk Dancing Classes Give Graphic Vivid Look Into Past History

During the winter months, the freshman physical education classes, taught by Miss Olive Iler and Miss Eleanor Weddle, took up folk dancing. There are other dance classes taught here, including modern dance, tap, and square dancing; but these freshman classes were the only ones .n which only folk dances were taught.

Folk dances are traditional dances of a given country which have evolved naturally and spontaneously in conjuction with the everyday activit.es and experiences of the people who developed them. Through folk dancing we are provided with a graphic and vivid Link with the past.

Related in origin to everything of importance in the daily lives of a specific people at given times in their history, folk dances stem from customs, beliefs, emotions, and events related to religion, war, occupations, courtship, marriage, death, superstitions, rituals, festivals, and innumerable themes common to all peoples everywhere.

In the freshman classes, the dances were taught as they actually originated .However, through these dances. many social dance steps were also learned, including the waltz, fox trot, and polka. The teaching of these dances in class helped to give the freshmen a well-rounded physical education program.

The dances represented a variety of countries. From England there came "Rufty Tufty," "Old Rustic Dance," "Green Sleeves," and "Fireman's Dance," while from Germany came the "Lovely Wulka," "All Black Brothers," and "Half-Moon."

Sweden contributed the "Barn Dance For Three", and "Tantoli," and from Scotland, "The Highland Scottishe." The Russian dances were "Troika" and "Peddler's Pack," while Denmark was represented by "The Hatter" and "Little Man In A Flix." Also two recreational dances, "Bow Belinda" and "The Jesse Polka" were taken up.

Some of the classes which learned these dances will also participate in the May Day dances. The knowledge of these folk dances should prove profitable to them as many of the same steps occur in both groups of dances.

"A Leader in Sportswear"

Ginnie Pearce, Busy Junior, Gets Summer Appointment

By PATSY POWELL

Virginia Lee Pearce, a Longwood Junior, is looking forward to a new experience. Virginia Lee, better known as Ginnie, will leave Miami, Florida, on June 13, bound for the island of Jamaica. Twenty-one year old Ginnie will be experiencing her first plane flight. " . . . and I'll be scared to death," she says.

Ginnie, from Holland, Virginia, has led a full and varied life. She was never too busy, however, to serve her church. As president of the Young Woman's Auxiliary, secretary of her Sunday School Class, or secretary of her Baptist Training Union Department, Ginnie was always working. Having taken piano lessons since she was in the third grade, she was called upon to be pianist for almost every organization in the church.

In the summer of 1952, while attending YWA camp at the Baptist lodge, Virginia Beach, Ginnie dedicated her life to full time time Christian service. She feels that such things as YWA camps, summer at Ridgecrest, North Carolina, where she atended youth meetings, and the Baptist Young Peoples' Tour of the Baptist Colleges, Universities, and Institutions in Virginia have done much to enrich her life. It is Ginnie's ambition to go on the tour again, serving as a counsellor.

Ginnie returned to Holland High School in the fall of 1952 as Secretary of the Student Council, vice-president of the Beta Club, and President of the Latin Club. She graduaetd in 1953 as Salutatorian of her class.

Having heard of Longwood College and the fine work of the B. S. U. on Longwood campus, Ginnie decided to continue her education here. During her freshman year she was president of her Sunday School class. She then became pianist for the B. S. U. and next year Ginnie will be president of the Baptist Student Union. Whenever anything is going on at the Student Center, Ginnie is always there. A member of the Farmville Baptist Church, she has also served on the YWCA cabinet this year.

Each summer Ginnie tries to find some interesting and different occupation. Last summer she was appointed by the Home Mission Board of the Southern Baptist Convention to serve as a missionary to the Kathleen Mallory Good Will Center in Baltimore, Maryland. Ginnie found that the work of a Good Will Center missionary is quite varied. She led Vacation Bible Schools for a month, did club work with both children and adults, and even cooked and helped clean the center.

Virginia is excited about her work in Jamaica this coming summer. She was chosen from the nominees of the B. S. U.'s on all college campuses in Virginia. Each campus nominated one person, who submitted an autobiography to the Selection Committee. After all of the nominees were interviewed by the committee, four were selected to serve as student summer missionaries. In addition to Virginia, Jim Bush, University of Richmond, Betty Wyatt, Westhampton College, and Katherine Bobbitt, Medical College of Virginia, were selected.

For the future Ginnie has many plans. Upon graduation from Longwood, she expects to teach elementary school in Virginia for two years. Then she will go back to school. This time school will be the Carver School of Missions and Social Work in Louisville, Kentucky, which she plans to attend for three years.

Faculty Members Lead Busy Lives During Springtime

Dr. Francis G. Lankford, Jr., President of Longwood College is attending the annual meeting of the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics which is being held in Milwaukee, Wis., April 10-14. Dr. Lankford is the vice-president of the council in charge of the college section and chairman of the planning committee for the summer meeting to be held August 19-22.

Dr. Charles E. Lane, professor of geography at Longwood College attended the annual meeting of the Association of American Geographers, which was held at McGill University, Montreal, Canada, April 2-4. Dr. Lane is the President of the Virginia Geographical Society.

Dr. Frances Butler Simkins, professor of history, delivered the Walter L. Fleming Lectures at Louisiana State University, Baton Rouge, April 9-10. His subject was "Religion Is A Factor in Southern Civilization."

The Appomattox County Teachers Association held their annual banquet Wednesday night in the Appomattox H.s. School cafeteria. Guest speaker for the occasion was Dr. R. C. Simonini, Jr., head of the English Department.

Dr. Simonini spoke on the subject of "Sense and Nonsense About Our Language" in which he discussed the nature of the English language and some unscientific notions that have arisen about it.

Home Ec Students To Attend Meeting

Mrs. Nell C. Griffin, Jo Maxey, and Margaret Newton will attend the Home Economics Convention, April 12-14, at the John Marshall Hotel in Richmond. The Home Economics Club is sending them to represent Longwood College at the three day, state-wide convention.

The theme, "You, the Future of Home Economics," will be discussed by Dr. Helen R. LeBaron, Dean of Home Economics at Iowa State College, on Friday. Besides hearing this speaker, the two delegates will attend various discussion groups, tea, parties, a banquet, panel discussions and a college club party from Thursday morning at 10:30 until the convention ends on Saturday afternoon at 2:00.

On Friday, Miss Lora Bernard, decorating instructor, will take a group of Home Economics majors to the convention for the day.

Included in the group will be Suzanne Prillaman, Liz Elliot, Jane Wood, Mary Robertson, and Gretchen Lemon.

Choir Busily Plans For Spring Opera

The Longwood College Choir is going to present the opera "Dido and Aeneas" on May 9 and 10.

The opera is by Henry Purcell, England's great composer of the early Seventeenth Century. The opera was written for a girls' school at which Purcell was teaching. Purcell uses the classic Greek drama as a basis for the story which is based on Homer's "Iliad."

The College's string orchestra will accompany the choir in the opera.

The leading parts are being sung by Cleo Allen as Dido; Mary Ann Wright as Aeneas; Carolyn Clark as Belinda; Pat Powell as Attendant; Joyce Clingenpeel as Sorceress; Ann Thomas as First Witch; Moonyeen Warren as Second Witch; Carol Carson as Sailor and also as "Spirit."

All members of the choir are working on committees for production of the opera, assisted by dance groups under the guidance and direction of Mrs. Emily K. Landrum. The staging is being assisted by Mr. David Wiley, and his classes.

Anne Rountree has recently been named as the 1956-57 Fire Chief by Nancy Lenz, outgoing Chief. To assist her as dormitory wardens Anne has chosen Nancy Quarles, Senior; Mary Ann Barnett, Junior; and Peggy Harris, Sophomore.

Dam Site Lease Given for Buggs Island

Longwood College has obtained a lease on a tract of land at the Buggs Island Dam for a camp and general recreational area. The college made the first application for land bordering the reservoir under a new policy set up by the Army Engineers in Norfolk of making the federally-owned property available to educational institutions at a nominal fee.

The 275-acre tract obtained by Longwood is four miles west of Boydton between Buther's and Rudd's Creeks at what is officially known as the Reservoir of the John A. Kerr Dam of the Roanoke River Basin.

Longwood plans to develop the tract into a year-round multi-purpose recreational area to serve the entire institution and the public served by the institution. Present recreational facilities of the college are restricted by the fact that the campus is located in the heart of Farmville with little room for expansion. There is no means of bringing together large groups of alumnae, students, and persons attending conferences.

Longwood has over 20,000 living alumnae, a faculty and administrative staff of more than 100, and a student body of 818. The enrollment is expected to reach at least 1,000 by 1960.

Dr. George W. Jeffers, professor of Biology, has been appointed chairman of a committee to make plans for the development of the property, by President Francis G. Lankford, Jr. Other members of the committee are: Miss Olive T. Iler, professor of health and physical education; Dr. Charles F. Lane, professor of geography; and J. H. Wamsley, business manager.

Responsibility and Reward

Each of us as young adults and college students here at Longwood enter a phase of our life which is characterized by a freedom we have not heretofore known. In our high school years our conduct was guided and guarded largely by our parents. Here at college we have restrictions, for without them it would be impossible for a group of people to live together. However, for the most part we come into the liberty of adulthood. We have an opportunity to make our own decisions and to distinguish right from wrong.

I wonder how many of us have stopped to think of what college life can give to each of us if we do become masters of ourselves and grow in self-respect. The advantages of individual friendships, the high and uncompromising integrity made possible by the Honor Code, the broadening of our minds through educational experiences, and the leadership and fellowship in each organizational undertaking. These and many others are included in every phase of our daily activities.

However, these advantages place us under definite obligations. In order for us to have these advantages, one must feel the responsibility of doing his or her share of work while at college. There is a saying that "ability is not the measure of responsibility, but responsibility is the measure of ability." The power to assume responsibility is of as much importance as intellectual acuteness.

In the life of college, the value of the student and the character of the student is indicated by his willingness to assume responsibility, not only for his own conduct, but also for that of the college. We can legislate for ourselves personal laws by which to live, work, play and grow in fellowship with the students around us.

I am saying this in connection with the responsibility which each student has to the Student Government Association. To some of you the work of the Student Council may be vague. In order to clear up your thoughts, I will state briefly several duties performed by your Council.

As most of you know, the Council meets every Tuesday night. Sometimes the group has long meetings lasting for many hours when they are planning activities, projects, or working out social and academic problems for the betterment of the students and the College. One of the major responsibilities of the group is the enforcement of the honor system.

During the past year the Council has met with the housemothers, faculty, and administration to seek to embody better relations between the personnel of the college and the students. The Student Council publishes and distributes the student handbook each year. The rules are made by the Council in cooperation with the administration of the College. Also the Council plans the Orientation Program for freshmen and transfer students entering the College each fall. The Council sponsors an assembly program each year. This year we were fortunate in having Dr. Raymond B. Pinchbeck, Dean and professor of the University of Richmond.

In the line of entertainment the Council sponsors a Rec Dance each year. Also, the Council sends delegates to the National S. C. A. Convention. This year the Convention was held April 11 through 15 at Mississippi Southern College in Hattiesburg, Mississippi.

The above are a few of the activities performed by your Council. In undertaking any task there should be no standard short of the highest. These activities are performed by your representatives, but in order for the Student Council to function properly, each one must feel the responsibility of doing his share in the part of supporting the Student Government and their activities. Each student is a member of the Student Government Association.

Nancy Lea Harris
President, Student Government Association

Fact or Fiction?

If one were to ever stop and calculate the percentage of true statements among the many statements which are digested and passed on every day, it is likely that the retsults would be very embarrassing. It might be worthwhile occasionally to stop and reflect upon the number of statements passed on by you of which you are not able to establish truth.

How often major misunderstandings are caused by the negligence on the part of a few or a large number of students to check their wording or interpretation of something which was overheard by or told to them. The seriousness of small-scale "rumor spreading" has shown itself many times later on, in the form of a large-scale confusion, affecting many more students than those responsible for its cause.

There seems to be great tendency on the part of students to participate in exaggerations, modifications, and self-interpretations in both a major and a minor capacity. Some of the rumors which have circulated and rebounded back to their source have been found to be utterly riduculous and completely unwarranted. Fortunately, some rumors are curbed by those in a position to correct them before they reach enough ears to influence and sometimes harm their subject.

It's hard to determine the degree of seriousness with which some "miss-statements" are taken. Often the reputation of a person is at state in the repetition of an unproven comment, and many times even though the comment is proved to be false, the attitude formed by such comment prevails.

However, of the greatest concern are those rumors which influence and, unfortunately, frequently damage the reputation of the College or those in authority here. When rumors which are started by a few careless students penetrate the area of the campus and are overheard by outsiders, the degree of seriousness and extent of damage done is inestimatable.

A situation of growing concern has arisen on campus in regard to the increasing number of rumors which are constantly in circulation. As one student remarked disgustedly, "You just can't believe anything you hear around here anymore."

No one person can put an end to the circulation of rumors on the campus. But each student should make a conscious effort to refuse to repeat statements overheard just for the sake of being the one who has the latest information or the most startling announcement to reveal. Think before you speak and help to eliminate the increasing feeling of distrust and confusion which has come to be so prevalent.

DOTTIE RECTOR JAMES PARKER

Rector, Parker To Study At University Of Virginia

The University of Virginia will be increased by two Longwood students next fall, much to the two students' delight. For Dottie Rector and Jimmy Parker, now seniors at Longwood, have received the happy news that they have been awarded scholarships to attend U. Va. next year. Dottie, who was awarded an Assistantship and Jimmy who was awarded the Virginia Mason Davidge Fellowship fund will both take advantage of them in the field of drama and speech. Both are well-known and successful with this field here at Longwood.

Dottie, an English major from Arlington, attended Washington and Lee High School where she was active in dramatic productions. After coming to Longwood she began a rapidly successful career in the drama department. In her sophomore year she served as prop girl for the Longwood Player's production of "Angel Street," and then advanced to stage manager and light technician for "Romeo and Juliet." During her junior year she served as technical director of the Players and acted in "Blithe Spirit" and "Dark of the Moon." This year Dottie is president of the Longwood Players. She served as stage manager for "Ring 'Round the Moon" and was assistant director of the recent "Blood Wedding." Dottie holds membership in Beorc Eh Thorn and Alpha Psi Omega. An avid golf player, she also is very interested in art expression through oil abstracts.

With her assistantship Dottie will be working as an assistant in the department of speech and drama at U. Va. This work will involve different things including work in the university theater and directing children's theaters in town. At the same time she will be working on her M. A. degree in drama so that she will be able to teach the following year.

Dottie, who is more interested in the directing or interpretation and creative side of college drama, considers herself very fortunate in obtaining this assistantship and is grateful to all who have helped her.

James Parker, from Cumberland County, is also an English major and equally excited about his scholarship to U. Va. next fall. He too will study in the department of speech and drama there.

Jimmy has been interested in dramatics for a long time and participated first in productions at Cumberland High School and then here at Longwood. His prominent success with the Longwood Players is well known on campus. He has acted in "The Bore," "Twelve Pound Look," "Death Takes a Holiday," "Angel Street," "Romeo and Juliet," "Physician In Spite of Himself," "Blithe Spirit," and "Dark of the Moon."

Last year he was also vice-president of the Players, and he was also honored by being awarded the "Little Oscar" for his portrayal in "Dark of the Moon." He directed the play, "Wind of the Moors." This year Longwood remembers Jimmy for his roles in "Ring 'Round the Moon" and in "Blood Wedding."

At present he is directing the senior class play at Farmville High School. The play, " Our Hearts Were Young and Gay", from the book of that name, will be given May 4. Jimmy is now president of the honorary dramatic fraternity, Alpha Psi Omega.

With the help of his scholarship, Jimmy hopes to obtain his M. A. degree in dramatic arts. Then after a tour of duty with the Army he hopes to teach and also get his Doctorate in the future.

Besides his interest in the theater he also loves music and enjoys expressing himself by playing the piano.

Beginning with the interest in the finer arts given to him by a high school teacher and by all of his friends and teachers now, he is very grateful for their encouragement and the opportunities they gave him.

Chamber Music Lovers Enjoy Program By Duo-Piano Artists, Jesson, Hartley

Three of the best-known works in classical style for two pianos were presented by Dr. Walter Hartley of Longwood College and Dr. Roy Jesson of the University of Richmond last night in Jarman Auditorium. The duo-piano recital was presented like an evening of chamber music in the style of a string quartet rather than the conventional style of two concert pianist.

"Concerto in F Major," by W. F. Bach, the first selection played, was the least-known of the three selections. The concerto is difficult for all but the best pianists because of the need for detailed and absolute rhythm control. This graceful work of J. S. Bach's highly gifted eldest son is in three movements: Allegro moderato, Andante, and Presto.

Two well-known selections "Sonata in D Major," by W. A. Mozart, the great composer of concerti, and Variations "On a Theme of Haydn", op. 56b, by J. Brahms, completed the recital. The "Sonata in D Major", a brilliant sonata, is one of the more festive of Mozart's piano concerti. Written in three movements, Allegro con spirito, Andante, and Allegro molto, this composition continued the classical form of the recital.

In Variations "On a Theme of Haydn", the theme is a "St. Antoni Chorale," a suite for woodwind instruments, once attributed to Haydn but now thought to have been a composition of Pleyel, a pupil of Haydn. There are eight variations on the original theme. These represent a wide range of moods, in some of which only the basic harmonic structure of the original "St Antoni Chorale" is apparent.

The impressive Finale is also a set of variations based on a bass melody which was derived from the orginal theme. The Finale leads to a majestic restatement of the theme.

In all three of these selections the two pianists had almost equal rols in the music, with each player alternately having the main interest. At no time during the recital was one piano subordinate to the other for any length of time.

As an encore, the two artists presented the "Characteristic March, No. 1 in C," by Franz Schubert, the Austrian composer.

Shriners To Give Benefit Program

The Acca Temple band and chanters will entertain in Jarman Hall at Longwood College on May 11 under auspices of the Southside Shrine Club. Proceeds will go to the Shrine's crippled children's hospital fund.

The uniformed band, described as "the million dollar band", the chanters and a comedy team from the band, "The Irresponsible Nuts From Nowahere," will perform successively during the concert.

The Shrine of North America supports 17 hospitals for the care of crippled children, whose parents are unable to support long and expensive treatment. Over 250,000 children have received treatment in such hospitals supported entirely by Shriners and their friends.

Virginia children are sent to the hospital at Greenville, S. C., the one nearest to this area.

Southside Shrine Club is composed of members of Acca Temple in Richmond who reside in Amelia, Blackstone, Burkeville, Crewe, Kenbridge, Farmville, Victoria and surrounding counties.

The benefit concert will begin at 8 p.m.

Progress In Opera, "Dido and Aeneas," Reported as Begun by College Choir

"Dido and Aeneas," by Henry Purcell, which will be presented by the Longwood College Choir on May 9 and 10, was first performed at a school for girls in London in 1689. Purcell directed the first performance. All the characters were girls except Aeneas. The opera was not again produced until 1895, when it was done at the Royal College of Music.

"Dido and Aeneas" is described as the first English opera. This is not strictly true, but it is the first English opera which was sung from beginning to end. The opera is based upon a tale from the "Illiad"; as most of the operas of the day were based upon classical subjects.

Purcell's music has dramatic poignancy and beauty which is not surpassed, if equaled, in the more famous work on the same subject by Gluck. After the overture, the scene opens on Belinda telling Dido the advantages of a marriage with Aeneas, from a political point of view; Dido has her doubts, even though she feels a great love for him. Aeneas presses his suit and with the encouragement of Belinda and the courtiers Dido accepts.

The next scene opens on a cave, in which the sorceress describes her hatred for all things royal and wealthy and tells her fellow malcontents of her plot. She sends a false spirit to inform Aeneas that he must return to Troy and reestablish the Trojan empire.

The third scene shows a hunting party of the royal couple, following the wedding. A storm is conjured up by the witches, and disperses the party. Aeneas' heart is broken when the spirit tells him that he must return to Troy, but he obeys.

The last scene opens on a rowdy harbor scene of sailors. The witches are pleased with their plot. Dido believes that Aeneas is faithless. He attempts to tell her that he must go, but Dido sends him away. When he leaves, she commits suicide in her grief. The opera ends on one of the most expressively beautiful choruses ever written, in which the chorus bewails the fate of the queen.

The opera is being conducted by Dr. J. W. Molnar,. At the piano will be Dr. Walter Hartley, assisted by Ann Hart. Mr. Joel Ebersole is the vocal coach and Mr. James Carson will be at the organ. The dancers will be under the instruction of Mrs. Emily K. Landrum.

Festival to Feature Manning, Anderson, Noted Artists, With Combined Voices of Hampden-Sydney and Madison

Three outstanding New York soloists, Miss Florence Manning, Mr. Delbert Anderson and Mr. Robert Falk will be featured with the Madison and Hampden-Sydney College Glee Clubs in their Spring Festival of Music. Filling the solo parts in Haydn's "Creation", these professional performers will be with the two choral groups in Harrisonburg on May 11 and at Hampden-Sydney's Gammon Gymnasium on May 12.

The soprano solo parts will be filled by Miss Florence Manning, who will be making a return engagement to this campus. Miss Manning was the soloist in 1946 when "The Creation" was performed at Hampden-Sydney, also under the direction of Professor Ned Crawley.

Miss Florence Manning

Especially well-known for her concert and oratorio work, Miss Manning has sung the Brahms "Requiem" with the Robert Shaw Collegiate Chorale and Bach's "B Minor Mass" with the New York Oratorio Society. With members of the Kansas City Philharmonic and a chorus of three hundred, Florence Manning was soloist in Handel's "Messiah" over the Columbia network recently.

With the Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra, Florence Manning sang the role of Elsa in Wagner's "Lohengrin" with Ramon Vinay and Blanche Thebom, and Fabien Sevitsky conducting. She has been the soloist at Music Festivals in Lindsborg, Kansas, and St. Louis, Missouri, and has toured extensively throughout Eastern, Southern and mid-Western colleges.

Equally successful as a teacher, Miss Manning teaches voice in New York and in Philadelphia and has given a demonstration singing lesson on television sponsored by the Board of Education. For the Benjamin Franklin Institute in Philadelphia, Miss Manning is doing research on Science and Music. She is beginning her sixth year as soloist of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, in New York City.

Delbert Anderson to be Tenor

Mr. Delbert Anderson, who will sing the tenor solo parts in "The Creation", got his start in the music world of the "Empire City" on Broadway. Arriving in New York several years ago, the young vocalist first appeared in the Broadway musical, "Brigadoon". In this production he sang solo lines in the opening and was used as the tenor in the opening of the second act which was quite operatic and dramatic.

In between Mr. Delbert Anderson's appearances in oratorio, off Broadway opera and on Broadway musical hits, he toured for two years with the world famous Revelers Male Quartet. Through the years this quartet has had many celebrities included in its roster, such as Wilfred Glen, Frank Parker, and James Melton. Mr. Anderson appeared with the quartet in two hundred and eighty-five formal concerts throughout the United States and Canada.

Mr. Anderson is a native of the Pacific Northwest and a graduate of the University of Washington music department. When Sir Thomas Beecham was conducting the Seattle Symphony, he chose Mr. Anderson to be tenor soloist in a Mozart Music Festival. On other occasions Mr. Anderson appeared with the Seattle Symphony in performances of "Messiah" and "Elijah".

Now a resident of New York, Mr. Anderson's most recent Broadway musical has been "Pajama Game". As understudy to the president of the union he has played the part twenty-two times in its current Broadway run.

MR. ROBERT FALK

Mr. Anderson is an established church soloist. He recently added to his credits a performance of Handel's "Messiah" at the Riverside Church.

Bass-Baritone is Robert Falk

A notably successful concert debut at Town Hall, New York, on April 13, 1951, climaxed years of careful training for the gifted American bass-baritone, Robert Falk. Critics acclaimed his rich, colorful voice, his superior gifts of style, clear enunciation and interpretive intelligence. Similar praise has followed his subsequent appearances, which have included performances with the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra, the Handel and Haydn Society of Boston, the New York Concert Choir and Orchestra, and opera and oratorio in this country and Canada.

Of a recent performance in Boston, Massachusetts of the title role in Mendelssohn's "Elijah", The Christian Science Monitor said, "fervor of expression was to be found in Robert Falk's depiction of the role of Elijah. His fine baritone responded to the deep emotion to be found in the prophets experiences—his singing was always commendable." Of his performance in Handel's "The Messiah" with the Springfield Symphony, the Springfield Union commented, "It has been many years since we have heard so distinguished a performance as Robert Falk, bass, turned in."

Mr. Falk has been heard in main communities in the East and Mid-West, where his wide repertoire of over three hundred songs in six languages has proved a delight to both musical and non-musical audiences. The role he will sing here has been a favorite vehicle for his art, aid his performances for varous oratoric groups and societies have been widely acclaimed.

'Gates of Hell' Foreign Film, To Come Here

The last in the better film series, "Gates of Hell" will be shown at the State Theater on Wednesday night, May 16. One is struck immediately in this film by the lavishness of production, the excellence of photography and the structure of the story. Winner of the Grand Prize at the 1956 International Film Festival at Cannes, "The Gates of Hell" is a tragic love story. It is strong candidate for good art house business. It is released in this country by Ed Harrison.

Set in Japan of the 12th Century against a background of war, rebellion and ancient custom, the story outlines the burning love and desire of a war leader for a woman. Unfortunately the woman is married and this leads to turmoil and tragedy. Thinking to win the woman by killing her husband, the warrior plunges a sword into a sleeping figure which turns out to be the woman, who had deliberately sacrificed herself that her husband might be spared.

The picture bristles with battle scenes. Highly interesting are the paintings, costumes, weapons and temples of the time.

Kazuo Hasegawas play the warrior with Machiko Kyo the wife and Isao Yamagata the husband.

A Dalei Production, it was produced by Masaichi Nagata with the direction and screenplay by Teinosuke Kinugasa.

Opera Plans Near End; Curtains to Rise May 9,10

The Choir will present "Dido and Aeneas" by Purcell in Jarman Auditorium on Wednesday and Thursday evenings, May 9 and 10, at 8 p.m. "The opera is one of the few written for women's voice only, this was the result of the fact that Purcell was teaching in a girl's college in England. The opera, then a new and extremely exciting form of entertainment, was composed by the young music teacher for his charges.

The cast has been working at the music and staging for the past several weeks, and the progress on the play has been very satisfactory. Under the direction of the committee chairmen, members of the student staff have been assembling properties, making costumes, and gathering makeup materials. Mr. Wiley's classes have been working on the stage scenery, and Mrs. Lanham's groups have been developing the dances.

The orchestra is a limited one, as the score calls for only a few strings and harpsichord.. In this case, a piano has been made to resemble the harpischord by putting thumb tacks into the hammers, with the resultant sound being that of the metallic, tinkling type that is associated with the harpischord. The orchestra consists of Louise Armstrong, Joann Fivel, Betsy Welbon, assisted by Mr. Wilfred Wagner, violins; Mr. Joel Ebersole, viola, Elaine Weddle, and Elsie Wells, celli, and Dr. Walter Hartley, piano.

Ann Hart, who usually accompanies the choir, will be in the prompter's booth, filling the important assignment of prompter. In the case of opera, the prompter must be an assistant conductor. In a performance, the singer must not be permitted to forget a single word for even a second; there is no opportunity to "stall", as there is in a play. Unfortunately, the orchestra keeps on going, and to omit a beat is fatal. Hence, the prompter calls out the first several words of every line to the performer before she sings it.

Since the prompter is in the booth in the center of the stage, and since the orchestra puts up a curtain of sound, her voice is not heard by the audience. In most instances, her reassuring calling out of the words is not needed by the performer; but the one time out of a hundred when it is needed, the prompter is there with the recalling words.

The cast, in order of appearance, is Belinda, Lady in Waiting—Caroly Clark; Dido, or Elissa, Queen of Carthage, Gay Allen; Lady-in-Waiting, Patricia Ann Powell; Aeneas, a Trojan Prince, Mary Ann Wright; A Sorceress, Joyce Clingenpeel; First Witch, Ann White Thomas, Second Witch, Moonyeen Warren; A Spirit, Carol Carson; a Sailor, Carol Carson, and a chorus of attendants, courtiers, witches, sailors, and townspeople.

The new officers of the Choir, recently elected, are President, Camille Atwood; Vice-President, Patricia Powell; Secretaries, Faye Salmon and Rosalyn Epps; Treasurer, Anita Heflin.

The choir will sing at baccalaureate and commencement exercises.

Loaf Later

There seems to be a tendency among students about this time of year to begin to relax and take a back seat on their schoolwork and their activities. It is understandable that with less than a month before the end of the session and with lazy or adventurous summer days ahead attitudes are bound to become more lax and the emphasis and importance is bound to shift from school to home.

However, there still remains a month during which activities and much work must be completed. There is still a chance for some to bring up their school averages and for others there is the opportunity of maintaining the grades achieved previously. Likewise, there is adequate time left in the semester to destroy or considereably lower a good average.

It is not only grades and classwork that are in danger during the next month. Organizations which have been functioning smoothly all year now need extra support and praticipation to close the year's activies with a good record. The best demonstration of continued interest in school activities could be shown through support of May Day practices at present.

It is never easy to renew efforts and buckle down at the close of a long and full year. Neither is it advisable to quit altogether. A happy medium might be achieved if students would endeavor to use the time which is left between now and June to advantage on their work and their school activitites and save their vacation for the summer months.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Praised Participation

Alpha Kappa Gamma would like to thank every student who participated in the "Length for Lancaster" campaign to build up the Dabney S. Lancaster Scholarship Fund. We are very proud and felt that the students caught the true spirit of Longwood in helping us carry out our project. The number of pennies totaled 26,910, and $300.00 was given by personal friends of Dr. Lancaster, which gave us $569.10 for our drive.

In addition to making "Length for Lancaster" AKG's spring project, we also held a rummage sale, donating the proceeds to the Scholarship Fund. We received $31.00 from the sale, giving us a total of $600.10 to add to the Danbey S. Lancaster Scholarship Fund.

We are hoping that "Length for Lancaster" may become a tradition at Longwood, as a means for building the Scholarship Fund. We take our hat off to you for your whole-hearted participation in this project.

This Gal's Mind-Like A Raggedy Team Has More Than One Mighty Loose Seam

by JACKIE MARSHALL

....Well, here I are—just—sitting—here in ye auld Longwood Dell, plucking black widow spiders from my various limbs, and putting antennae off grasshoppers' heads. Have you ever noticed how softly green the dell appears to be from a distance? Well, don't believe it! I was so overwhelmed by the feathery-looking foliage that I tried lying prostrate in it and came up with five two-inch punctures from rigid weeds, and indignant and malicious attack from a tribe of red ants whose home I had innocently, but quite thoroughly demonlished, and a mild case of poison ivy.

Now, before my squinting eyeballs is the raw material of another May Day (we last 'un, muzzy!). Many long legs, short legs, "Winne-white legs," and "Tillie-tan-legs" dance in a maddening tangle of on-beats and off-beats while the piano rocks and rolls under furious fingers. And me ? I just—sit. Either my talent is too great to waste upon the golfers curious gaze or they're planning to politely lay off me. Gad, what a loss!

Anyway, the whole deal puts me at my contemplative best because there's so much going on that I, personally and quite frankly, cannot work it all in. Therefore, I hereby chuck all this world of fact in preference to my own private world of thought and fancy-free.

At the moment, I have in mind my own ideas of the tomorrow at Longwood College—say, Longwood fifty years from now. In the period of time from now till then, I foresee a definite change in operation. I may be wrong, and I may be right. Nevertheless, it's my thoughts, so, knock it off!

To begin with, fire drills will become an activity of the utmost excitement. Once a month, the Fire Chief, who will be elected on the basis of that person with the most outstanding cigarette lighter, will secretly set fire to the dorms. A week's campus will remain in effect for those failing to evacuate their rooms immediately.

Student Government will be aided to even greater heights, by the addition of a firing-squad committee which will be composed of expert archery majors. There will also be one secret-service spy delegated from each class to be on Government. These girls will report to their respective classes whenever they find out what the Government girls really wear under their black gowns.

Hampden-Sydney will become by-gone beaux when the Longwood lassies turn their cocker spaniel eyballs in the direction of the snappy new Farmville Space Cadet Corp.

Classes will soon become extra-curricular activities while the majority of the super-minded students major in the general field of social compatibility under which are listed the minors of: Boys; Bridge; Bills; and How to Forge a Graduation Certificate in Ten Easy Lessons.

The Tea Room business will boom again with a slight cover-charge as Mrs. Dugger and her chorus-line - cuties perform at their blossoming best.

On the other band the Snack Bar will soon fade away under the commercial pressure of the former. "hot-dog girls" who now bellow "Pizza—15c!" through the hungry halls.

The training school will shut down as the children spend more and more time at their local psychiatrists due to complexes obtained from student teachers who insist upon telling the poor things that there is no Santa Claus.

The library will come to be known as the library-country club. The luxurious establishment will build on new wings, legs and necks by the finances provided by negligent customers of the student body.

Joan of Arc on the Colonnade will gallop off in search of Orleans—(steady, girl!)

Chi will be outmoded and forced out of business by another organization known as "Try" which runs rather than walks—to keep up with the faster times you know. However, the persistent group refuses to competely give up the ghost and will combine with the Madrigal Singers for an annual choral concert on the Colonnade.

Splat! At this point, I tire of the whole deal and am once again content to gaze blankly at the multitude of arms and legs and arms and legs and arms and legs and—aha! I see an antennaie-ed grasshopper!

JIM FRAZER, record - setting shot putter.

Frazer Sets Mark With 50-Foot Toss

Frazer Hits Fifty In Shot

After three years of unending practice, Jim Frazer, Hampden-Sydney's ace shot putter, has sent the sixteen pound sphere for a ride of better than fifty feet, and has thus become the first man from a Virginia College to accomplish the feat.

Frazer's record put came against a powerful Roanoke cinder squad which handily downed the Bengals 92-30 in a meet which saw four other Hampden-Sydney track and field marks fall. His throw, to be exact, was 50' 1/8" and set a new school mark in addition to a new standard for Hampden-Sydney's track. It overshadowed by eight and one-eighth inches his record heave of 49' 4" against Bridgewater a week before.

Frazer's new mark came as no surprise to those who have been close followers of his for the past three years, least of all to his coach, Bob Thalman. According to Thalman, it was only a matter of time before the 220 pound Frazer would crack the fifty foot mark, and now that he has, Thalman feels that the sky's the limit.

Said Thalman after Frazer's record throw, "the fifty foot mark has been more or less a psychological barrier to Frazer so far. He's had a lot to overcome, having broken his leg in his freshman year, as well as having changed his putting style in the circle. But he's a real worker, and there is no doubt in my mind that he will continue to go up now that he has gone over fifty."

For Frazer, it's just another record. In addition he holds the shot record in both the Little Eight and Mason-Dixon Conferences. And he's just as potent in the discus event, where he holds Hampden-Sydney's school and track record and the Little Eight and Mason-Dixon marks. His best throw in this event has been 145' 2".

Frazer next displays his wares on May 2 against W. & L. at Hampden-Sydney.

H-S Coach, Miller, Delighted As Tigers Lead Little Eight

When L. F. "Weenie" Miller took over the baseball reins at Hampden-Sydney this Spring, he inherited a team full of gaps, and at the time prospects for the season appeared anything but bright — possibly downright gloomy. However, since that time, and despite further loss of personnel due to academic standing, the affable Miller has found himself the envy of most Old Dominion diamond coaches.

Miller started the year with only one regular pitcher back from '55 in Ed Siersema, a junior from Richmond, and had big holes at first base and catcher. The rest of the infield and the outfield seemed to be pretty well intact, but without an experienced mound staff, Miller admits that he was somewhat dubious of the season's outcome.

The young coach figured that his team would have a lot of speed and that the Tiger could muster a fair amount of power at the plate, but everytime Miller could recount a team attribute, the pitching problem would immediately come to mind to cloud the issue. Anyway as it's turned out Miller's Tigers have been a much better club than even his highest expections.

In eleven games the Cats have taken eight wins, and in doing so have collected an average of ten runs per game. Their only losses have come at the hands of Harvard (14-12) Norfolk William & Mary (3-2), Washington and Lee (9-8) and V. M. I. (16-13.)

One of the big reasons for the Tigers' success is that their mound staff has been much more effective than anyone thought it would be. Bill Pierce, the Charotte, N. C., southpaw ace leads the pitchers, giving up only one earned run in the 27 innings he was worked for a 3-0 record. Third baseman Bob Humphries doubles on the mound when needed and has been a consistent performer. Veteran Siersema, along with Bill Tynes and Joe Leafe give the Tigers solidity down the line and left-fielders Warren Carter and Tom Fletcher can be called on when are needed. Carter has seen a lot of relief this year and according to Miller has been very "impressive."

But hittings seems to be the Bengal game, and they can boast of five men in the starting lineup who were hitting at a better than .300 clip after ten games. Leftfielder Gene Cooke leads the pack at .447, followed by Bernie Marlowe (.410), Ed Harlow (.400), Hunter Cox (3.75) and Jim Smith (.348).

However, the Cats aren't paying much attention to batting averages. They are much more interested in RBI's, and instead of bragging about averages, Miller's club argues about who's got the most RBI's.

Says Miller, "A good hitting average is fine, and of course, we encourage all the boys to be good hitters, but a power hitter isn't worth a dime if he can't perform with men on base. I think the boys are more RBI conscious than any club I've ever handled. We had a real bad day against Norfolk Division, but it taught us a good lesson. We got 11 hits, but left 13 men stranded. Twice in the first two innings we had the bases loaded and couldn't capitalize."

Doug Joyce, although hitting only .255, joins Gene Cooke in leading the RBI division. Both have sent 15 men home. Marlowe and Harlow follow closely with 13 each. So far the team can show a batting average of .342 and has averaged 8.7 RBI's per game. In a show of power, the Bengals have tagged opposing pitchers for 27 doubles, 8 triples and four homers. Marlow is credited with two of the four baggers, both against VMI when he went four for five.

On defense the Bengals have committeed their share of errors (an average of 4 per game), but for the most part haven't hurt too much. Miller figures that his infield of Cox at first, Marlowe and Smith at second and short, and Humphries at third would be hard to beat, man for man.

The Tigers are now leading the Mason-Dixon and Little Eight, and with luck, plan to make the M-D playoffs in mid-May.

Sports In Retrospect

by ANNE KEZIAH

Looking back on the year, we find that Longwood has been very active in the sports field.

To start off the year, we had the sports demonstration sponsored by the Athletic Association which was climaxed by the awarding of the blue and white blazers to those seniors who had been outstanding in athletic events during their college career.

September also ushered in hockey season, with both the varsity and class teams holding practices and scheduled games. The varsity team enjoyed a successful season with five players selected to play on the Tidewater reserve team at the annual Tidewater Hockey Tournament. The Freshman team went undefeated in the class games.

During October, the tennis singles were held with Lou Heier triumphing for the Green and Whites. Also many Longwood students began to take advantage of the horseback riding lessons which were taught by Miss Christine Von Kogh.

In November, the annual Color Rush was held, which the Red and Whites won, and the "Swimming Around The World" contest began.

December saw the beginning of basketball season with the varsity and class teams again holding practices and scheduled games. This year the varsity had a 5-1 record while the second team was undefeated in five games.

Also in December, the volleyball practices and games began and the "Carols By Candlelight" water pageant took place.

January, February, and March saw a continuation of the basketball and volley ball games as well as shuffleboard and ping-pong events. In March the Spring Water Pageant, "Dreamer's Holiday" was presented by the H2O Club.

April brought the "spring sports", namely, archery, tennis, wisket, softball, and golf as well as the swimming meet and ping-pong and shuffleboard tournaments.

Competition in these events will be followed by the presenting of the Color Cup to the class color winning the most athletic events during the year.

Famous Men Praise Former President, Woodrow Wilson, As Virginians Convene For Initial Centennial Celebration ..

by ELLA CARTER

Virginians took a bow last week at Staunton when noted speakers and educators came from the world over to express words of tribute to Woodrow Wilson.

With the dignity of a First Lady, Mrs. Woodrow Wilson with Wilson's daughter, Mrs. William McAdoo, took her place in the audience gathered for the Centennial Celebration.

"It is doubtful if the United States would have been faithful to its commitment to Woodrow Wilson's League of Nations if she had joined," revealed Arthur Krock of the New York Times.

A noted journalist and two-time winner of the Pulitzer Prize, Krock said, "The disillusionment of the war and the Treaty of Versailles had put the times out of joint for another and immediate idealistic venture by this country."

As a coverer of World War I and the Peace Conference Krock expressed his belief that Wilson "could have been the first and only perfect man in history, and still have failed to stem the opposing flood of his times" in an attempt to seek his country's approval of the League of Nations, covenant.

"War is followed by disenchantment," Krock told the audience of educators and students meeting at Mary Baldwin College, "and this draws the people to those who inevitably can point to the costs and errors of the fight."

Krock recalled that Wilson "lived as Presidents will, to question whether the institution of judicial supremacy he firmly held essential to enlightened progress was safe in the hands of the judges that it was producing."

The Journalist said Wilson urged the Supreme Court not to interfere in "moral and social questions originally left to the states, and in particular paternal morals in conflict with local opinion and purpose, local prejudice and convenience."

Speakers earlier in the day were New Zealand ambassador, Sir Leslie Munro; Princeton University President Harold W. Dodds; and Princeton Professor Emeritus T. J. Wertenbaker.

Sharing the platform with Krock were President Emeritus Robert Clothier of Rutgers University in the afternoon portion of the discussion of Wilson.

"President Wilson was a prophet, but he was not crying in a wilderness," said the occupant of the post held by Wilson himself. Speaking on Wilson's impact on higher education in the United States, Dr. Dodds said, "He not only advocated but worked so soundly that he made the administration of Princeton one of higher visibility."

Never had such vigor been placed 'upon the fifty guys to make us wise,'" said Dr. Dodds.

With his "Precept" system Wilson set "a new target for all American colleges." This system men could operate spreaded far beyond Princeton, Dr. Dodds said.

The college world of today is not the world Wilson had, Pres. Dodds explained. His times represented a low-water mark in the level of education. Wilson asked that "a student draw from his mind." Seeing a curriculum too restricted to meet the aptitudes of students, Wilson set his aim to offer a liberal education.

"Princeton could no longer be called a country club" after Wilson became president, said Dr. Wertenbaker. "His presidency meant intellectual richness." Wertenbaker, a professor who has spent more time lecturing abroad than any other American professor, said as an alumnus of Princeton he "was surprised when the conversation on campus changed to Shakespeare or Henry Adams rather than football."

Holding the unique honor of using Woodrow Wilson's desk in his office, Dr. Wertenbaker expressed to the audience an opinion shared and carried out by Wilson that "a faculty cannot plant into their students what they do not have themselves."

Those from Longwood attending the Institute were Dr. Beverly Ruffin; Mr. Henry Bittinger, as chairman of college committees for the celebration; Dr. Marvin Schlegel; Ella Carter, as a reporter; Betty Ellison; Suzanne Bunting; and Martha Joyner.

Morris Plans Mexican Trip For Methodist Work Camp

Jeanette Morris, Longwood College Junior, is looking forward to a summer in Mexico. She is one of two Virginia students chosen to participate in the Methodist Work Camp, a summer service project of the Methodist Church.

Twelve boys and eight girls representing twelve states will serve in Monterey, Mexico from June 20 to August 12. Jeanette and the other girls will do demonstration, cooking and sewing. They will also teach recreation and handicraft methods. The boys in the camp will work to improve sanitary facilities, teach better gardening methods, and work on a school project. Before they return to the United Staes the students will take a pleasure tour through Mexico.

Having learned much about the summer Service Camps from her sister who served in a European work camp last summer, Jeanette decided to apply for the project. To be accepted for Mexican service, a student must be able to speak Spanish. Jeanette has studied Spanish and is anxious to see if she can understand the Mexicans.

A library science major from Warwick, Jeanette is a graduate of Hampton High School. She is president of the Wesley Foundation and a member of the Library League, Spanish Club, and Zeta Tau Alpha, social sorority. After graduation Jeanette plans to do public library work.

Faculty Show Aids Scholarship Fund

The Longwood College faculty presented a Faculty Talent Show on April 25 in Jarman Hall. The show was sponsored by Student Government to benefit the Kappa Gamma to benefit the Lancaster Scholarship Fund, and was under the direction of Mary Ann Wright. Dr. Francis G. Lankford served as announcer of Station WLWC with Mr. David Wiley as Steve Allen.

The faculty orchestra, directed by Mr. James Carson, played several selections of music. The orchestra was accompanied by Dr. Walter Hartley, who also played Chopin's well-known "Fantasie Impromptu."

The lighter side of the program included several skits. Dr. Marvin Schlegel and Mr. Willard Leeper presented a telephone conversation. "Little Nell" was enacted by Mrs. Kathleen Cover, Mrs. Caroline Eastham, Dr. Dorothy Schlegel, Mr. Tom McCorkle, and Dr. Francis Simkins. Murriel Boswell taught a mock school with such notorious students as Mr. Carson, Mrs. Cynthia Green, Mrs. Mildred Davis, Dr. Gordon Moss, and Dr. Ethel Sutherland.

Mr. and Mrs. Joel Ebersole sang a group of semiclassical love songs. Among these were "Will You Remember?" and "It's Almost Like Being in Love."

The show would not have been complete without dancers, a chorus line, and a fashion show. Typical to all television programs was the Recipe Hour in which Dr. George Jeffers demonstrated how to bake a cake.

The final highlight of the evening was Dr. Rinaldo Simonini's impersonation of Liberace. Dr. Simonini played "Embraceable You," "Moonglow," "Deep Purple," and "April in Paris."

Workers In FTA Meet Here Today

A regional conference for advisors and others working with Future Teachers of America chapters in high schools was held here today.

The college's J. L. Jarman Chapter of FTA served as hosts for the one-day meeting in the Student Building. The conference was sponsored by the Virginia Education Association.

Gilliam, Jr., president of the Lynchburg Trust and Saving Bank, addressed the group on "Why Should I Teach?" T. Preston Turner, assistant executive, VEA, spoke on "The Teacher's Security."

A panel discussion on "The Why's and How's of FTA" closed the morning session. Dr. Davis Y. Paschall, of the State Department of Education and executive secretary of the Virginia Committee for Teacher Recruitment, served as the moderator. Members of the panel were: Mrs. Vivian Barr, co-sponsor, Amelia High School FTA; Miss Betty Jo Whittaker, president of Amelia High School FTA; Miss Emily Jennings, president, William Campbell High School FTA, Naruna; Mrs. Lou Ann Mason, president Lynchburg College FTA, and Dr. Boggs.

Following lunch there was a buzz session and question period. Mrs. Betty Shackelford Ellison, of Colonial Heights, is president of the college chapter; Dr. Earl R. Boggs, advisor.

FTA Chapter at Longwood College has been placed on the Victory Honor Roll of the National Association of FTA for its successful membership campaign. The local chapter now has 65 members and is working toward 100 per cent membership of all juniors and seniors in the college who are enrolled in teacher education.

Alpha Psi Omega Sets Stage for Plays; Moore, Ogburn, Mayo Combine Talent

The national dramatics fraternity, Alpha Psi Omega, will present its annual production of three one-act plays in Jarman Hall on May 18.

The three plays will be "Recover with Ease" by Robert Shanks, "The Stronger" by August Strindberg and "Pyramus and Thisbe" from Shakespeare's "A Mid-summer Night's Dream."

Barbara Burnside, who is directing "Recover with Ease," has released the following as actors in the play: Mary Mayo as Peggy, Tom Moore as Richard, Russell Vass as William, and George Ogburn as Mr. Meredith.

Mary Mayo is making her debut on the Longwood Stage. A member of Longwood Players, she has been active on production staffs and has worked with technical and backstage crews during her three years here.

Tom Moore, who is now teaching in Petersburg high school, is returning to Jarman for another performance. A graduate of Longwood, he will long be remembered for his performances as Friar Lawrence in "Romeo and Juliet" and as Earnest in Oscar Wilde's comedy "The Importance of Being Earnest."

Giving his final appearance on the Longwood Stage will be Russell Vass. He has trod the boards in many and varied roles since he began his studies at Hampden-Sydney, and is a member of Alpha Psi Omega.

George Ogburn is an old trouper with the Longwood Players and is also a member of Alpha Psi Omega. He has appeared in numerous productions and has played leading roles many times.

Presenting Strindberg's "The Stronger" will be Patsy A. Rice and Ann Brooking. Patsy and Ann are both members of the Longwood Players and of Alpha Psi Omega and are well known to Farmville audiences for their brilliant portrayals on the Jarman stage. Not only are they co-directing "The Stronger," but they are also going to act in the two roles. The play compactly portrays a brief glance into the lives of two faded actresses as they vie to establish which is the stronger.

Mr. Wiley, who will direct, has just had try-outs for "Pyramus and Thisbe" and has yet to announce the outcome.

Business Staff Cited For College Magazine

Jane Railey, recently-appointed Business Manager of the Colonnade has announced the new business staff for the magazine.

Anne Brierley and Margaret Beavers have been named as Assistant Business Managers. Head Typist will be Becky Glenn, assisted by Betty Smythers. Norma Reamy will be the new Circulation Manager, and Bobbie Carter and Elba Flynn will assist her.

Wright, Versatile Contralto, To Present Recital Sunday

These three selections, written in German, will be performed in English.

Three Italian works "O, Cessate," "Piacer D'amour," and "Danza, Danza," complete the first half of the recital.

Following intermission Joyce Clingenpel, a piano major from Roanoke, will play three selections by Brahms.

Mary Ann will sing four selections in German, "Der Schmid" (the Blacksmith), "Du Bist die Ruh," "Dedication," and "Die Lotuslume." She will complete the recital with "Nymphs and Shepherds," "I Attempt from Love's Sickness to Fly," "When Daisies Pied," and "All Through the Night," four English works.

Dr. Taplin, whose teaching fields are Victorian and American literature, is a lecturer in English at Boston University and was an assistant professor of English at Indiana State University from 1946-53. He holds the Ph. D. and A. M. degrees from Harvard University and A. B. from Amherst College. Mrs. Badger will come to Longwood from Tennessee Polytechnic Institute, where she is an assistant professor. She has taught at Florida State University, Memphis State College, and McMurry College. She has an M. A. degree from the University of Tennessee, and A. B. degree from Winthrop College. She expects to receive a Ph. D. degree from George Peabody College in June.

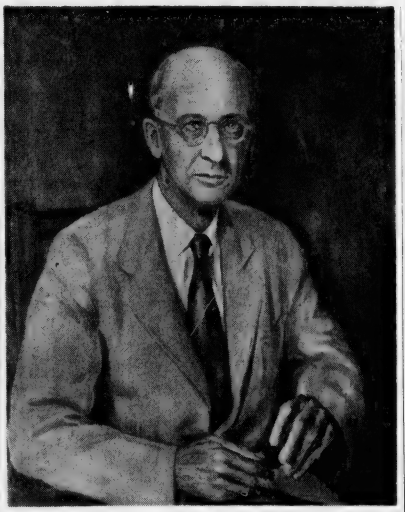
She will retire to her home in Greenville, Miss.

'Gate of Hell' Seen By Many Viewers; Praised by Critics

"Distinguished theater," says Newsweek of the last of the Better Films series that is playing this Wednesday at the State Theatre. Winner of the Grand Prize at the Cannes Film Festival in 1954, "Gate of Hell" is the first Japanese film in color to be released in the U. S. Film critic for Time magazine says, "Western moviegoers will experience the pure delight of soothing their eyeballs, scorched by so many Technicolored prairie fires, with a rainbow hung in a legendary mist."



Set in ancient Japan, the story of "Gate of Hell" is concerned with a Japanese soldier's burning desire to possess a lady of rank, married already to a Japanese countier. The soldier, driven by his maddening lust, plots the death of the husband. Knowing the soldier's intent, the wife plants herself in her husband's place, sacrificing her life for his.

Daiei Studios, in preparing for this film, sent representatives to the U. S. to study color with the Eastman Company, and it is the application of the Eastman color that makes the picture of note. Saturday Review has this to say, "It is the psychological use of color—the awareness of how emotionally effective color can become in films—that makes this picture of supreme importance."

Kazuo Hasegawa plays the part of the soldier Moritah. Lady Kesa is portayed by Machiko Yo, and her husband Wataru is Isao Yamagata. They are all superb performers. Teinosuke Kinugasa wrote and directed the movie.

Georgia Jackson, president of the Senior Class, has been selected as Longwood's representative graduate to appear in the Richmond News Leader's annual spring feature, "Outstanding Graduates from Virginia Colleges." Georgia has been active in many campus organizations and activities during her four years here.

Foster, Miller Awarded Top Recognition

by LINDA DOLES

(Acee Studio, Farmville, Va.)

Mary Ann Foster and Rubinette Miller as roommates present a double threat in the field of 4-H achievement, leadership and service.

When it comes to 4-H'ers Longwood is well-represented locally and nationally. We are fortunate in having on our campus two very earnest and successful 4-H workers, Mary Ann Foster and Rubinette Miller. Recently both have been awarded top honors for their faithful and enthusiastic services in their work. Mary Ann, winning the highest award offered, will attend the all-expenses paid National 4-H camp in Washington, D. C., this summer. Rubinette has been selected to represent Virginia at the National leadership camp in Michigan this summer.

Both girls who are sophomores, and incidently roommates, are well known on the campus for their friendliness and qualities of leadership. For the past 10 years both have been prominent figures in all types of 4-H work.

Mary Ann, a business education major, is from Poquoson. She attended high school there and has always been active in 4-H work. In 1951 she was chosen to be in the 4-H All-Stars. In 1953 she won a watch for her district farm home electricity work. The same year she was the state winner in 4-H achievements and also attended the short course as recreational leader at the University of Rhode Island. Selected from her high school she attended Girls' State and was elected treasurer. In 1954 Mary Ann attended the National 4-H Club Congress in Chicago and while

On Tuesday, May 8, the Litte Oscar winners were announced from the Longwood Players. The third award was made for the first time this year.

He became a member of the Longwood Players his Freshman year and was taken into Alpha Psi Omega, honorary dramatic fraternity, his Sophomore year. Crowded Condition

An appeal has recently been made to the students to cooperate with the adminstration in its decision to attempt to meet the growing need for college graduates and particularly professional teachers. Cooperation in this capacity would involve doubling up in the dormitory space available on the part of freshmen and sophomores, therfore allowing space for additional applicants to Longwood next year.

The decision to admit additional students despite a crowded school was made after a thorough study of the consquences involved and the possible alternatives. A new dormitory has been planned and will be furnished as quickly as the work can be done. Were Longwood to deny entrance to all of those who applied after the quota had been met, the junior and senior classes a couple of years from now would be relatively small. It is obvious that there would then be a small group to provide leadership, preserve and stabilize the school spirit, and to meet the needs of the public schools upon graduation.

From another standpoint, Longwood could not afford to turn down applicants for a college education at a time when more and more interest and emphasis is being placed on attending college. A glance at the other state colleges would show that their intentions are in favor of admitting students far above and beyond their original capacity.

As an alternative to crowding the dormitories the administration has considered and investigated the possibility of housing students elsewhere in Farmville. The impracticability of this procedure is evident in view of the loss of unity and the prevailing spirit of fellowship of which Longwood is so proud which would undoubtedly occur. From the standpoint of finances the cost of renting additional dormitory space in town is almost prohibitive.

It would appear that the only other alternative would be to flatly deny entrance to the applicants the College cannot entirely comfortably accommodate.

The administration has shown itself willing to assure the comfort of students as far as it is possible in a crowded condition. New and adequate furniture will be provided to make the changes which must be made easier and less drastic.

The student reaction and actions have been favorable thus far and it is hoped that students will take the time to reflect upon and understand the situation and then accept it as being a temporary and necessary to uphold the spirit and the standards of Longwood and to meet the requirements of a growing and college conscious population.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Sisterly Support

On behalf of the Y. W. C. A. Cabinet, I would like to take this opportunity to urge each of you to sign up for a Freshman Little Sister. Every girl at Longwood is a member of the "Y," but one of the problems that the "Y" has always faced is that of finding ways in which everyone will participate in the work of the organization. Big Sister-Litle Sister could be a partial solution to this problem, for many Big Sisters are needed for next year. There will be an exceedingly large Freshman Class, but there will be twice as many upperclassmen. It is really a shame to ask one girl to take two Little Sisiters when there are enough Sophomores, Juniors, and Seniors to have two Big Sisters for each Freshmen!

Since you have all now been persuaded to sign up, there is one further suggestion: don't just sign up to be a Big Sister — be one. When you get your card this summer telling you who your Little Sister is, please write to her. If you'll think back to your pre-Freshmen days, you will remember how nice it was to have one good friend waiting for you at college. Write to her, and go to see her when you get to school. Be a good friend, as well as a Big Sister.

The Big Sister-Little Sister lists are posted on the "Y" Bulletin Board. You can sign on either list: Preferred Little Sister or No Preference. Please be sure to give your summer address so that I will be able to reach you. Support the Y. W. C. A. and support Longwood — sign up for a Little Sister!

Last Will and Testament To Leave Behind The Fondest Possessions Seniors Can Find

by JACKIE MARSHALL

This is the end! The inevitable, anticipated and bemoaned conclusion of an academic year has arrived whereupon freshmen leave with fond thoughts of their future college years; sophomores gleefully leave the main building, childishly ignorant of the oncoming agony of the 15 million steps and desolation of Junior building; juniors leave with sophisticated realization of impending seniority. The seniors completely leave this whole business of which they have been a vital part for four years and become alumnae which is a state of being I prefer to toted ignore at present.

Yes, they leave a "home" when they graduate. To whom do they leave it? To you, the student body of Longwood. The fondest tangible or intangible possession of a senior is the thing that she wishes to pass on to her successor. In my careful observations I have decided to make out a representative will of the Senior Class. It is mildly illegal, but I have found during my four year seige here that the practice of the mildly illegal is one of the greatest joys to be experienced. Therefore, I hereby begin—read on, successors and heirs.

Jane Blake Lawrence leaves her thimble, chicken-cage, old moth-eaten coat, and sinus pills to Sandra Dyer because she, too, is a long-haired witch.

Ann Brooking leaves her large activity files to the '57 Chi to nourish their annual spring fire with.

"Baby" Carter leaves her long, lanky frame (she'll be a beautiful skeleton) to Fran McLoughlin—just for kicks.

Patsy Abernathy Rice leaves May Court, the dell, and the "Theat-uh" to any beauty who can grace the college as she has.

Carolyn Gray leaves her remarkable ability to gracefully sprawl all over the floor in creative dance to Loretta Kuhn. (You got it—whatcha gonna do with it, Khunie?

Patsy Hamner leaves her judo holds to Mrs. Eastham who may apply them on promiscuous dates in the parlor.

Gail Leonard leaves her bills, class cuts, and coffee nerves to Linda Garrison. (every good editor should have them.)

Georgia Jackson leaves her size 10 shoes to Longwood Players to be filled and used as weights; her pony tail to Nancy Lenz; and her resonant voice is left to echo through the halls 'til another dares claim its place.

Phyllis Nurney leaves her tear glands to the science department, her classic profile to Weedie Norman and her raincoat, secretarial abilities, and boredom to the FTA.

Dottie Rector leaves the footlights, the make up, the trials and the tribulations of a director to Flo Soghoian—out, out bright candle!

Lou Wilder leaves her capable leadership and place at the head table to Nancy Lea Harris, (her appetite, she takes with her), her blazer to the Hall of Fame and her ugly pills to the ugly!

Helen Warriner leaves her position on the annual staff (what's it) to "Mooch" Stoneman with hopes of producing an equally terrific book.

Betsy Welbon leaves everything to the greedy while she dashes madly off to a new world of cooking, cleaning and collecting violins.

All of us leave our best wishes to the Longwood student body. I selfishly leave only one thing and I regretfully leave even that—I leave you.

there was the only girl winner of the six to whom the 4-H awarded $300 scholarships.

On an all-expense paid trip she was flown to New York to appear on the Westinghouse television program, Studio I. Also that year she was one of 60 college freshmen to attend Camp Miniwanka in Michigan, representing Longwood.

Last year Mary Ann served as recreational leader at Camp Summers in West Virginia and went to the Congress again as a sectional winner representing several states.

The special camp that Mary Ann will attend this summer will help to bring 4-H achievements to national attention. The delegates, two boys and two girls from each state, will wear special uniforms and will take part in many events while in Washington.

In addition to serving as president of the Junior Class next year, Mary Ann is the new treasurer for the Y. W. C. A. FAREWELL TO THEE

SOCIAL NOTES

By VIOLET MARSHALL

On a warm spring night in the middle of May,
Carl North to Ann DeAlba had something to say.
In talking about the future plans of his life,
With a ring he asked her to be his wife.

Rose Sniegon with much happiness is glowing,
For a beautiful ring on her hand she is showing.
Walter Philbates is now her only beau.
Wishes of the best to the two go.

The music must have been entrancing
While Gayle Peoples and Bill Shiner were dancing.
For now sitting on her finger so bold
Is a Tech miniature shiny red and gold.

Fay Salmon is thrilled from head to toe.
For she has a Phi Gamma Phi pin to show.
At Emory and Henry are all of her dreams,
Jimmy Wyatt fits perfectly into her love schemes.

"Yes, I have a Delta Sigma Phi pin"
From Bob Lominack said Boots Nelson with a big grim.
"Best wishes to you, Boots," is my reply,
"And may much happiness be yours as the days go by."

A Kappa Sig pin has Carolyn Ward.
She has reached the goal she'a been working toward.
Butch Fronfelter is very near, you see .
For he is a sophomore at Hampden-Sydney.

"Moonlight and V. P. I." assuredly was the song,
That thrilled and delighted the happy throng.
The uniforms and formals were certainly demure,
As they walked on the floor in the Tech ring figure.

Those attending the dances were: Becky Fizer, Mary Ann Foster, Joanne Funal, Joyce Sedivy, Mary Stewart Sisson, Margaret Beavers, Nancy Richardson, Norma Reamy, Judy Eckstrom, Joan Higgie, Margaret Hudnall, Ann Thomas, Ann Schular, Cass Conner, Betty Griggs, Mary Lou James, June Baggs, Lou Gwyn Roark, Winona Payne, and Elba Flynn. And soon fraternity parties were in full swing.

Attending parties at U. of Va. were: Jean Parrott, Nancy Cousins, Ann Wheeler, Myra Jean Drummond, Sue Upson, Sandra Scruggs, John Lohr, Della Higgins, Vann Thacker, Wayne Boyden, and Lynne McDade.

Those who atended the S A E's cabin party in Roanoke were Betty Jean Spruhan, Betty Burks Keith and Gretchen Lemon.

The Sigma Chi's combo party at H-S. offered an enjoyable evening for those who attended this week end: Carol Carson, Jacque Deitz, Jean Eilers, Roberta Hamlet, Diane Hansen, Peggy Harris, Lynne Higginbotham, Shelby Johnson, "Bootsie" Miller, Jane Moore, Cat Ozmon, Sallie Parrott, Barbara Purks, Judy Rawls, and Pattie Roach.

Two weekends ago girls again went away,
To attend dances and parties so gay.

Highlighting the week end at William and Mary was the annual Southern Ball given by the K. A.'s. Janet Lloyd attended and had a grand time.

Others who attended fraternity parties there were: Nancy Drudge, "Aggie" Lowry and Jo Lynn Holland.

Becky Fizer and Sarah Whitehead journeyed to Tech to spend a weekend.

Jean Parrott, Ginger Ingram, and Judy Harris attended fraternity parties at U. Va.

The Kappa Sigs at H-S had a combo party which was enjoyed by all who attended. Those seen listening and dancing to the music were: Emily Atkinson, Cass Connor, Joanne Farless, Ann Hancock, Peggy Harris, Sarah Hastings, Christie Hulvey, Betty Ray Lazenby, Bettye Mass, Julie Moncure, Bonnie Moore, Mary Sue Owens, Cat Ozmon, Mary Talbot Parker, Flo Pollard, Barbara Purks, George Ann Reynolds, Sandra Scruggs, Sue Upson, Carolyn Ward, and Hardy Williams.

This summer I hope you have lots of fun.
I know it will be an eventful one.
Please come back with news galore.
So I can fill two columns and maybe some more!

Little Oscar Awards

"Dark of the Moon". He believes he learned the most in that role. Jimmy wishes to thank everyone for their help, consideration, and understanding during his four years here at Longwood, especially Dr. Earley.

Next year Jimmy will attend the University of Virginia on a dramatic scholarship. He will probably enter the Army after he finishes his studies. His plans after this are indefinite but he hopes to teach for awhile near New York, and do Summer Theatre work whenever possible. It is quite probable that he may make a career of acting.

Anne Field Brooking, the second Little Oscar winner, is a senior from Montpelier Station, Virginia. She entered the field of dramatics when she was a Sophomore at Longwood. Her dramatic talents have been shown in such plays as "Romeo and Juliet", "Blithe Spirit", "Dark of the Moon," "Ring Round the Moon", "Blood Wedding", and "L'Esprit," her Sophomore Production.

Besides dramatics, Anne is active in the honorary fraternities, Alpha Kappa Gamma, Alpha Psi Omega, Beorc Eh Thorn, and Pi Delta Epsilon. Her plans for the future are somewhat indefinite, however she plans to enter the field of social service.

The third Little Oscar winner is Russell Vass, a senior at Hampden-Sydney. He has worked with the Longwood Players for a long time, particularly behind the stage. He is also noted for his fine performances in such plays at "The Boor" and "Ring Round the Moon."

'56 Summer School Features Variety

The Summer Session at Longwood College, which will offer a varied program for both graduate and undergraduate students will open June 11, acording to Dr. Earl R. Boggs, Dean of the Summer Session.

The graduate program, which will be emphasized this summer, was first authorized by the State Board of Education two years ago to make graduate study available to teachers in the public schools of Virginia. The majority of the public school teachers in the state who obtained teaching certificates on the basis of two-year diplomas have completed requirements for the bachelor degree, and are being encouraged to continue their studies at the graduate level. Longwood offers both the M. A. degree in Education and the M. S. degree in Education.

Three sessions will be held during the summer: a three-week session June 11-29, a six-week session, July 2-August 11, both for graduate and undergraduate students, and a an eight-week session June 18- August 11 for undergraduates.

The three-week session is of special interest to administrators, supervisors, teachers, and prospective teachers in art business education, mathematics, and home economics. The six-week session includes courses in art, biology, business education, English, history, and music.

Study in art, biology, business education, English, general science, geography, health, history, home economics, library science, mathematics, music, philosophy, psychology, and physical education will be available in the eight-week session.

Tigers To Oppose W and L Tomorrow

Hampden-Sydney's high - flying baseballers invaded Crewe Stadium Thursday night at 8:00 for their second encounter of the season with Washington & Lee University in a game being sponsored by the Crewe Kiwanis Club.

The Bengals, who are leading the Southern Division of the Mason-Dixon Conference will be out to revenge an earlier loss to the Generals and their Coach, Bill McCann, a former Hampden-Sydney baseball mentor.

The Tigers will take a healthy batting average into the park with six men in the starting lineup batting better than .300. Coach "Weenie" Miller of the Tigers has not yet committed himself as to his starting pitcher. Since the Tigers beat Lynchburg today (Tuesday) they will have to take on Baltimore's Loyola in the Mason-Dixon championship playoffs at Death Valley on Friday.

A heavy advance ticket sale has been noted in Crewe and throughout the Southside, and fans are advised to come to the park early for a choice seat.

The game will mark the first time collegiate baseball has been played in the Southside Virginia town.

The newly-elected officers of the H20 Club were installed May 8 after the club's waffle supper at Longwood Estate. Special guests were Miss Olive Iler, Miss Rebecca Brockenbrough, and a number of students who have shown special interest and participation in the year's water pageants.

Green and Whites Still Lead In Class Color Cup Contest

The Green and Whites are still ahead in the race for the Color Cup, which is awarded each year to the class color winning the most athletic events during the year. As of now, the Green and Whites have total of 25 points and the Red and Whites have 20 points.

In the lastest competitive event the Red and Whites collected 10 points by winning the swimming meet. The final score of the meet was 45-34.

First place in the diving competition went to Peggy Hopkins while Susie Barr came in second. Nancy Richardson, Ann DeAlba, and Patsy Hamner won the pajama relay while Dolores Winder captured first place in the bobbing contest. First place in the 50 yard free style race went to Ann Jeter. Nancy Richardson took first place in the 50 yard breast stroke race and Ann DeAlba was first in the 50 yard back crawl.

The Red and Whites had previously won 6 points in the "Swimming Around the World" contest while the Green and Whites won five points in this event.

Looking back on the year, the Green and Whites started off by collecting 5 points as Lou Heier triumphed over Carol Wolfe in the tennis singles.

Next, the freshman team went undefeated through the class hockey games, thus collecting 10 more points for the Green and Whites.

As a result of the class volleyball games, each class color won 5 points. As a rule, 10 points are given to the class color winning the most games; but this year, since both class colors won four games, the points were divided.

The points were again divided as a result of the class basketball games. Each class color won four games and again each was awarded 5 points.

The competition in wisket will not be held due to a lack of participants, and the tennis doubles and class softball game are being played this week.

A final tabulation of points will be made later this week, followed by the announcing of the winning class color and the awarding of the Color Cup.

Thalman Gives Tigers' Grid Schedule

Bob Thalman, Hampden-Sydney's newly appointed football mentor, has announced a nine-game grid schedule for the 1956 campaign. Four games are scheduled for Death Valley, four will be played away, and one will take place on a neutral field.

Thalman, who took over the head coaching reins when Jim Hickey departed for North Carolina several weeks ago, will send his squad against the same opposition that the Tigers faced in their '55 campaign. Last season the Bengals posted an 8-1 record while running a consecutive win streak to twelve.

Hampden-Sydney is scheduled to open at West Virginia Tech on September 15th and will close their season on November 17th at Washington and Lee. Homecoming will be observed on October 27th when the Tigers play host to the University of the South (Sewanee). The annual game with Bridgewater College will be played at Harrisonburg, Virginia, a neutral site for both clubs.

The schedule: September 15 at W. Va. Tech; September 22 Bridgewater at Harrisonburg, Va.; September 29 Emory & Henry; October 6 Guilford; October 13 at Johns Hopkins; October 20 at Western Maryland; October 27 Sewanee (Homecoming); November 3 Open; November 10, Randolph-Macon; November 17 at Washington and Lee.

Lucile Peak, BSU Director, To Take Position At MWC

by PATSY POWELL

People usually think of seven years in terms of bad luck, but Miss Lucile Peak thinks that she has spent seven very lucky and happy years as Baptist Student Director at Longwood College. Since June 30, 1949, Miss Peak's guidance, companionship, loyalty, and devotion have been an inspiration to many Longwood girls.

A native of Long Island, Virginia, Miss Peak, better known as "Peakie", is a graduate of Gladys High School. Valedictorian of her class, she was named "Best all Round Student" and awarded the DAR Award which meant a trip to the DAR meeting in Chicago.

The problem of college was solved when Miss Peak decided to go to Madison College in Harrisonburg, Virginia. College meant active membership in the BSU, Kappa Delta Pi, Alpha Sigma Alpha, and the Student Council, plus the selection to Who's Who in American Colleges.

(Agee Studio, Farmville, Va.)

MISS LUCILE PEAK

As president of the Madison BSU, Lucile Peak made an unforgettable trip to the Baptist Student Conference at Ridgecrest, North Carolina, where she dedicated her life to full time religious work. She returned for her senior year at Madison as president of the YWCA.

Graduation from college brought a year of teaching in Charlottesville, Virginia. Miss Peak still remembers the time that she punished some of the students for going downtown only to discover that they went to buy her a birthday cake.

Next came two years of work for a Master's Degree in Religious Education. This was done at the Carver School of Missions and Social Work in Louisville, Kentucky. While at mission school, "Peakie" received the high honor of being asked to lead a "Praise Service." She was also chosen Queen of the Preacher's "Bawl," because Virginia's team won a baseball tournament.

Baptist student work has seen wonderful spirit and progress since Miss Peak came to Farmville. The work of a Student Director has been serious and fun. Of Longwood Miss Peak says, "I think the spirit and enthusiasm of Longwood girls is one of the outstanding features of the college."

On last April 7, a "This is Your Life" program was presented in honor of Lucile Peak by the BSU girls, the membership of the Farmville Baptist Church, and the alumnae of the BSU. She was presented with a Hamilton watch and numerous other gifts from friends.

On June 20, exactly seven years after her arrival in Farmville, Miss Peak will go to assume her new duties as Director of Baptist Student Activities at Mary Washington College. She will live at the Student Center at Mary Washington and do much of the same type of work that she had done while at Longwood; however Miss Peak says, "After four years at Madison and seven years at Longwood College, I will have a hard time shifting my loyalty."

From the BSU girls and her friends in Farmville go wishes for "Best of luck to you, Peakie," as she leaves Longwood to assume her new position of service at Mary Washington College.

Shrine Musicians Delight Audience In Program Friday

Acca Temple Shrine, of Richmond, delighted a large audience in Longwood Auditorium Friday night with a three part program of band and vocal music and the clown band.

Conductor Alton L. Howell varied the band program with classical and popular numbers reaching a peak in the El Capitan March by John Philip Sousa. Gaily bedecked in red and white uniforms and the traditional fez, the band presented an attractive setting for the concert.

Sonia Stolin, an attractive soloist, "stole the show" in the second part. Teamed with the popular Shrine Chanters, her voice was outstanding in rendition of "Inflammatus" by Rossini and "Ourve Tou Coeur" by Bizart.

The Shrine Chanters gave their usual fine rendition of choral singing, both popular and classical. "Thanks Be to Thee," and "Hallelujah, Amen," by Handel and "June Is Bustin' Out All Over" from the musical Carousel by Rodgers, were outstanding numbers on their program.

Thirty minutes of fun and magic performed by the clown band and the magician, A. M. Geyer, added levity and delighted the many children in the audience.

The Shrine entertainment was sponsored by the Southside Shrine Club, with Dr. Charles W. Scott, of Burkeville, as chairman. Proceeds will be used for the Shriner's Hospital for Crippled Children at Greenville, S. C.

New Scholarship Established For Speech, Drama Student

A scholarship in memory of the late Miss Leola Wheeler, former professor of speech and drama at Longwood College, has been established by the Longwood Players. The scholarship to be known as the Leola Wheeler Scholarship, will be awarded annually to a student majoring in English who has demonstrated special interest and ability in the field of speech and drama.

A scholarship of $200 will be awarded for the year 1956-57 to the student selected by the scholarship committee from nominations submitted by both students and members of the faculty. Members of the committee are: David Wiley, assistant professor of speech and drama; Dr. R. C. Simonini, Jr., chairman of the English department; and three students: Frederick M. Stables, of Crewe; Miss Forence Soghoian, of Richmond; and Miss Patricia Parker, of Newport News.

Miss Wheeler retired in 1949 after teaching at Longwood College since 1911 except for a few brief leaves of absence, and she died in 1954. Following her death the faculty of Longwood issued this statement in tribute to Miss Wheeler:

"Leola Wheeler brought to Longwood College the twin stimuli of sound scholarship and broad culture. Her dynamic teaching has endowed a full generation of Virginia girls with enthusiasm for literature and drama. Through them and their teaching that enthusiasm will live and multiply. Her work with women's clubs, the Red Cross and other agencies throughout the state, and for that matter the world, carried her influence into wide fields. Indeed there is ample evidence that she inherited a true missionary zeal for the noble intangibles of the spirit. Above all, however, she was a warm, living human being — our friend.

She lives, will always live, in our hearts and our lives."

Born September 29, 1884, in Golden, Mo., she came to Farmville in 1911 as head of the dramatics department and remained on the faculty until her retirement in 1949. She left the school briefly in 1917-18 while working in France with the Red Cross and again in 1921 when she served with the YWCA in Panama and China.

Miss Wheeler was for a time state chairman of the literature department of the Virginia Federation of Women's Clubs and chairman of the same department of the Farmville Women's Club for 25 years.

She pioneered in the establishment of high school dramatic clubs across the state and was influential in establishing the Woman's Club Library in Richmond.

She was sponsor and advisor to the Mu Omega sorority and later to the Zeta Tau Alpha sorority.

Miss Wheeer received her A. B. degree from Smith College, studied speech and drama at Emerson College, and got her M. A. degree from Columbia University.

In order that a scholarship may be awarded for next year, faculty and students are urged to submit nominations to the chairman of the committee by May 26.

Officers of FBLA Begin New Term; Harvey Gets Honor

Two recent elections have taken place by the Longwood Chapter of FBLA. First was the election of officers for the coming year. Mary Lu James was chosen to head the organization as president. Other officers include Norma Reamy, Vice-President; Ellen Webb, Secretary; Jane Crute, Treasurer; Charlotte Hall, Reporter; and Margaret Bullock, Historian.

Joan Harvey, past president of the FBLA, was elected as "Miss Ideal Secretary." Nominations were made at a previous meeting during the year and election and coronation of "Miss Ideal Secretary" were held at the last meeting of the year. Joan was chosen on the basis of interest and capability in the field of Business. Jane Railey was runner-up in the "Miss Ideal Secretary" Contest.

Plays By Tenessee Williams To Open Drama In Jarman

Students Experience Directing, Acting

By Pat Walton

On Friday, October 5th, at 8 p.m. "Three Unpleasant Plays" by Tennessee Williams will be presented by Alpha Psi Omega, the honor society for dramatics.

The three plays are representative of Williams in that the main characters are unwilling to see the world as it really is. They all have some dream or hope which will never be realized. A line from "At Liberty," one of the plays on the program, aptly describes their situations: "I'm caught in a trap."

"At Liberty," which will be directed by Flo Sogholan and Pat Jones, deals with the study of a strong character, the mother, and a weak one, her daughter. Gloria La Greene, who was once an actress but is now unemployed, Gloria, portrayed by Vivian Willitt, will admit even to herself, the truth and in her despair she reaches out toward anything that might offer her happiness. Molly Workman, as the Mother, tries to help her daughter, but her inner strength fails them both.

Lord Byron's Love Letter

Mildred Melaney and Carolee Silcox are presenting "Lord Byron's Love Letter." This is the story of an Old Woman and a Spinster, played by Clair Fleege and Marie Messick respectively. Their only income is what they receive from tourists who come to see a letter from Lord Byron to the Spinster's grandmother.

The Old Woman lives in the past because her only happiness lies in her memories. The Spinster also lives in the past, not because she chose to but because it was her inheritance.

Also in the cast of "Lord Byron's Love Letter" are Ann Wheeler as the Matron and Charles Bailey who plays her husband.

The Lady of Larkspur Lotion

The third play, "The Lady of Larkspur Lotion," is being directed by Mr. David Wiley. The cast includes Donna Boone, as Mrs. Hardwicke-Moore, a faded Southern belle, who is called "The Lady of Larkspur Lotion" by Mrs. Wire, played by Carol Carson.

Mrs. Hardwicke-Moore has reached the point where she lives entirely in a world of her own creation. In contrast to her is Mrs. Wire who does not dress up life but strips away all the trimmings. The triangle is completed by Herb Goodman as the Writer who knows he lives in the world of fantasy but can do nothing about it.

"Three Unpleasant Plays" by Tennessee Williams will provide good entertainment for all. The performance is on October 5 at p.m. in Jarman Hall. The price of admission is thirty-five cents.

New Dorm Planned At Old Home Site

Farmville will soon lose a famous landmark. The old Venable home, which dates back to around 1850 and stands on the corner of Pine and Madison Streets, will fall in the path of progress as construction begins on a modern, new, brick dormitory for Longwood College.

Longwood President, F. G. Lankford, Jr., expressed the hope that construction would begin on the new building by the first of December.

The Venable house is empty now. Dr. J. W. Molnar, who lived there until late this summer, has moved to his home on High Street.

The building, once called "Ivy Hall" because of the abundance of ivy that grew over the combination brick and stucco house, was purchased by the State Normal School for Women on March 20, 1922. The building had been the Venable home for many years.

Preliminary plans for the new dormitory have been approved by the Governor's office, and the State Art Commission, Dr. Lankford reports. Now the working plans must be completed by the architect. Then bids will be received on the new building. All of this will take place before the first of December, Dr. Lankford estimates.

The metal bunk beds now in use throughout much of the college were purchased with the new dormitory in mind. They will be separated and used in the new building, which is to be furnished in modern metal furniture.

The new building, designed to house 171 students, is scheduled for occupancy during the second semester of 1958.

Saunders Elected To Head '56 Circus; AKG Makes Plans

Alpha Kappa Gamma has chosen Jeanne Saunders as the General Chairman for its 1956 Circus which is to be presented October 27.

Jeanne is an English major from Richmond. She is active in many organizations including Beore Eh Thorn, Kappa Delta Pi, Pi Delta Epsilon, Kappa Delta social sorority, and the Student Government Association. Jeanne is also Editor-in-Chief of the Colonnade.

Circus is an annual event sponsored by Alpha Kappa Gamma including activities in which all classes participate. There will be a parade in the afternoon with class floats, an hour performance of fifteen minute skits given by each class, and a carnival following the skits. A Circus Court composed of one representative from each class with the Senior representative serving as Circus Queen will reign during the festivities.

Helping Jeanne as Assistant Chairman will be Loretta Kunn. Other heads include Caroline Stoneman, advertising and tickets; Loretta Kuhn, animals and costumes; Nancy Lea Harris, decorations and booth; Nancy Lenz, parade; Nancy Striplin and Jo Hillsman, co-stunt chairman; and Jeanne Saunders, Queens and Court.

Work has begun in each class with the elections of the different chairmen.

Serving as co-chairmen for the Senior Class are Carolyn Clark and Sara Lou Wendenburg. The float chairmen are Belle Fitzgerald and Sandra Dyer. Evelyn Rowe will be in charge of the booth.

Cle Koons and June Strother will serve as co-chairmen for the Junior Class. Sara Gayhart and Kate Krehbiel are the float chairmen. The booth co-chairmen are Sue Taylor and Sally Tilson.

The Sophomore Class has elected Lynn Higgenbotham and Donna Boone as its co-chairmen. Louise Norman will serve as float chairman, and Cass Conner will head the both committee.

Carolyn DeHaven and Mary Beth Baldwin have been chosen by the Freshman Class as co-chairmen. Other chairmen are being elected this week.

Dramatic Dance Duo To Perform, Opening Artist Series On Monday

"PENELOPE IS PURSUED," a soap opera satire, will be among the offerings of the Dance Drama Company Oct. 8 as part of the College-Community artist series. Season tickets for the concerts are now on sale.

Ryder, Frankel Hailed As "Best of Dancers"

The College Community Artist Series will begin Monday, October 8 at 8 p. m. in Jarman Hall, featuring The Dance Drama Company. This unususual group, stars Emily Frankel and Mark Ryder and is the only dance group of its kind in the United States.

Ryder and Frankel will be the first dance artists to appear on the dance program of the newly-formed Richmond Dance Society. The Dance Society is an affiliated organization of the Virginia Museum Theater in the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts in Richmond.

Ballet artist Emily Frankel, a "red-haired dramatic dancer," began an early career in ballet in Harrisburg, Pennsylvania. At twelve, while a student at the Metropolitan Ballet School in New York, her teacher, Novikoff, called her a "born ballerina."

Since her parents objected to a career of ballet, she attended the University of Chicago, still wishing to be a dancer. She left at mid-term for New York, and luckily, her dreams became a reality and she soon became a member of the Charles Weidman Dance Company. Since that time she has gained an excellent reputation in concerts, Theatre, Inc., Doris Humphrey's Green Mansion group, and NBC-CBS television networks.

At present she and her husband, Mark Ryder, teach at the Ryder-Frankel Studio in New York. Together they combine two major dance techniques, modern and ballet.

Mark Ryder, called "one of the finest of all male dancers" by the New York Times, also gained his early experience in New York, as an enterprising modern dancer. After serving in the Army, he became successful in many well-known roles, in concert tours, and in other dance groups. Ryder's varied and experienced choreography reflects many levels of movement and is easily understood by artist and layman.

The Dance Drama Duo has been touring since 1950, performing in the major American cities. The Company has recently been created on the basis of their former success and fame. Eight specialized dancers are included in the group. Choreography for the company is directed by dance ar-

Handbook Changes Listed By Council

There have been several misprints and changes from last year which are printed in the Student Handbook which should be called to the students' attention.

Juniors and Seniors may entertain their dates in their respective parlors until 10:45 p.m. on Saturdays and Sundays. Juniors may eat in the listed places other than downtown until 10:45 p.m. week nights and 11:45 p.m. on weekends. Seniors may go downtown until 10:45 p.m. on any night except Sunday when they must return by 7:45 p.m. Freshmen may date on Saturday and Sunday nights until 10:45 p.m., with the exception of Rec Dances.

Students may now date one hour after the conclusion of formal dances within the immediate college campus. Freshmen and sophomores may go to the drive-in week nights and Saturday nights, but not on Sunday.

On a trial basis, sophomores may keep their lights on for studying purposes until 12 midnight. If proven unsatisfactory, this privilege will be withdrawn.

Special attention is called to the recent rule that if a student is married during the session, she must have permission from her parents prior to the event, and her parents must report in writing to the Dean of Women that such permission has been granted. This was not discussed previously in the handbook.

Arrangements are being made to permit Longwood students to go to the Bowling Alley. Final plans will be announced at a later date.

In order to bring about better understanding between students and house mothers, the Student Council will meet with them Thursday night for a discussion of the handbook.

Souder Finds Longwood "Just Right"

(Aaron's Studio)

MISS THELMA SOUDER, the new Assistant Dean of Women, performs one of her many duties by approving freshmen sign-out slips.

By Linda Doles

For those who have yet to meet Miss Thelma Souder, Longwood College's new Assistant Dean of Women, introductions are in order. She is anxious to meet all of us.

Although she lived in New Jersey most of her childhood, Miss Souder was born in Georgia and she loves the South. Since her family now makes its home in Buena Vista she is especially fond of Virginia.

After graduating from high school in Westfield, New Jersey, she attended Southern Seminary Junior College. Starting out as an elementary major Miss Souder's interest for college and related activities made her more enthusiastic for this field. After studying at the University of North Carolina she received a fellowship and went on to Cornell where her master's degree in student personnel administration was achieved.

Our new Assistant Dean's interest in college activities has been increased by much experience and on-the-spot training. At Cornell she did extensive study in connection with student problems and orientation. While there she was trained in dormitory regulation duties as student dean of 250 freshman and later as resident dean for several halls of upper classmen.

Plans Now Underway For Choir Activities

Choir tryouts were held last week. Dr. John W. Molnar, director of the choir, states that approximately fifty students will constitute the Longwood College Choir.

Dr. Molnar reports that some vacancies are left, especially in the second alto section. Auditions for these vacancies will be conducted until they are filled.

The activities of the choir will consist of several television appearances over Richmond, Lynchburg, and Roanoke channels, the Annual Christmas Concert, high school visits, and the Annual Spring Concert.

Miss Josephine Bailey is directing the chorus this year. The chorus is for students who like to sing, but do not wish to audition for choir. The chorus meets every Monday and Wednesday at four o'clock in Studio One.

Orchestra members are rehearsing every Tuesday at four o'clock. Band members are meeting on Thursday at four o'clock.

Sagacious Spirit

Do you feel as though you have a hat on even when you fall wearily into bed after a long, hard day of Education 100, Frosh?

Don't despair, the old adage about hair falling out from lack of ventilation is untrue. How many bald Sophs have you seen around lately? What a bargain! Do you realize that you have a multi-purpose chapeau? Where else could you acquire a rain hat and a night cap combined? Where else could you acquire a hat to give you that completely distinctive "Longwood Look" which is complete only with "our own" ever present trench coat?

As the days grow shorter and winter draws nigh, the day of reckoning also draws night—October 13. Rats, do you realize the full significance of this occasion? This is an occasion afforded to one only once in a lifetime, and it is a rewarding experience when taken in the traditional Longwood spirit of friendliness and humility.

Rat Day has long been an eagerly anticipated event, and an enduring part of each year here at Longwood. Rat Day is not a day set forth to emphasize "sagacious sophomore superiority," but a day on which you begin learning one of the many lessons college offers outside of the classroom.

We "sagacious sophomores" will attempt to make you look ridiculous, feel ridiculous, and act ridiculous though we believe you will find us laughing with you as well as at you. No matter how many years you spend in school, either here at Longwood or elsewhere, there are few times you will have the opportunity to make so many new and wonderful friends in the short span of ten hours.

College life itself can be compared to a staircase, and your Freshman year will constitute many of these stairsteps. Each event embodies a step of tradition and learning. We feel that Rat Day is one of the most vital steps in your first year here. With each event you will find yourself becoming more and more a part of the school, and you will be able to more readily feel its true spirit.

Thus we urge you to acknowledge Rat Day as a long standing tradition set forth in the finest intention of Longwood friendliness. We truly hope you will cherish your memories of October 13 as your college days rush by.

We leave you with this thought given to us by those older and wiser than we—"DO NOT DELAY—THE GOLDEN MOMENTS THEY FLY."

The High and Mighty Sophomore Class

Registration In Retrospect

As another school year gets successfully underway, the administration has become aware that the system of registration and matriculation now in operation is not entirely satisfactory. The increasing enrollment of the College is in a large way responsible for handicapping the speed and efficiency of the current registrtion procedure.

This procedure is now under study and ways of improving and revising the operation are being considered. In an over-all view of the situation, it seems as if several improvements could be suggested readily.

One of the most noticeable inconveniences of the present system is the congestion and confusion on the part of the students who are signing up for individual classes. The lines become entangled, students who are revising schedules are "in the way," lines which separate to let people through are broken into in such a way as to disrupt speedy flow in the line, and the noise of questioning and impatient voices is almost intolerable.

One solution to such congestion would be the selecting of a more spacious place in which to hold the procedure or a more coordinated and orderly routine for the students to follow. The professors could be clearly and distinctly separated both as to the department they represent and the roll or rolls for which they are signing classes. A special location could be set up for students who find it necessary to revise their schedules after finding a desired class filled to capacity. This place would be away from the flow of traffic and contain schedules of classes as well as a few catalogues. The noise during recreation should be kept to a minimum.

The lack of consideration and selfishness of some students is also greatly to blame for making this semesterly routine an ordeal. Students in the past have been scheduled for registration according to their class. If all students came at their designated time, the faculty members could devote more time to filling in each class roll and consume less time shifting from roll to roll.

It is particularly discouraging when a student appears on the scene at the specified time, only to find her desired class already closed because of her over anxious classmates who appeared two hours earlier during another class' registration time. Only by enforcement of the registration by class system can this type of handicap be avoided.

It appears that the line for final approval could move much more quickly since each student must have a preliminary approval of her department head and each professor who teaches the classes she desires. This could be effected if one or two additional people were authorized to approve schedules in their final phase. A special line could be set up for students wishing to carry a heavier or lighter load than the allotted one and students who, after making revisions due to closed classes, had minor conflicts or problems with their schedules.

Among the features of the current procedure to be recommended as an outstanding improvement is the addition of loudspeaker announcements of classes which are closed. This announcement is also written on a central blackboard, saving students and faculty members much inconvenience in repeating the numbers of classes which are filled.

It is doubtful that the process of matriculation and registration will ever be enjoyable to any student. However, with certain revisions in operation and the cooperation of the student body, it could be made a much more tolerable routine.

WHEN AUTUMN LEAVES BEGIN TO FALL

Social Notes

By ERNESTINE STOLTZ

WELL!! Here we are once again, saying "hello, fall," and "good-bye, summer." Though many of us are returning to old friends and old faces, there seem to be lots of new girls, too. Some of us got fooled—quite a few old faces turned up with new names, so here we go trying to get everybody straight again.

CONGRATULATIONS to those who had wedding bells to ring during the summer months.

Betty "Boots" Cantrell is now Mrs. Robbie Owen. Robbie is from Skipwith, Va., we understand.

Peggy Packett is now Mrs. Winstead Straughn. The wedding took place in June.

Barbara Roller was wed to Harvey Hardie, who is from Lynchburg.

Bobbie Tyre is married to Wellington Ward, Jr., who is from Norfolk, Virginia.

Rita Hite is now Mrs. Charles Nelson. Charles is from Nelson, Virginia.

Many of the girls returned to campus with "sparklers" on their left hands, such as:

Marjorie Allgood is engaged to Corling Harrison, Jr.

Burger Attends Third International Hockey Convention

MISS ELIZABETH BURGER, manager-umpire of the United States Hockey Team, spent a busy summer of coaching and traveling.

United States Team Travels To Australia

This summer our Miss Elizabeth Burger, who is the umpire-manager of the United States Women's Hockey Team, attended the fifth triennial conference of the International Hockey Association at Sydney, Australia. This was the third International Hockey Convention on which Miss Burger has attended with the United States team.

The purpose of the International Conferences is to promote international friendship throughout the world through the medium of hockey. Represented this year were teams from England, Ireland, Holland, Scotland, India, New Zealand, South Africa, Australia, Canada, and the United States.

The members of the Association which were not able to attend the conference include Argentina, Denmark, Switzerland, Belgium, France, West Germany, and Spain. Besides the actual games, the members of the teams also attend meetings concerning coaching, rules, and umpiring.

After the conference, the host country sponsored throughout the country, games to allow local teams to play and observe the international teams. The United States and New Zealand teams were very fortunate to be sent to Queensland, which is on the Great Barrier Reef, a coral reef extending over 1000 miles along the coast. While in Australia, the United States team won 19 and lost 16 games.

Each team which attends the conference consists of approximately sixteen players who are chosen on the basis of playing ability demonstrated in the National Hockey Tournament. The personnel of the United States team this year included a lawyer, who is an Olympic fencing champion; a Research Physicist from the University of Pennsylvania; two college professors, from Longwood and Sweet Briar; three college juniors from Beaver and Ursimus Colleges; and the remaining players were all teachers.

While on her trip, Miss Burger went around the world, covering 30,000 miles of travel by air, via Indonesia, Singapore, Burma, Thailand, India, Pakistan, Lebanon, Turkey, Italy, Germany, and England. Egypt was the only country to which they were denied entrance.

Especially interesting to Miss Burger were her visits to the famous Taj Mahal Hall in India, and the site of this year's Olympics. She also stated that at Sydney it was a wonderful experience to meet acquaintances from the other two conferences which were held in South Africa and England.

After the conference, New Zealand and Fiji, an island half-way between Australia and Honolulu, were hosts to the United States team. Also the team was entertained by the governor of every state by sight-seeing trips and receptions at the Government House.

The International Hockey Association will meet in the United States in 1963. Twenty-five teams are expected and approximately $150,000 will be needed to provide hospitality to the visiting teams.

MISS PHYLLIS WAYMOUTH, English hockey coach, demonstrates some fundamentals to physical education majors.

Noted English Hockey Coach Visits School

Longwood's hockey players were very fortunate last week to have as their coach Miss Phyllis Waymouth from Chester, England. Some of the girls had been under her leadership before as she was one of the two English coaches at hockey camp, held this summer at Tobyhanna, Pennsylvania.

One of a group of English coaches being sent to various colleges, high schools, and clubs which feature hockey, Miss Waymouth will be in the United States until November. This tour was arranged and sponsored by the United States Field Hockey Association.

Miss Waymouth and Miss Burger became friends when they first met in South Africa in 1950. At that time, Miss Burger was playing on the United States hockey team and Miss Waymouth was on the English team, playing for Cheshire county. Miss Waymouth has played hockey in various places and mostly plays right halfback. She has coached in England, France, and Belgium.

Miss Waymouth stated that all the college players she has worked with have seemed very eager to go on trying new things and working hard. She also said that there is not much difference in our game and hers, the Continentals do play differently.

Before coming to Longwood, Miss Waymouth was at William and Mary. After leaving here, her next location will be New Jersey and later she plans to continue further north.

"Life," he cried, "is so unfair
I should have been a millionaire!

I'm lazy, crazy, debonnaire
I'd make a perfect millionaire!"

"Instead," he sobbed, "at twenty-five
I'll have to work to stay alive!"

Post Office Makes Change In System

As an economy measure, the United States Post Office Department has discontinued Longwood College as a sub-station of the Farmville Post Office. This has made necessary some new arrangements in the mail service for students at Longwood.

Incoming Mail

All incoming first-class mail and parcel post is delivered to the college post office each morning, except Sunday, between 8 a. m. and 8:15 a. m. Mrs. Cox puts the mail in the boxes as soon after this as possible. At this time, any outgoing mail accumulated in the college post office is picked up by the mail carrier.

Incoming first-class mail is also delivered to the college post office between 2:30 p. m. and 3 p. m. each day, except Saturday and Sunday.

All incoming C. O. D. and registered mail must be picked up at the Farmville Post Office. Notices of the arrival of such mail are placed in student post office boxes in the college post office.

Incoming special delivery mail is delivered to the home office and students are notified of its arrival.

Outgoing Mail

Outgoing first-class mail may be left in the college post office. It is picked up between 8 a. m. and 8:15 a. m. each morning, except Sunday, and each afternoon between 2:30 p. m. and 3 p. m., except Saturday and Sunday. Outgoing first-class mail may also be dropped in the mail box near the walk that leads from Ruffner Hall to Cunningham Hall or in the box across High Street from the Rotunda. It is picked up according to the schedules indicated on the boxes. On Sundays, outgoing first-class mail may be left at the Farmville Post Office.

Outgoing parcel post may be left in the college post office. Mrs. Cox will weigh packages and determine postage charges. These packages are picked up each morning between 8 a. m. and 8:15 a. m., except Sunday.

Outgoing insured and registered mail must be sent from the Farmville Post Office.

Stamps may be bought at the college post office.

Group Attends Forum At Old Point Comfort

Representing Longwood College at the Eighth Annual Virginia World Trade Conference at Old Point Comfort October 4-5 will be the Misses Frances Raine and Jennette Morris, seniors from Warwick, Va. They will be accompanied by Miss Virginia Bedford, Associate professor of art at Longwood.

The group will participate in the student forum. Approximately 65 students representing 17 colleges and universities, will discuss every facet of world trade. The forum is set for Friday afternoon, October 5.

Souder

Besides her enthusiasm for counseling and activity work, Miss Souder also enjoys office work. Included in her numerous duties are instructing orientation classes for freshmen, visiting high schools on career days, and approving freshmen week-end slips.

The location of Farmville and Longwood are very pleasing to her. The size and atmosphere of the town and the college are "just right" in her words. And as for all the students, she sincerely hopes to be their friend and adviser.

Besides her interest in students, the versatile Miss Souder enjoys books, records (even some rock 'n' roll creeps through the walls"), travel (she has toured the United States and hopes to go abroad soon), sports, and drama.

With her love for student work and her many other interests, Miss Souder is becoming what we hope will be a happy and successful stay at Longwood!

Boggs Fills Vacant Office With Bittinger As Assistant

By LINDA DOLES

An almost forgotten position has again been filled at Longwood! Dr. Earl R. Boggs has lately been appointed Dean of the College, and Mr. Morris H. Bittinger as Assistant Dean. Although both are well-known figures as professors on our campus, we are happy to welcome and congratulate them as they begin their new work.

Specifically, this "new work" includes a variety of things. Dr. Boggs chairman of the department of education, will also continue to direct the Summer Session. He is chairman of the Admissions Committee and secretary of the Graduate Council. He heads the scholarship program and is responsible for the policies governing the public relations department of the college. He will also continue to teach courses in education. Questions concerning admissions, scholarships, and summer work should be referred to Dean Boggs.

Mr. Bittinger, who will continue in his work as associate professor of history and social studies, also has numerous particular duties in his new position. Fortunately, Mr. Bittinger's "rush hour" is slowing down to normal again, for he is in charge of schedule changes. He handles the faculty advisory program and will keep a continuous check on the academic progress of students.

By continuing to teach classes, the new administrators will be able to keep in contact with students and better understand their needs. However, both of these men came to us with considerable experience with students in their fields and very interesting backgrounds.

Dr. Boggs began his career at Longwood in September 1955, coming here from the School of Education of the University of Virginia, where he was chairman of the Graduate Committee. He came to Virginia from West Virginia where he had been State Supervisor of High Schools. Beginning, however, with literature and not administration as his main interest, he received his B. A. degree in English and social studies form Glenville State College. From there he attended West Virginia University at Morgantown and got his masters degree in educational administrations, dropping literature to second place as his minor. Dr. Boggs completed his studies and achieved his doctorate at George Peabody College for Teachers in Nashville.

Then, beginning what was to be very broad and intensive work in public school systems, Dr. Boggs taught in West Virginia schools for three years, afterwards becoming principal of Rosedale Junior High School and later Troy High School. He served on the faculty of Glenville State College and was Director of the training school.

'Better Films' To Begin Soon

By PAT JONES

The annual big day has arrived! Tickets for the Better Film Series are here and students may begin to pick them up immediately from any member of Alpha Psi Omega.

To freshmen the Better Film Series is new, and we who have watched its growth would like to share some of the excitement which is aroused by the annual sale of season tickets.

The idea of bringing these better films to Farmville originated several years ago when a number of students on our campus followed the film projects on other college campuses. Becoming interested in starting a similar program here at Longwood, these students began discussing the possibility. After a number of false starts, the group of students met, and under the sponsorship of some faculty members, formed the organization which was called the Better Films Committee.

This committee was composed of representatives of Beorc Eh Thorn, Orchesis, the Choir, the Spanish Club, and the French Club. After submitting its choices of movies, the committee worked with the management of the local theaters and proposed to book six of the suggested films for the school year.

The first article concerning the films was printed in the Rotunda in April 1954:

The newspaper said:

"The Series offers an opportunity to our college community which has not been offered before, although the French and Spanish departments have approached it individually. It is the idea of bringing in the better films to Farmville, which we might otherwise miss seeing. "Henry V," and "The Bicycle Thief" are some of the great films of all times. They can be brought to Farmville if students and townspeople are sufficiently interested."

The reactions were favorable and the Better Films Series was off to a successful start. Such movies as "Gates of Hell," "The Bicycle Thief," "Bread, Love, and Dreams," "The Cruel Sea," and now "Romeo and Juliet" have been in the Series.

Many changes have been made in the original organization. Since its beginning, Longwood Players and, as at present, Alpha Psi Omega

Sophomores Issue Rigid Regulations For Rats of 1960 To Obey Saturday

Agee Studio

Sandy Sandidge, best rat of 1955 and chairman of 1956 Rat Day, poses as a typical '56 Rat. This year the freshmen will be "babies" for Saturday, when the sagacious Sophomores will reign supreme.

Frosh To Be Babies On Current Rat Day

The High and Mighty Sophomore Class has released its rules for Rat Day, 1956, and recommends that all freshmen attempt to fit the plans into their daily schedule!

Although Rat Day officially opens at 6:00 a.m., October 13, there is some consolation in the fact that it does close at 4:00 p.m. the same day.

Rats will be dressed as babies for Saturday. Their costume will include green paper skirts worn over blue jeans or bermudas and an old white shirt with '59 green paper bottles about one and one-half inches in size attached to the shirt. There must be a sophomore' sname written on each bottle and the Freshmen are expected to find the various names when asked to do so.

A name plate of green paper including the rat's name and home town must be fastened to the back of the shirt.

Baby hats or bonnets of green paper with a white ribbon that ties under the chin must be worn.

Any kind of shoes may be worn, but tennis shoes are preferred. Each rat must also carry a baby bottle, rattle, or some toy made of green paper.

The following rules are to be observed:

1. Each rat must know the sign-off and be able to repeat it upon request.
2. Each rat must know the inscription under the statue of oJan of Arc on the Colonnade. (It can also be found in the handbook.)
3. Rats must not spend more than fifty cents for their costumes.
4. Rats must have at least five appointments, every Rat will be checked for appointments the night before Rat Day.
5. Appointments will be made the day before Rat Day; no Rats may promise to save appointments before then.
6. Rats will clean Sophs' rooms, entertain, sing "Green and White" to the tune of "Baby Face", and recite the sign-off.
7. All Rats must report to the gym no earlier and no later than 9:00 a.m. Saturday; no appointments can be scheduled for any time before this hour.
8. Meals must be attended. Rating is confined to the campus and not in the dining hall at any time.
9. All Rats must obey the Sophs and address them as "Miss".
10. All Rats will attend Big Rat Court, wearing Green and White. All Rats so honored will be notified to go to Little Rat Court.

Sign-Off

Sophs Participate In Test Research

The Sophomore class participated in a nationwide research program today. The California Test Bureau selected Longwood College to take part in the research program to obtain norms for new achievement and intelligence tests.

These tests were administered to the class by Mr. Charles Patterson. They were taken in the dining hall of the college from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. and from 1:30 p.m. until the tests were all completed.

The tests are the results of revisions of former achievement and intelligence tests and will be published for sale in 1957.

The CTB will make use of these test results from participating colleges in the states to calculate and establish national norms of students performances in the basic skill subject as well as scholastic aptitudes norms on intelligence tests.

"It will be interesting to see how the Longwood sophomore class compares with the national standard for these test," stated Mr. Patterson.

"Circus Will Never Die On Longwood's Campus" Says AKG

Agee Studio

By JEANNE SAUNDERS

Since time immemorial, the lead Circus story has always begun with a burst of gaiety and excitement – a literary invitation to an expectant audience to feel the clash of the cymbals and to hear the mad, carefree songs, and the familiar BOOM of the Circus drum; an invitation to recall the smell of hot buttered popcorn and candied apples, and the feel of sawdust underfoot for miles and miles.

From the annals of Circus history, Longwood's blue and white classes for many years have drawn the fresh, festive spirit—the excitement and the chaotic madness that is Circus. Circus is an institution, something that has always been and will always be; and yet, in July of 1956, the world awoke one morning to be greeted by bold-faced headlines: "Circus Is Dead." "The End of an Era;" and John Ringling North announced that The Greatest Show on Earth was folding. Syndicated columnists everywhere bemoaned the fact that the generations from this point on would never know the traveling Circus under a mammouth tent.

It is with this thought in mind that Alpha Kappa Gamma challenges the entire student body with the battle cry of the Circus troupers: "Hey, Rube!" Step right up folks and help us make this the most su-perb, the most gi-gantic, sen-sational, the greatest show of them all. Help us to write:

"Dear Mr. Barnum, wherever you may be, Circus does live—today, tomorrow, forever and ever as long as there are la-a-dies and gee-entlemen with singing hearts, dancing feet, and pockets full of laughter."

Student Council, Housemothers Meet

The Student Council held an informal meeting on October 4, with the housemothers in the "Y" Lounge. The purpose of this meeting was to discuss any problems which might have come up during the year.

One problem discussed was the noise which is being created during study hour. The noise has been especially noticeable [illegible] hours of 10 and 11 in the Freshman dormitory and later in the upperclassmen dormitories. The rule concerning this is as follows: "Quiet hours will be observed from 7 p.m. until 7 a. m. There is to be no unnecessary noise or confusion during these hours." It is hoped that the students will be more mindful of this rule and will try to co-operate in every way possible.

Another thing brought to the [illegible] Council's attention was the excessive use of the Freshman Parlor by upperclassmen. It is realized that the upperclassmen need a place to go between classes and before dinner. By the afternoon, however, the parlor becomes quite untidy and is not a place one would want to take one's date.

A committee was assigned to inquire about the hanging of pictures and pennants on walls and doors. The report of this committee will be announced later.

Other results of the meeting included the following:

1. Students may use the "Y" lounge for studying.
2. Students are asked not to track dirt into the halls.
3. The small auditorium may be used for rehearsals and meet-

WENDESDAY, OCTOBER 10, 1956

Unaware Upperclassmen

It seems appropriate amidst innumerable efforts and preparations designed to make the freshmen feel at home and welcome at Longwood, to reflect a moment on something which we as upperclassmen have perhaps "slipped up" on.

The Freshman Class, like every other class, has a special room which is set aside as their parlor and sitting room. Because of its convenient location for all students, the freshman parlor has became a daytime home for upperclassmen between classes, before and after meals, and for a variety of small group meetings, the use of the freshman parlor by upperclassmen is almost overshadowed by their abuse of the parlor during their use of it. Coke bottles are accumulated by the dozen, cigarette ashes become embedded in the rug and slip covers, books are piled up on the furniture, and the furniture is moved around to suit the particular group which is using it at any time.

It seems that this action has been going on for some time and for the most part without complaint from the freshmen. However, it indicates a lack of consideration from the upperclassmen, who are well-equipped with parlors and recreation halls of their own. It is time for the upperclassmen to become aware that this room is the only room which belongs specifically to the freshmen and is set up for their use. If upperclassmen kept this in mind, they could hardly feel comfortable in continuing to use this room as a general lounge, waiting room, and conversation place. This is a place for freshmen and their dates—one they want to be proud of.

There are other places convenient to students for purposes of waiting, smoking, and talking. The second floor of the Rotunda is equipped with chairs and the snack bar has ample space for all.

Rather than to risk having the freshman parlor locked during the daytime hours, it would be more desirable for the sophomores, juniors and seniors to resolve to respect the parlor as a freshman possession, and, if the occasion arises for upperclassmen to use it, to treat it as such. A little cooperation along this line would go a long way towards showing the freshmen how welcome they are.

By My Spirit

In the quietness of the Episcopal Church after dinner the illuminated altar, the bowed heads and folded hands, and the softness of the mellow organ music blend into a fellowship and meditation with God. To every Longwood girl this is the highlight of her college day: to be with the Master and to hear His voice. Then the organ is silenced and we hear the voice of someone from our campus who has a thought that she would share.

This evening we hear the voice of our Y. W. C. A. "Prayer is for you and we need your support of prayer and service. Everyone is welcome to conduct a meditation one night, or to light the candles on the altar. The responsibility of Prayers is upon each of us, especially in the fact that we all must strive to help keep the Episcopal Church in order. Let us be sure that all the lights are turned off and that the inner and outer doors are closed if we are the last to leave. If we wish to continue the privilege of Prayers in this church, we must obey the wishes of those who have given us the privilege of using their sanctuary. We believe that you will cooperate with us. Let us pray . . . "

The music of the organ again fills the sanctuary and the motto of the Y. W. C. A. may be heard as it is prayerfully repeated. "Not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit saith the Lord of Hosts."

Ovation For Orientation

This is a time to applaud the work and time spent by the Upperclassmen Orientation Leaders. Particular praise should be given to Nancy Lenz, Vice-President of the Student Government Association and chairman of Orientation.

Perhaps some students are unaware of the program which is carried on by upperclassmen during the first week or two of the session. The various leaders are notified during the summer of their selection to this position and asked to return to school at the time the freshmen and transfer students arrive.

Plans immediately go into operation as to the placement of each leader and assistant with a small group of new students. The new handbook is read through with certain parts emphasized as being particularly helpful and important for new students. The leaders are informed about the overall Orientation schedule and their responsibilities in this program.

When the first individual meeting of the group is held, the leaders are better acquainted with the various interests and needs of their group. It is during the sessions that the rewards and fun of Orientation are brought out. Many problems are solved and numerous friendships formed.

It is always with reluctance that Orientation leaders complete their part in the over-all program.

3 One-Act Plays Applauded; Students Praised For Talent

By PAT LEAKE

On Friday evening, Alpha Psi Omega presented three unpleasant plays by the noted playwright and author, Tennessee Williams.

These plays centered around people who would not face reality.

"At Liberty presented the peak of a disheartened and hopeless actress who was portrayed by Vivian Willet. Vivian's performance was excellent and she showed excessive talent in this role. Molly Workman, mother of this sick and frustrated actress, must be given applause for her exacting performance of the strong and realistic character who tries to make her daughter see that her life as an actress is hopeless. Flo Soghoian and Mary Jones must be given credit for their excellent direction.

"Lord Byron's Love Letter," under the direction of Mildred Melaney and Carolee Silcox, was the story of an old woman and her granddaughter who lived in the past for they were afraid to face the future. Their only income was the showing of Byron's letter. Marie Messick, who portrayed the granddaughter, is a newcomer to the Longwood stage and shows definite promise.

The last, but not the least, was "The Lady of Larkspur Lotion" under the direction of Mr. David Wiley proved most acceptable of the three. The action takes place in the French Quarter of New Orleans and is the story of a southern woman of questionable reputation.

Much humor is shown when Mrs. Wire and Mrs. Hard-Wick Moore argue about cockroaches and the rent. The plot was the landlady and tenant situation. Donna Boone, who portrayed Mrs. Hard-Wicke Moore, handled the role with ease. She gave a very impressive performance as a shallow woman afraid to face her crude surroundings.

Your reviewer gives special merit to Herb Goodman, who portrayed the Writer. He appears suddenly on the scene and gives a short speech on morals and fantasy to the realistic Mrs. Wire. Special award goes to Patti Parker for the effective proportional lighting which set the mood for these plays.

As a whole the audience seemed to enjoy this "different" type of drama, and all eyes were on the stage except when noisy latecomers bustled in. Yes, they were truly "three unpleasant plays" but as a whole made for a good evening in the theatre.

Boggs, Lankford To Speak Oct. 11

Dr. Earl R. Boggs, Dean of Longwood College, will participate in a symposium to be held at Southampton High School auditorium at Courtland, Va., tomorrow night at 7:30 p. m. This symposium will be made up of representatives from Teachers Colleges, Board of Supervisors, School Board, Industry, Laymen and Teachers.

The audience will be the teachers of Southampton County, the School Board, the Board of Supervisors, the Executive Committees of the Southampton County P.T.A.'s, and representatives of industry.

Each speaker will be alloted about ten minutes to express a point of view on the question "What Can a Professional Organization of Teachers Do To Move Toward An Adequate Salary Schedule" An open forum type discussion will then be held, followed by a summarization by a member of the symposium.

Dr. Lankford

Dr. Francis Lankford, President of the College, will address the Shriners of Crewe tomorrow night, which is Ladies' Night for the group.

In his address to the Dinwiddie County High School teachers last Wednesday night, Dr. Lankford stated that there is a place in the classroom for television.

Dr. Lankford suggested a greater effort toward development of TV programs which educate as well as entertain, since children watch a great many television programs.

"Television is a medium of great potentiality. I think the opportunities are rich in this field. We ought to get our minds in motion and see what can be done with making television an education medium," he added.

For more than 30 years a Virginia educator, Lankford noted that the continued existence of our form of government depends upon the effectiveness of public education.

He urged the 75 teachers who heard his main convention address to try to determine if students possess ability to become teachers. This must be developed, he emphasized.

Others

Four of Longwood's faculty members have received promotions since the last school year. Mr. Charles Patterson, Dr. Richard Meeker and Mrs. Mildred Davis have been promoted from the position of assistant professor to that of associate professor. Miss Eleanor Weddle has been promoted from instructor to assistant professor.

Blazers Presented To Kuhn, Rowe

Loretta Kuhn and Evelyn Rowe pose before the Roanoke game, displaying their recently-awarded blazers.

The annual Blazer Awards were presented Tuesday, October 3, at the annual Athletic Association Demonstration and picnic. This year blue blazers were presented to Loretta Kuhn and Evelyn Rowe for their participation in athletics during their years at Longwood. Each year, blazers are presented to seniors having outstanding athletic records, as determined by cumulative points collected in various sports and athletic events.

Loretta, an elementary major from Richmond, Virginia, has played on her class basketball, volleyball, and hockey teams every year since entering Longwood. She has also represented her class in the swimming meets and has played either on the class softball or wisket team every year. She has played on the varsity hockey and basketball teams and is a member of H2O.

As far as having a major sports interest, Loretta says her choice changes with the seasons. However, she mostly prefers hockey, softball or basketball.

Loretta is a member of the Monogram Club, H2O Club, A. A. Council, Alpha Kappa Gamma, Cotillion Club, Pi Gamma Mu, Student Government, B. S. U. Council, F. T. A., Richmond Club, Y.W.C.A. (of which she is president), and is a member of Theta Sigma Upsilon social sorority.

Evelyn has also been on her class basketball, volleyball, hockey, softball and wisket teams and has represented her class in the swimming meets and in the tennis doubles.

She has also played varsity hockey and lists her major sports interest as either hockey or tennis.

Evelyn is secretary of Orchesis, softball manager on the A. A. Council, a representative to Student Standards, and is a member of the Cotillion Club, and the Northern Neck Club.

A physical education major from Kinsdale, Virginia, Evelyn is planning to teach in Baltimore County.

Larsen Set Record In 5th Series Game

Don Larsen threw nothing but strikes and "out" balls Monday as he turned back the Dodgers in the fifth game of the World Series to give the Yankees a 3-2 lead. Larsen didn't give up a hit or a walk, and not a single Dodger reached first base. Twenty-seven Dodgers came to bat, and via Larsen, 27 Dodgers were out. Never before in World Series history had there been a no-hit game, much less one in which a team failed to get a man on base. The final score was 2-0.

Larsen, a 6-foot, 4-inch native of Michigan City, Ind., who now lives in San Diego, Calif., pitches superbly with the peculiar no-windup style he adopted during the regular season. Larsen, who used to take the picther's customary windup, now just takes Berra's signal and fires the ball. Manager Casel Stengle explained that Larsen changed his pitching styles during the last month of the season, and he made the change "on his own."

The most unbelievable thing about Larsen's perfect game was his well-nigh perfect control. He threw only 97 pitches during the nine innings, and had a three-ball count on only one batter. As in most games, Larsen said he had some close calls. He stated that he thought sure Jackie Robinson's line drive in the second inning was a Dodger hit—but he sure was glad it wasn't. Larsen also states that this most fantastically pitched game was his biggest thrill in baseball.

HS Tiger Triumph Over Guilford

Hampden-Sydney combined two runs, a touchdown pass to halfback Billy Benson, and a line plunge by Bobby Furr with a strong defense Saturday to down Guilford College, 27-19, on a rain-soaked Death Valley field.

Guilford leaped to an early lead in the first quarter on a 51-yard pass play. However, nine plays after Guilford had taken its first-quarter lead, Hampden-Sydney's Beb Saylor connected for a 25-yard field goal.

Guilford scored twice more in the first half on nine-yard passes while the Tigers could manage only one tolley on a line plunge by Bobby Furr.

After the half, Benson, on the first play from scrimmage, roared 76 yards for a touchdown and in the final quarter, Benson scored twice on a 46-yard run and a 12-yard pass. This put Hampden-Sydney ahead for good.

The Tiger defense proved too much for the North Carolina squad as they held them to a minus three yards on the ground. It was only through the air that Guilford was able to move the ball.

Roanoke Defeated In Season's First

Longwood won its first hockey game for this year by downing Roanoke College 2-1 on Thursday.

Neither team was able to score during the first half, though several threats were made by both teams. Longwood's first score was made by Loretta Kuhn and Nancy Andrews accounted for the second goal.

Those girls seeing action for Longwood were: Sandy Fitzgerald, Nancy Sheplin, Nancy Richardson, Loretta Kuhn, Gayle Cunningham, Kitty Harris, Nancy Andrews, Carolyn Obenshain, Louise Heier, Margaret Dowdy, Delores Winder, Ann Wayne Fuller, Jo Anne Sloop, and Dele Dove.

Ann Wayne Fuller, varsity hockey manager, acted as captain for this game as the final varsity team and captain had not been selected.

Spanish & French Plan Club Activity

The Spanish Club, composed of all students enrolled in Spanish classes, is looking forward to a very successful year. It is making plans for an interesting and varied schedule of programs for the coming months under the guidance of its capable sponsor, Miss Emily Barksdale.

The officers of the Spanish Club are: Traci Faison, President; Jeanette Morris, Vice President; Betty McClenny, Secretary; Marjorie Allgood, Treasurer; and Ann Glover, Reporter.

"Lazos estrechos entre las Americas" is the motto of the club. Translated it means "closer ties between the Americas"; and we are trying to further this motto through our monthly meetings, our annual Christmas Fiesta, and other extra-curricular activities. The Spanish table in the dining room also helps us in this effort. There the English students learn to increase their Spanish vocabulary and also become better acquainted with the Spanish students studying here at Longwood.

The first meeting of the Spanish Club was Tuesday, Oct. 10 at which Jeanette Morris showed slides taken during the summer in Mexico where she worked.

We are most happy to have with us Miss Elena Flores, our new Spanish Informant, who will better acquaint us through the year with the songs, dances, and traditions of Mexico, her native country.

French Club

The French Club held its first meeting of the year in the small auditorium on Tuesday September 30. The club has a much larger group this year than previous years, having approximately 75 members. The officers for this year include: Anita Heflin, president; Molly Workman, vice-president; Nancy Drudge, secretary; Hannah Haile, treasurer; Margaret Layman, historian, and Carolyn Stonnell, reporter.

Among the projects the club will undertake this year is a Juke Box Dance set for October 20. Also, the club will sponsor a French movie to be shown November 9 in Jarman Hall. The movie "Les Visiteurs Du Soir" was named movie of the year in 1953 and has won numerous other French and international awards.

Business Leaders Prepare Activities

Having enjoyed an active life of six months under their new title, the Longwood Chapter of Future Business Leaders of America will get under way October 16 with its first meeting for 1956-57 school session. Under the leadership of its new president, Norma Reamy, the club is expecting a busy year.

The F.B.L.A. was formerly known here as The Commercial Club. In December of 1955 the Longwood Commercial Club was installed into Future Business Leaders of America by the Richmond Professional Institute.

Campus Craze Involves Air Trip

Latest campus craze, picked up this week end from the University of California by Hampden-Sydney freshmen, is the one-way week-end plane ride.

Chuck Lucas, sophomore class president from Beckley, W. Va., spent the week end in Florida with $10 spending money as the "gift" of some be-ratted H-S freshmen who have been going through the college's usual welcoming activities for freshmen.

Turning the tables on the sophomores, the freshmen whisked Lucas off to Washington Friday and put him on a plane to Florida. The big-hearted boys allowed him $10.

He arrived at Miami Saturday morning, and fraternity spirit prevailed as he headed for the University of Miami's Pi Kappa Alpha house.

His fraternity brothers "took wonderful care of me, fed me, showed me the campus and let me have the money—$53.41—to get a plane ticket," Lucas said.

He left Miami Saturday night for Richmond, but fog grounded his plane in Charlotte, N. C. An Eastern Air Lines ticket agent, who must have a few college pranksters of his own, arranged for him to stay overnight in a Charlotte hotel, paid his cab fare and bought his breakfast.

Finally Lucas caught a Sunday morning flight to Roanoke and hitch-hiked his way back to the H-S campus shortly after noon.

Better Film

have sponsored the films. The films are presented now at the State, rather than the Lee theater where they were first shown, and they are given regular showings on Wednesdays.

From the beginning the actual obtaining of the films has been based on the number of tickets sold. Unless a minimum of 300 tickets are purchased, the Series cannot bring the selected films here. Under the Series' plan, students may see six better films for $2.00 when such movies would ordinarily be shown at advanced prices.

The Better Film Series makes a positive contribution to the college community and it offers a fine opportunity for seeing the truly great artists in action as well as pleasant entertainment for all. The films are for the benefit and enjoyment of the students and their support is essential. Support of the current Better Film ticket sale is encouraged to insure long life to the Better Film Series in Farmville.

Boggs and Bittinger

His next job was director of instruction for Morgan County, West Virginia schools from which he advanced to state supervisor, Associate Professor of Education at the University of Virginia, and then joined the Longwood faculty. He has also been continuously active in the public schools of Virginia with teacher conferences and school surveys.

Our new dean is also experienced and successful in the field of writing. Among his published material which may prove helpful to students are: Human Relations in the Classroom; and State Board of Education Bulletins concerning music, mathematics, and Language Arts; and numerous other informative works.

Having varied interests besides his administrative concerns, one of Dr. Boggs' most satisfying hobbies is growing roses. He is a member of the Longwood Golf Club and also enjoys hunting. One of his main divergencies, of course, being reading, he has this to say about his favorite subject: "Contemporary American Literature is one of the fundamental sources by which we interpret the basic ideas and tempo of the times."

The tall quietly-smiling dean has two sons, Dr. Dane Boggs, an intern at the University of Virginia School of Medicine, and John, who is in his sophomore year at Indian Springs School in Birmingham, Alabama.

At present Dean Boggs is a member of the Commission on Teacher Education in the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools and is serving as Educational consultant for the Roanoke Public School System. He belongs to the Virginia Education Association, the National Education Association, and the Philosophy of Education Society. He holds membership in Kappa Delta Pi and Phi Delta Kappa societies.

Mr. W. H. Bittinger

Mr. Bittinger is no stranger to Farmville. Having attended Hampden-Sydney College, he came to Longwood in 1954.

Majoring in social sciences, he receive his B. A. in history from Hampden-Sydney. He taught social sciences at Greenbrier Military School in West Virginia, before continuing his studies at the University of Virginia where he obtained his masters degree in history and completed most of the work on his doctorate. He became a member of Phi Beta Kappa society. Then, continuing [illegible] he was appointed head of social studies at Blake Country Day School in Minnesota.

In 1951 Mr. Bittinger returned to his alma mater as head of the department of history and economics. He remained in this position at Hampden-Sydney until he joined Longwood's faculty as associate professor of history.

Although he's an avid baseball fan, Mr. Bittinger did not comment on the recent scenes but did say this concerning his vote in the coming election, "I'm weighing the issues seriously."

Besides "fleecing" from bridge, he also finds relaxation from his duties in collecting antiques. An interested citizen of Farmville besides his prominent role at Longwood, Mr. Bittinger is active in the Lions Club and is a former president of this organization.

Drawings for "Moby Dick" are now on display in the Browsing Room of the college Library. Of his interest in "Moby Dick", Gil Wilson, the artist, says it was his love for the sea which made him susceptible to the theme.

Gil Wilson made some three hundred drawings as illustrations for the story. The film based on these drawings was shown successfully for nnie weeks at the Paris Theatre, New York City, and at the Venice Film Festival as an American entry.

In his drawings, Wilson interprets the whale as a symbol of "the blank senselessness of power blind, fatal, overbearing," which in our time bears a "striking resemblance to the atom ..., its ('Moby Dick's') arresting prophecy of doom and at the same time its reaffirmation of man's transcendent spirit in his struggle against elemental destruction. This might serve as a reavealing allegory of man's predicament today."

Studying at Yale under Eugene Savage, Gil Wilson became interested in the Mexican masters, including Rivera, Orozco and Siqueiros, and later he studie sculpture. This lent a monumental quality to his work.

Portraying the hunt of the white whale, "Moby Dick," Wilson gives striking impressions of the adventures of the whaler "Pequod" under the command of Captain Ahab.

Presented for display by the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts, Wilson's drawings will be in the Browsing Room until Oct. 22.

Campaign For Mock Election Begins With Party Speeches

Longwood is beginning to have the appearance of a citywide campaign center as the Student Government's mock election gets underway. Many activities have been planned to precede the election which will be held Oct. 31.

All features of the mock election have been planned so as to familiarize the student body with American Political Parties. The first event was the mock registering on Oct. 11. Clerk's offices were opened in various spots on the campus from 1:00 to 6:00 p. m.

Under the leadership of the History department, the Government Class sponsored a debate in assembly Oct. 16. At this time spokesmen for the Republican, Democrat, and States' Rights parties presented their cases and arguments.

The assembly was presented in order to better acquaint the students with the real issues of the coming election. Eleanor Stradley expounded on the Democrats' long standing issue of help for the "little man"—the farmer, the small businessman, and the laborer. Immediately afterwards, Marjorie Allgood presented the Republicans' case as that of restoring the soundness of the American dollar.

Representing the States' Rights was Virginia Pearce, who upheld their platform as being one which offers an opportunity for dissatisfied voters to express their dissatisfaction with the two major parties' platforms.

Pat Burdette offered facts concerning the chances for a Republican victory in the coming election. She was followed by Jackie Pond, who gave the Democrats' chances of winning.

Bernard Warren was master of ceremonies for the program.

Jo Davis, Chairman of the Election, announced today the chairmen for the three parties. They are as follows: Nancy Quarles, Chairman, Democrat Party; Barbara Tyler Ward, Chairman, States Rights' Party; and Anita Heflin, Chairman, Republican Party. The Student Body is urged to support these Chairmen as the endeavor to make this a highlight in the '56-57 school year.

College Enrollment Increases To 857

The present registration of the college is 857, of which 22 are graduate students. In October 1955 a total of 793 students was registered. This shows an increase of 64 students.

This year's Freshman Class totals 343 students. The Freshman enrollment in 1955 was 325. Approximately five per cent of the present Freshman Class come from the Northern Neck of Virginia. Twenty-one per cent of the class are from the remainder of the Tidewater area. From the south central area of Virginia come fifteen per cent of the Freshman Class, and from the Richmond-Petersburg area come thirteen per cent of the Class of '60.

Approximately five per cent of the class reside in the western area of our state, while fifteen per cent come from Southwestern Virginia, about three per cent come from the central part of our state, another eighteen per cent come from northern Virginia, and two per cent come from the Eastern Shore. Three per cent of our Freshmen are out of state students.

The largest group of new students comes from the city of Richmond.

According to the records of the Registrar's Office, the Longwood Student Body, including graduate students, is 96.3 per cent female and 3.7 per cent male. This compares with the 1955 percentages of 96.1 per cent female and 3.9 per cent male.

Suspense Rises As Circus Nears

Agee Studio

THE ABOVE ANIMALS, which were imported for Circus, may be seen around the campus for the next week and a half. Students are advised not to panic; the animals will be under close supervision of their trainer.

Practices Underway; Parade Plans Made

With the shouting of "Hey Rube!", Alpha Kappa Gamma's 1956 Circus will begin in Jarman Hall on October 27.

In announcing "Hey, Rube," as the Circus theme, Jeanne Saunders, general chairman, said that traditional circus stunts and tricks will be used to convince the audience that although the tents of Barnum and Bailey have folded, Alpha Kappa Gamma Circus will never die.

And certainly the spirit already so evident shows no sign of dying. All four clsases on the Longwood College campus have been preparing their respective skits, and committees have been hard at work on the floats for the parade Saturday afternoon and the booths for the Carnival that night. Excitement is rising with every consecutive practice as each class reportedly has the "winning skit!"

In past years, skits offering a variety of themes have won the vote of the judges. The present senior class won Circus its freshman year with "Old MacDonald's Farm", a gay frolic with lots of music and dancing. For the past two years, the senior class has won. In 1954, a light comedy set in the days of Boswell and Johnson came out on top. Last year, a moral tale of good against evil, combining gay and "mood" music, was picked to win.

The parade, which consists of a float from each class, circus animals with their trainer, and decorated cars will take its usual route through downtown Farmville, returning up High Street. These floats will be judged, and the winner will be announced Saturday night.

The animals and their trainer are a tradition with Circus. Students don the monkey, giraffe, lion, and elephant costumes and go strictly "native" for one afternoon and night. The animal trainer is picked by AKG from the Sophomore Class.

The carnival which is held after the performance of the skits will be in the main recreational hall. Booths representing many campus organizations, plus class sponsored booths, will provide a variety of games and foods. One end of the hall will be reserved for dancing.

Circus weekend is always a festive occasion at Longwood, for many alumnae return to enjoy the varied campus activities. Many parents, choose this weekend for their first visit because they also enjoy the skits in which the students participate.

It is with an air of expectancy that Longwood looks forward to Circus, 1956. The entertainment will be good; the usual variety and gaiety, a certainty.

Faculty Members Enjoy Varied Activities

Three Longwood Faculty members are currently conducting extension courses in the surrounding areas in addition to their campus classes.

Dr. Earl Boggs conducts an extension course in co-operation with the University of Virginia's extension program. The course, held at South Hill, is a graduate course dealing with Instruction. The class is made up of twenty-three persons; nine are Longwood graduates and five are Longwood undergraduates.

Miss Jessie Patterson is teaching an extension class in Appomattox. This class on Public School Music contains eighteen adults. This past summer Miss Patterson conducted an Elementary School Music Workshop in Lawrenceville. This class consisted of thirty teachers.

Dr. Floyd Swertfeger is also teaching an extension class at Halifax High School in co-operation with the University of Virginia. The graduate study is concerned with Testing and Statistics. The class is made up of fifteen graduates.

Dr. Brumfield

Dr. Robert T. Brumfield was recently elected Editor of The Virginia Journal of Science. He will assume the duties of Editor in January in addition to his duties as Biology Sectional Editor. This journal is issued quarterly by the Virginia Academy of Science. Dr. Charles F. Lane was elected Managing Editor of the Journal.

Dr. Boggs

Dr. Earl Boggs attended a meeting at Southhampton High School, Thursday, October 11. Dr. Boggs participated in a symposium on "What Can a Professional Organization of Teachers Do to Move toward an Adequate Salary Schedule." The symposium was made up of representatives from Teacher's Colleges, Boards of Supervisors, School Boards, Industries, laymen and teachers.

Dr. Boggs will participate in a discussion program on "Scholarships in the Field of Education." This meeting will be held in Charlottesville at the Thomas Jefferson Inn on October 18. Dr. Boggs will be working with principals of the Roanoke District on the revision of Curriculum Guides. On October 25 he will act as consultant to principals of District D in their study of "The Responsibility of Principals in Giving Leadership to Professional Growth of Teachers."

Mrs. Eva

The junior housemother, Mrs. Beulah Eva, is Editor of a magazine entitled The Art of Living Successfully. This digest of wit and wisdom was started by her husband twenty-seven years ago. It is used by large companies as a medium of advertisement.

Dr. Molnar

Dr. John Molnar has been selected as one of the three national directors for the Southern Regional Conference at Miami, Florida. Dr. Molnar will direct the band, which will consist of the most talented musicians of the Southeastern states.

Dr. Schlegel

Dr. Marvin Schlegel is preparing slides from pictures he has taken of student activities such as circus, the water pageant, May Day, and hockey games. The first set of slides will be those concerning the activities of 1955-56, and they will be made available to alumnae groups of the college. Dr. Schlegel is hoping that it will be possible to continue taking pictures and preparing these slides every year for outside use. Alumnae groups will be able to secure these slides by contacting the alumnae secretary.

Faculty Fellowship

The faculty of Hampden-Sydney College and Longwood College have recently organized a Faculty Christian Felowship. This Fellowship was proposed by Dr. Taylor Reeveley, who visited Hampden-Sydny College during orientation week, and the Hampden-Sydney faculty suggested that the two local colleges combine in this Fellowship.

The purpose of this organization is to promote better relationships between the two colleges and promote discussions on the role of religion of college faculties. Dr. Marvin Schlegel is the Longwood College coordinator of the Faculty Christian Fellowship.

The organization's first meeting was held at Hampden-Sydney with Dr. Taylor Reeveley as speaker on September 19. The Longwood faculty will play host at the meeting on October 29 at Longwood House. The speaker will be Mr. M. Boyd Coyner who will speak on "Religion and Psychology."

Foreign Informants Describe U. S. As Interesting, Pleasant Country

(Agee Studio Picture)

GENEVIEVE LALOUX and ELENA FLORES are pleased with the friendly atmosphere at Longwood.

Students Name LC Friendly, Ideal School

By LINDA DOLES

Our two foreign informants this year come from the bright sunny atmosphere of Mexico City and from the exquisite world of Paris. But Elena Flores from Mexico and Genevieve Laloux from France prove to be very much like average American girls despite their romantic homelands. For example, they enjoy the same pastimes of dancing, reading, music, the theater, cooking, and swimming. They are thrilled to be in the United States and are very enthusiastic about all they have seen and wish to do while here.

The students, who are roommates, have little trouble understanding one another in her native tongue, as both have studied other languages. They talk vividly with interesting accents as they describe their countries—Acapulco's tropical weather or France's quaint provinces.

Although they like their work at Longwood as informants in the foreign language departments both girls would prefer some type of secretarial position in an international organization when they return home.

Elena, who is from Mexico City, has been a student at the National University of Mexico for the last two years majoring in Spanish literature in a liberal arts course. Previous to that she attended a religious school in Mexico. She learned

Longwood Players Meet With H-S

By PAT LEAKE

The Longwood Players entertained the Hampden-Sydney Jongleurs and young men interested in dramatics at a party in Jarman Auditorium Wednesday night, October 10.

Mr. David Wiley talked with the boys about the forthcoming production, and the Players entertained by various readings from the play. Since the play "Skin of Our Teeth" is a comedy, everyone thoroughly enjoyed it.

The play was written by Thornton Wilder, noted American playwright, in the early 1940's. The Broadway cast included Tallulah Bankhead, Frederick March, and Florence Eldridge.

After the informal meeting, refreshments were served in the Green Room. It proved to be a very enjoyable evening, and also strengthened the dramatic interest between the two colleges.

Support Sought

To date, there have been five scheduled class Circus practices. Off the record, however, and equally as important, there have been many, many meetings of script writers, dance enthusiasts, set designers, prop staffs, and all sorts of committee conferences.

Every piano in the school is vibrating from hours of constant pounding strains of "original" music drifting across campus at all hours. There is no doubt about it—Circus is underway.

Perhaps the time has come to insert a very important reminder to each and every class member. Circus is participation. Everything depends on enthusiastic support—the songs, the costumes, the scenery, and the acting.

Eight class Circus chairmen have been elected by a majority of votes. They should have a majority of support—or even better—behind them every minute in a tremendous job.

Jarman Hall seats almost 1200 people. This audience will be expecting the "Greatest Show on Earth" next weekend. Will their expectations be fulfilled?

There are five more Circus practices scheduled. Mass rehearsal begins at 7:00 p. m. on Thursday, October 25. Your support is essential for a Circus Longwood can be proud to present.

Mail Malady

The problem of the congestion in the post office at the morning mail hour was brought to the attention of the student body last year, and with a great degree of success, certain measures were carried out to relieve the confusion and congestion. However, with increased enrollment and a change in the post office procedure, the problem has arisen again and become more prominent.

It is with a feeling of complete futility that most students prepare to battle the noisy den of confusion at nine every morning. The morning mail is something which is eagerly anticipated, but reluctantly sought. Is there any student who can bear the thought of eight more months of this bedlam every morning.

Last year in Student Standards, a committee set up to discuss just this sort of problem, considered a number of ways to relieve the post office congestion. As a brief review, it was suggested that the nine o'clock mail call be limited to juniors and seniors and that underclassmen pick up their mail at a later time; that the post office pasasgeway be made one-way to student traffic; that the mail be put up at an odd hour which would eliminate the rush after eight o'clock classes; that the door to the post office be closed until all of the mail is put up; and that the mail be put up in sections at different hours in order to divide the crowds up. After lengthy discussion, it was decided that none of the above measures would really be desirable to the students and would be difficult to put into effect.

Therefore, certain suggestions were made to the student body on a trial basis. By the end of last year the confusion and congestion was at a minimum. It seems appropriate that the students take this matter in their own hands before action has to be taken in the form of regulations such as the ones mentioned above.

The most annoying aspect of the morning mail call is the students who, upon finding their box empty, plant themselves against the wall or in front of their boxes and stand watch on their boxes for five or ten minutes, hoping to see a white envelope pop into the small cubbyhole.

Second on the list of the most annoying aspects are the students who use the morning mail as an opportunity for calling greetings, chatting informally, and standing in groups to make plans. It is easy to see that this is one of the few times during the day when just about everybody is likely to appear on the scene, and it's hard to resist the impulse to stop and talk, but there are those intent upon reaching their box and are not very understanding of this situation!

There are undoubtedly many more "pet peeves" involving the post office in the morning, but there are a few simple measures, which, if taken seriously by the students, could eliminate the majority of these petty annoyances. Most important of these measures is that students keep moving in order to allow each girl a chance to pass by her box. It would be desirable for the traffic to move in the door nearest the steps and out of the back door for a more orderly approach to the boxes.

Standing in the post office area should definitely be discouraged if the congestion is to be relieved. Just as important is the abolishing of conversations and "grouping up" of students in this area.

The mail is put up at 8:30 this year instead of 9:00. This is a big help in that students who do not have eight o'clock classes may go by their boxes before the nine o'clock rush. However, occasionally the mail isn't all up at nine. This cannot be avoided, and it would be considerate of students not to inquire loudly if all of the mail is up—if a box is empty, the owner should leave and check it at a later time.

In summary, if the students would take it upon themselves to carry out a few simple measures, the congestion in the post office could be relieved considerably, making the matter less of a problem to all concerned.

Traditional Task?

One result of the recent "Rat Day" which is undeniably good and appreciated by all is the new and shiny appearance of our Equestrian Statue of Joan of Arc, which is on the colonnade.

Through the sophomores, who had a decided advantage over the freshmen this past weekend, Joan of Arc received a thorough cleaning and polishing; her improved appearance is now enjoyed by all. The members of Alpha Kappa Gamma, which sponsored the statue, would like to thank all of those who participated, (either voluntarily or by force), in this task. Although it was only one of many "little chores" performed by the "rats," it is one of the most outstanding and noticeable ones, now that the big day is over.

In a quite serious sense, however, the members of AKG would like to suggest that the cleaning of the statute become a traditional "Rat Day" task; one to be repeated each year as a part of the day's events. At any rate, it is something for the future sophomores to consider, and if it is agreed upon to continue improving "Joan's" appearance, it would be a very satisfactory gesture.

'Pajama Game' Delights All; Called 'Humdinger' Musical

By PATSY POWELL

"A humdinger" is what Walter Kerr of the Herald-Tribune called it, and a humdinger "The Pajama Game" was.

Four busloads of Longwood students traveled to the Mosque in Richmond last week to see the rollicking musical, "The Pajama Game." This funny and frisky romping musical was studded with such song favorites as "Hey There", "Her Is", "Once a Year Day", "Steam Heat", "A New Town Is a Blue Town", "Small Town", "I'm Not at All in Love", and "Hernando's Hideway".

The road company of "The Pajama Game" features Larry Douglas, Betty O'Neil, and Buster West in the leads, and Barbara Bostock who "stole the show" from the stars as Gladys, the role made famous on Broadway by Carole Haney.

Mr. Douglas is best remembered for his role in the Broadway production of Rodgers and Hammerstein's "The King and I". Miss O'Neil has been seen in "South Pacific", "Two on the Aisle", and "Pal Joey". Mrs. West has appeared in the Earl Carroll "Vanities", George White's "Scandals", and "Follow the Girls".

The musical comedy hit, based on Frederick Brisson's hilarious Book-of-the-Month Club novel "Seven-and-a-Half," takes place in a small town in the Middle West. Employees of a pajama factory are the characters. Songs of Richard Adler and Jerry Ross make "The Pajama Game" a first-rate musical rumpus.

Mention certainly must be made of the scenery, designed by Lemuel Ayers, for such things as a neon sign effect, caused by a wired curtain, fascinated "The Pajama Game" audience.

Lacking little but the excitement of Broadway itself, "The Pajama Game" was indeed what Variety called "A smash hit—a powerhouse—irrestible".

Red 'n Whites Welcome "Classmate"

By ELLA CARTER

One "student" with a completely new face has returned to Longwood's campus this fall!

Midst latest hair styles and new clothing a la Paris, Sally's new face is shining again for the Red and White Junior Class as their class symbol.

Everyone looks up to Sally's new face, mounted on a six-foot mahogany frame model. Each year since 1946 the Junior Red and Whites have welcomed Sally as a member of their class. When she isn't busy Sally has Junior Class President Mary Ann Foster for a roommate! When the fire alarm sounds at 2:00 a. m., Sally, dressed in her red and white, is one of the first to leave junior building.

Sally's face, designed by Kate Krebhiel, is made of paper molded over a wire cast.

"Dressing up Sally for a new year seemed to add a little pep to our class spirit," Kate said. "After all, it's our turn to win Circus!"

The juniors are proud of Sally, but the Green and Whites insist that she has been "two-faced!"

Annual Woodrow Wilson Fellowships Now Available For Graduate Study

The Woodrow Wilson Fellowship Program in the Humanities and Social Sciences announces its annual program to encourage undergraduates now in their fourth year to undertake graduate work in order to enter the teaching profession.

Students who receive a National Woodrow Wilson Fellowship are paid $1250 plus tuition for a year of graduate study at any university of their choice, with an extra $500 for married students and additional sums for children. Students being detached from the armed forces before September, 1957, are also eligible.

Candidates may not file applications directly, but will receive blanks only after private recommendation by a member of the faculty of this institution. Any student expecting to graduate in the spring of 1957 may learn more of the details of this Fellowship by consulting Professor Marvin W. Schlegel of the Department of History, who will act as representative.

The deadline for receiving recommendations is November 17, 1956. Application blanks will be mailed directly to the student on receipt of a faculty member's recommendation. Only students who would elect graduate work in the humanities or social sciences, and whose records are superior, should request recommendation from a faculty member.

Tigers Edged Out By Johns Hopkins

Johns Hopkins Jays edged Hampden-Sydney College 14-13 Saturday in a Mason-Dixon Conference football game at Baltimore. It was the Tigers' second loss against three wins.

Halfback Tommy Bryant scored on an end sweep from the five after Hampden-Sydney recovered a Hopkins fumble at that point to tie the score at 7-7 just before the halftime intermission.

Cliff Harding, tailback in the Hopkins single wing attack, scored on an end run of 10 yards in the first quarter and booted the extra point to give the Jays their first seven points.

The host eleven scored again in the third period as Dick Auffarth, wingback, ran for 11 yards into the end zone. Harding again came through with the extra point placement that proved the decisive scoring margin.

Freshman Halfback Bill Benson, offensive standout for the Tigers, circles left end for 16 yards and the final H-SC score in the third period. Bobby Saylor's boot for the extra point was wide.

The Tigers were again hobbled with the injury jinx which has plagued them from the season's start with Fullback Bill Lehew and Halfbacks Charlie Denny and Wally Giglio slowed to walks with ailments.

The Jays, given top Mason-Dixon billing in pre-season forecasts, lived up to expectations.

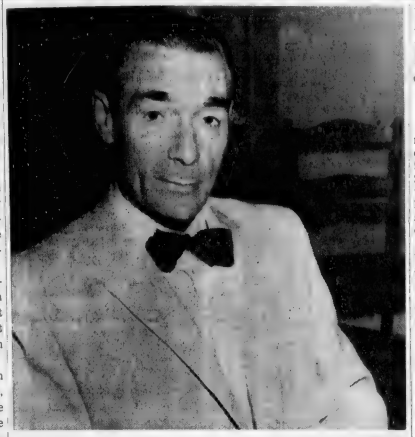
JERRY HARDIN and DEL CLOSE in a scene from "Julius Caesar" which the world famous Barter Theatre of Virginia will include in their spectacular production of "The Living Theater" on October 29.

Jongleurs, Longwood Players To Present 'Living Theatre'

Robert Porterfield, managing director, Barter Theatre of Virginia, has assembled a superb cast for "Living Theatre" which the Hampden-Sydney Jongleurs and the Longwood Players are presenting in Johns Auditorium at Hampden-Sydney on Oct. 29.

He has acted in many summer theatres, off-Broadway and in many TV productions before joining the Barter. His numerous roles at the Barter have included Brutus in "Julius Caesar" and Antonio in "The Tempest."

Marcie Hubart was chosen by Julie Harris as the best young actress of the year at New York Barter auditions and is the 1956 Barter Award actress. A graduate of Barnard College, Miss Hubert has appeared in the Allenberry Playhouse and the Westport Playhouse in addition to numerous TV appearances on Studio One, The Big Story, Camera Three and the Kraft Television Theatre.



Annette Hunt, whose performance as Antigone at the Barter secured for her the leading role in Paul Green's outdoor drama, "Wilderness Road", is an alumna of Virginia Intermont College. Miss Hunt was a membe of the Barter company last summer appearing with Larry Gates in the distinguished production of "The Cocktail Party" and has toured with the Barter players in "Sabrina Fair" and "Julius Casera".

Jerry Hardin, who functions as actor, director and master of ceremonies of "Living Theatre", studied for two years at the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art in London on a Fulbright Scholarship after graduating from Southwestern University. While in England he played at the Southwark Shakespeare Festival. Mr. Hardin was Mary Martin's choice for the arter award in 1955.

Mitch Ryan joined the Barter company this summer and Abingdon audiences and critics were unanimous in their praise for his work in "Bus Stop," "Picnic," "Dark of the Moon" and "The Rainmaker". He had previously spent two seasons with the Rehoboth Beach Showboat. Mr. Ryan was founder of the successful Carriage House Art Theatre in Louisville.

DR. JAMES WELLARD

Noted, Versatile Professor Becomes Rotunda Advisor

As a student, a war correspondent, a biographer, a novelist, and a college professor, Dr. James Wellard has carved out varied, interesting, and successful careers. A new addition to the Longwood faculty and the English Department, Dr. Wellard has become advisor to The Rotunda.

Dr. Wellard, who was born in England, originally came to this country on a Rockefeller fellowship following his graduation from the University of London's University College with a bachelor's degree in English. With him here in Farmville are his wife, and their children, John, eight years old, and Julia, who is six.

After studying at the University of Chicago graduate library school for five years, Dr. Wellard received his doctor of philosophy degree. After this he served for four years as activities manager of International House there. Under this program he worked with several who have since become presidents and leaders in their own countries.

The versatile professor was later sent to England as a correspondent for the Chicago Sun-Times. With the advent of Pearl Harbor, his title was changed to war correspondent, and he covered the North African landings, the invasions of Sicily, Italy and France with General Patton's Third Army. This experience led him to write "General George S. Patton, Man Under Mars," a biography of the general. "The facts are correct, but the interpretation is my own," states Dr. Wellard.

After the eventful war years, Dr. Wellard returned to writing novels, the first of which was "Journey to a High Mountain," which has been followed by many. His latest work, "Memoirs of a Cross-Eyed Man," is a humorous off-beat novel and is coming out in October. Between these two novels Wellard's "Deep Is the Night" was published ... 150,000 copies were printed.

Metro Goldwyn Mayer's filming of his "Action of the Tiger" is due in October, also. The film, which takes place in Greece, will star Van Johnson and Mlle. Martine Carroll, a French actress. This is his first novel to be filmed, but while in Italy the noted author did a lot of script writing, mostly for documentaries.

Dr. Wellard came to Longwood from the University of Illinois school of journalism where he was a visiting lecturer by invitation. Here at Longwood he is teaching a class in journalism, children's literature, and freshman English.

Library Displays Explained By Informant

By GENEVIEVE LALOUX

Next to the reserved book room in the library there is a place set aside for displays concerning subjects of general interest. I should like to offer some information about the display on the French Province. This exhibit has been planned especially for the students of Longwood College, in order that all may become better acquainted with France.

Although France is smaller in size than the State of Texas, the country itself is so variegated that it is necessary to take up each part separately.

For quite some time France was divided into provinces, each of which was governed by a lord. Each area already had a geographical unit, and soon acquired an historical unity from its own peculiar history.

When Louis XIV came into power he made an attempt to unify these provinces into one kingdom. However, they remained separate for many years to come chiefly because of the difficulties of communication and the differences in the administration.

In order to achieve unity the Revolutionary government, in 1791, divided the provinces into departments. However, the legacy of the past could not be eradicated in one hundred and fifty years. For this reason we may still refer to these units as the provinces of France.

It is my purpose in this display to introduce each of these provinces. At present there is a display on Provence, the region which speads from the low valley of the Rhone to the Italian frontier. This display has been organized into two parts; one is given to the economical and geographical aspects; the other to civilization, with samples of the Roman ruins and with reproductions of famous modern artists.

For those who are more deeply interested in the project, I have in my possession many other documents which are available to students at any time.

to speak English at the Mexico City College and at a school sponsored by the American Embassy.

Because of the climate in Mexico the school year runs from February to November leaving the "winter" months for vacation. Here at college Elena likes the campus and dormitories and realizes she missed them at the University.

Being the oldest of five brothers and sisters she loves the friendly atmosphere here. Speaking in English, Elena explained how she was especially impressed with the even temperament, the kindness, and the agreeableness of all the American people. About America itself she was very explicit in saying that what she liked best was the tolerance of all the religions. She thinks that this great nation is essential as an example for other countries. Elena is delighted with Virginia and to sum up, "likes eet all."

Genevieve, who is the youngest of six is actually part Belgian and part French and was born in Brussels. She grew up in the unique town of Valenciennes in France but later returned to Belgium as a student in a religious college. She attended another religious college and then entered the University of Paris where her father now lives.

Majoring in history, she has obtained a degree that stands between a B. A. and a Master's in United States colleges. During that time she learned to speak English. This past year while a student at the university she also taught at the same religious school she had previously attended.

In reference to her opportunity to come to America she said, "I grabbed it and couldn't believe it." After the new experience of traveling across an ocean via the Queen Elizabeth, she spent three days in New York and thinks it is wonderful. She had no idea Farmville would be such a lovely place and is "delighted to live here." She hopes to spend another year and see all of the United States.

Genevieve, who seems to be enthusiastic about every new experience, has been using her favorite hobby since her arrival—taking pictures. Whether interested in photography or France anyone would appreciate the exhibit she has set up in the library featuring French Provinces. The quaint places are made more real by the photographs our amateur photographer has taken. She will display other aspects of France in several more exhibits this year.

College Band Organized

Florence King, Dorothy Marshall

With the organization of a college band, it is hoped that all girls who play or have previously played an instrument will participate. Dr. Molnar announced that sixty members of the Freshman Class played musical instruments in high school, which gives him a good foundation for his hopes of converting the band, which now has fourteen members, to a sixty-piece unit.

You Can Win a Cash Award— and Scholarship Money for Your College in Reader's Digest

$41,000 CONTEST

Open to All College Students (Faculty, too!)

Nothing to buy...nothing to write

...and you may find you know more about people than you think!

How well do you know human nature? Can you tell what subjects interest people most? Here is a chance to test your judgment—show how good an editor you are—and you may win $5,000 for yourself, plus $5,000 in scholarship funds for your college.

It's fun to try. Maybe you can top other students in colleges across the country . . . and you can match wits with the editors of Reader's Digest.

Why do far more college graduates read Reader's Digest than any other magazine? What is it that makes the Digest the most widely read magazine in the world — with 11 million copies bought each month in the United States, plus 9 million abroad? Why is it read each month by at least 60 million people, in 12 languages—Arabic, Danish, English, Finnish, French, German, Italian, Japanese, Norwegian, Portuguese, Spanish and Swedish?

Can you spot in a typical issue of Reader's Digest the universal human values that link scholars, statesmen, scientists, writers, businessmen, housewives? Can you pick out the articles that will be most popular with the average Digest reader?

You may find . . . you know more about people than you think!

Here's all you do. Study the descriptions (at right) of the articles in the October Reader's Digest—or, better still, read the complete articles in the issue itself. (But you are not required to buy The Reader's Digest to enter the contest.) Then simply list the six articles—in order of preference—that you think readers of the magazine will like best. This will be compared with a nationwide survey conducted among a cross section of Digest subscribers.

Follow the directions given below. Fill in the entry blank, paste it on a post card, and get it into the mail before the deadline. Additional blanks are obtainable at your college bookstore.

All entries must be postmarked not later than midnight, October 25, 1956. Don't delay. In case of ties, the entry with the earliest postmark will win.

YOU CAN WIN:

$5000 cash 1st prize
plus $5000 for the scholarship fund of your college or . . .

$1000 cash 2nd prize
plus $1000 for the scholarship fund of your college or . . .

Any of TEN $500 cash prizes
plus $500 for the scholarship fund of your college or . . .

Any of 100 $10 prizes
in book credit from your local college bookstore

And if your entry is the best from your college you will receive an extra award —an additional $10 in book credit at your college bookstore.

FOLLOW THESE EASY RULES

1. Read the descriptions in this advertisement of the articles that appear in October Reader's Digest. Or better, read the complete articles. Then select the 6 that you think most readers will like best.

2. On the entry blank at left, write the number of each article you select. List them in what you think will be the order of popularity, from first to sixth place. Your selections will be judged by comparison with a national survey which ranks in order of popularity the 6 articles that readers like best. Fill in and mail the coupon. All entries must be postmarked not later than midnight, October 25, 1956.

3. This contest is open only to college students and faculty members in the U. S., excluding employees of The Reader's Digest, its advertising agencies, and their families. It is subject to all federal, state and local laws and regulations.

4. Only one entry per person.

5. In case of ties, entries postmarked earliest will win. Entries will be judged by O. E. McIntyre, Inc., whose decision will be final. All entries become property of The Reader's Digest; none returned.

6. All winners notified by mail. List of cash-prize winners mailed if you enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Just pick in order the six articles you think most readers of October Reader's Digest will like the best.

Barter Theater To Give "New, Different Drama"

The spirit of theatrical history will live again Monday night, October 29, when the Barter Theatre presents "The Living Theatre" in John's Auditorium. This program is termed as "something decidedly new and different" in the theatrical world.

"Living Theatre" will present the dramatic conflicts in the minds of men from the days of Pericles of Athens to those of Czar Alexander II of Russia, and Arthur Miller's modern tragedy, "Death of a Salesman." The program also will include the flippancy of some of the best comedies in the history of drama.

In the "Living Theatre" one has the opportunity to view the most potent scenes from the world's best writings —"Antigone," "Julius Caesar," "The Rivals," "Cyrano de Bergerac," and several other plays of equal stature. In a single performance the cream of the world's theatre for three thousand years passes before one's eyes.

Genesis in 1932

The Barter Theatre's beginning dates back to the long, lean summer days of '32; a period typified by the expression, "Brother, can you spare a dime?" The birth of the Barter is the story of Robert Porterfield, the fertile-brained, energetic founder. When the sting of the depression hit the New York theatre, Porterfield, along with twenty-four other actors, left gaudy Broadway and set up shop in the back country in Abingdon, Va.

It was he who came up with the idea of a theatre for which admission would be paid in produce of any kind, in return for which the actors would provide entertainment. Hence, the name, Barter Theatre. The first season wound up in the black. On hand were $4.30 in cash and quantities of jellies and jams. The playwrights were paid off in hams in lieu of royalty.

In the spring of 1946 the state of Virginia agreed to lend support to the Theatre. In 1949 the Barter movement catapulted into the international scene, giving a production of "Hamlet" at Kronborg Castle in Elsinore, Denmark. This was the first American production ever presented in the historical castle immortalized by Shakespeare.

One of the most coveted awards in the American theatre is the Barter Theatre of Virginia Award. It is for an outstanding performance by an actor or actress during the cur-

College Receives Physical Changes During '56 Summer

During the summer and continuing through the first part of the fall session of school many physical improvements have been made here at Longwood.

The legislature granted Longwood an appropriation of $36,700 for remodeling the kitchen. Most of this money is going to be used to build a dish washing room with completely new equipment and also to install a ventilation system. The remainder will be used to buy additional equipment until another appropriation is granted. The dining hall has also been improved by the addition of a new roof.

Re-wiring will soon take place throughout Ruffner Hall and part of Library Hall. Each room will be equipped with two double receptacles.

The Alumnae House has been remodeled and partially refurnished. This has been accomplished for the most part through the contributions of the different alumnae.

A central storeroom has also been made available for the storage of household supplies. This is lo-

"WEEDIE" NORMAN, 1956 ANIMAL TRAINER

Alpha Kappa Gamma Chooses Sophomore

With a crack of the whip by Louise Norman, a Sophomore from Richmond, Circus festivities will begin here this Saturday at 4 p.m.

Two of the greatest circus entertainers, "Mr. Barnum and Mr. Ringling," will open the Circus presentation of class skits that night at 8 p.m. in Jarman Hall, according to Jeanne Saunders, Circus Chairman.

A past Circus class representative and the Sophomore float chairman, "Weedie" Norman has been named Animal Trainer for this year's Circus, "Hey, Rube," according to the annual Circus sponsor, Alpha Kappa Gamma.

As Animal Trainer, "Weedie" will lead the opening parade featuring the class floats, circus animals on horse-drawn wagons, clowns, students dressed in their class colors, and the Longwood and Farmville High School bands.

To Lead Parade

After marching down Pine Street to Route No. 460, the parade will proceed along Main Street and come back to the college campus.

When the Circus activities begin in Jarman Hall, the Queen and princesses will be revealed as "Hey, Rube" nears its climax.

When judges gather to select the winning class float and skit, interest of all Red and Whites and Green and Whites who compose the competing classes will soar to its height.

After the celebrated Ring Masters announce the winning floats and skits, the program in the auditorium will close as each Circus representative leads her class to the main recreation hall or the "Midway" of the AKG Circus. The audience will then follow this procession.

Practices Held

Mass Circus practices will be held tomorrow and Friday nights. They will begin promptly at 7 p.m. Costumes will not be necessary tomorrow. All people in the skits must wear their costumes and have props with them for the Friday rehearsal. Pictures will be taken then.

Alpha Kappa Gamma, which is sponsored by Miss Elizabeth Burger, announced that the money collected from each participant in Circus will be donated to funds for the purchase of a tree to be added to the college campus.

The public is invited to attend the Circus festivities.

Science Students Use New Telescope To Observe Stars

A new refractor telescope has been purchased by the Department of Chemistry and Physics of Longwood College. The telescope has already been used by the freshman classes in Physical Science to observe the moon and Mars. Several General Science classes from the Farmville High School have also used the new telescope under the supervision of their student teachers.

When conditions for observation of the night sky are unusually favorable, a general invitation will be given to Longwood students. Satisfactory observations have been made from the grounds in front of Stevens Hall, but Longwood Estate offers a better location for viewing near the horizon and with less interference from lights of the town.

This new instrument with a three-inch objective lens will reach a magnification of two hundred times, under the highest power eyepiece. An auxiliary finderscope contains a six-power crosshair eyepiece and serves effectively in initially locating the celestial object to be viewed and in maintaining the field of the object as the earth rotates.

The equational mounting of the telescope is constructed with such great precision and balance that finger-tip controls manipulate the mechanism in any direction or plane. Verniers on this mounting allow for setting the telescope to the location of stars and planets from information provided by star maps.

Urben To Present Recital In Jarman Hall on Tuesday

By LINDA DOLES

Mr. Walter Urben, a music professor at Longwood, will give a piano recital in Jarman Auditorium on Tuesday, October 30 at 8 p.m. A newcomer to the college faculty this year, Mr. Urben has planned an entertaining program for the evening.

Featured first will be "French Suite" No. 5 in G Minor by Bach which is a series of French dances. Second will be ""Fantaisie," Opus 49 in F minor by Chopin. After intermission the recital will continue with "Hark, Hark! the Lark" by Schubert, translated by Lisst. Following that will be Concert Etude No. 1, "Forest Murmurs" by Lisst; and to end the program Mr. Urben will play several pieces by Brahms: "Intermezzo," Opus 118, No. 1, Opus 119, No. 3, and "Two Rhapsodies," Opus 9, No.'s 1 and 2.

Performing with the U. S. Army Band before the atomic energy blasts at White Sands or teaching in the Sierra-Nevadas next to the United States' only active volcano are just a couple of variety experiences Mr. Urben has had in his musical career. He is from central California and attended the Conservatory of Music at the College of the Pacific in Stockton. That being only a little larger than Longwood he feels right at home here.

He received a fellowship at Indiana University where he obtained his master degree in music. Since then he has taught music at Louisiana State University and a public school in Susanville, Nevada where he also conducted the chorus and band. He studied for a year in New York with the late Carl Friedburg, former head of piano at the Julliard School of Music. He spent two years in the army stationed with the band at Presidio in San Francisco and toured the West. The past two years he was at the University of Illinois where he was awarded an advance certificate in music education.

Rotunda Becomes Convention Hall For Student Mock Election Campaign

Campaign plans are underway for the Student Government's Mock Election to be held on November 1. This date is a correction of the previously announced date of October 31.

Th Rotunda of Longwood College has taken on the aspect of a convention hall with the appearance of cardboard figures to represent the three parties. These figures, the well-known Democratic donkey, Republican elephant, and a miniature state of Virginia for the newly formed States' Rights Party, along with various posters have been received with great enthusiasm by the student body.

On Saturday, October 27, a car representing each party will be in the Circus Parade. The cars will be very elaborately decorated and will carry students representing the three candidates. These students will be masked and costumed in order to appear as similar to their candidate as possible. This is expected to be a spectacular addition to the annual Circus Parade.

Before the election, student demonstrations will be carried on in the dining hall and through the dormitories. On the day of the balloting the polls will be open from 1-6 p.m. Members of the three different parties will serve at the precincts, and the ballots will be marked secretly in official voting booths.

"These national parties are interested in our letting them know how the voting goes here. We are hoping there will be one hundred per cent voting among those who did register", disclosed Election Chairman, Jo Davis. "From the assembly program it looks as though there will be because of the enthusiastic reaction there. Everyone is urged to support her own candidate in conversation as well as in voting."

Dr. Stinnott To Address Student Body At Fall Convocation Assembly Oct. 30

As guest speaker for the Fall Convocation on October 30, in Jarman Hal, Dr. Edmund Ware Sinnott, Dean of the Graduate School at Yale University, will address the student body on "Life and Mind." The Convocation will be held during the regular Assembly on Tuesday and will be preceded by an academic procession of the faculty.

Dr. Sinnott, a native of Cambridge, Massachusetts, is noted as an educator and botanist. He received his A. B. degree from Harvard University and held a teaching fellowship there from 1908-1910. After a year of botanical research in Australia he returned to become professor of botany and genetics at Connecticut Agricultural College.

After being professor of botany at Barnard College, Dr. Sinnott taught botany at Columbia University. In 1940 he came to Yale University as Sterling Professor of Botany and chairman of the department of botany. He later became director of the Sheffield Scientific School in 1945 and assumed his position as Dean of the Graduate School in 1950.

Dr. Sinnott has been particularly interested in problems dealing with the form and structure of plants and has studied the support from the viewpoint of inheritance and factor controlling development. He has published a long series of papers and has written two textbooks, "Botany: Principles and Problems," and "Principles of Genetics," both of which have been widely used in college teaching.

Music for the Convocation will be furnished by the Longwood Choir which will sing "O Lamb of God" and "Cherubim Song."

Birthday Best?

Last night's birthday dinner was a welcome event for students who are filled with expectations and anticipations of the nearing AKG Circus.

The booming carnival music and the gaily-decorated dining hall gave a perfect festive atmosphere. Members of the Junior Class are to be congratulated for this addition to the week's excitement.

However, one of the places which put the unintentional rudeness of some students in the limelight is in the dining hall during the monthly birthday dinners.

Each birthday dinner is planned by some group or organization for the enjoyment of the students. Sunday attire is worn, a special menu has been planned, a birthday tribute is sung to those having birthdays during the month, and entertainis presented by talented students or guests.

It is during the entertainment that students have displayed impoliteness by their inattentiveness, talking, and clattering of plates. Some motion in the hall cannot be avoided, but talking, even whispering, could be saved until the selections are over.

From the accompanying applause it is evident that the entertainment presented during these dinners is enjoyed and appreciated by students. Therefore, the inattentiveness sometimes shown is not in keeping with this evidence. Students should remember that noise is greatly magnified in a large place and a culmination of 800 conversations can easily give the appearance of rudeness to the entertainer. Enjoyment can best be shown by attention.

Of the utmost rudeness is leaving the dining hall before the completion of the dinner. Students have much to do and many places to go, but it has always been the custom for them to remain seated until the main door has been opened as a signal that the meal is over.

It would be good for students to keep in mind that the goal and reward of birthday dinners is the enjoyment of those attending. Your "birthday best" is expected.

Misunderstanding Mentioned

Of growing concern to the Administration is a misunderstanding which has arisen concerning use of the 2 a. m. bus into Farmville on Monday morning. It seems that students are taking advantage of a privilege which has been given only in special cases at the discretion of the Dean.

The bus schedule from Richmond to Farmville makes it very difficult for a student to make desirable connections from her weekend destination. However, weekend plans should be made with the existing bus schedule in mind.

There are several reasons for discouraging use of the 2 a. m. bus. The foremost reason is the fact that in meeting this bus, as is the custom, the night-watchman is taken off of the campus at a time when he is needed here at school.

Another prominent reason causing disapproval of the late bus is the little amount of time left for students to sleep, unpack, and / or do their weekend assignments before their Monday classes.

It has been pointed out that a majority of the students who have taken this bus left school on Thursday or Friday, allowing sufficient time for a weekend of fun and ample vacation.

In the future it is urged that students not ask for permission to return to Farmville later than the times specified in the Handbook, nor present permission from home to do so.

Color Cup Chance

RAH TEAM! — CLASS HOCKEY — NOVEMBER 1956!! Yes, with the coming of November here at Longwood, our thoughts turn toward the class hockey games. Here is the first real chance for a class to win points toward the Color Cup.

Each class has a team which plays against every other class. One of the most important games of the year will be the annual Sophomore-Freshman game, as the results of this game will determine when the "rats" can take off their caps. It is the hope of the Athletic Association that those people who are interested in participating in such games, will take advantage of the practices in order to play. So far this year, the general practices have been quite successful, and each class has been represented.

There are some of you who might say, "I can't play hockey, I don't know anything about it." To you, let me say that when a team has a cheering section behind them, it really means a lot. If you are out supporting your team, you have a part in each and every play they make.

The class hockey games will put some class color off to a good start on winning the color cup. Remember, it takes not only the team on the field, but a class cheering behind them to bring a team to victory. So, let's everyone come out and support her class and sister class team!

THE CIRCUS IS COMING!

Cast Chosen For Fall Play; Comedy Uses Historic Slant

By RENE WEIMER

All are in for a wonderful, big surprise—the fall play is in the making. This year's is going to be the biggest and best ever. Introducing Thornton Wilder's "The Skin of Our Teeth" ...

Strange things will happen in this history of mankind in a comic strip. It is an experiment in the use of time in an out of the ordinary fashion. This is a comedy about the Antrobus family and their maid, Sabina. Living in Excelsior, New Jersey, they represent any typical American Family in any untypical situation.

Are you confused? So is the play. Wait until you live through fire, flood, pestilence, the ice age, a double feature movie, many wars, and many depressions with them. You, too, will go through every sort of mood and look upon the future with optimism. But, my friends, they live through it—by the skin of their teeth, they survive.

The following is the cast list for the play:

Announcer, John Phillups; Sabina, Amy McFall; Miss Fitzpatrick, Patti Parker; Mrs. Antrobus, Donna Boone; Dinosaur, Pat Leake; Mammoth, Marie Messick; Telegraph Boy, Tom Bretlow; Gladys, Cat Ozmon; Henry, Jim Jordon; and Mr. Antrobus, Garnet Smith.

Also as the Doctor, Herb Goodman; Professor, Charter Wells; Judge, W. D. Ward; Hommer, John Lynn; E. Muse, Ruth Tally; T. Muse, Gloria Kratch; M. Muse, Molly Workman; 1st Majorette, Maracle Koons; Woman in Audience, Diane Rabb; 2nd Majorette, Norrish Munson; and Fortune Teller, Barbara Burnside.

Others include Broadcast Official, Charter Wells; Assistant, Ann Wheeler; Mr. Treymayne, W. D. Ward; Hester, Genevieve Laloux; Ivy, Vicki Brinkly; and Fred Baily, Charles Baily.

Also, 1st Conveener, Herb Goodman; 2nd Conveener, John Phillups; 3rd Conveener, Jim Hanshaw; 4th Conveener, William Doughty; 5th Conveener, Ben Morgan; 6th Female Conveener, Nancy Morton; 7th Female Conveener, Jo Ann Sloop; 8th Female Conveener, Nancy Brubeck; 1st Usher, Carol Carson; 2nd Usher, Mary Dawn Perry; and Monkey Conveener, Justine Blount.

The fifty-nine year old author, Thornton Niven Wilder has produced experimental novels and plays which have continually gained fame. In 1938, "Our Town" won the Pulitzer Prize for drama. "The Ides of March," "The Trumpet Shall Sound," "The Merchant of Yonkers," and "The Matchmaker" are among the many famous plays by Mr. Wilder. Surely, you will recognize some of his novels: "The Bridge of San Luis Rey," "The Woman of Andros," and "Heaven is My Destination."

"The Skin of Our Teeth" began its tryout tour in London in October of 1942. The following year proved its success by winning the Pulitzer Prize. Presenting this play has many detailed problems. It is so big—scenery representing the ages flies through the air. And completely new scenery is being designed. A motion picture is being made.

For all the work that is being done, a fabulous play is coming our way. You will enjoy it—be prepared to do so. Alpha Psi Omega wants to see everybody turn out for "The Skin of Our Teeth" on November 15, 16, and 17. Tickets will be sold week nights outside the dining hall.

Tigers Down Western Maryland, 34-14

Hampden-Sydney turned on the power in the last three quarters at Westminster, Maryland, Saturday to trounce the Western Maryland football team, 34-14.

The Tigers, in scoring their fourth victory in six games, were paced by the passing and running of Bob Furr, who scored one touchdown himself and tossed to his mates for two others. He also kicked two extra points.

Jim Felty got the first touchdown in the second period, taking a pass from Furr to complete a 45-yard pass-run combination. Later in the period, Furr hit Bill Benson with a pass for a 38-yard touchdown romp.

In the third period, Furr plunged over from the three. Benson added another touchdown in the fourth quarter on a 4-yard run and Jim Denny finished the scoring with a 3-yard plunge.

Al Miller tallied for Western Maryland in the second quarter on a pass from Dick Holbruner, covering 30 yards. Tom Riggin went 40 yards in the final period for the other Western Maryland score.

JOHNNY LYNN, one of Longwood's few male students, can often be found in the Rec, playing bridge in female company!

Lynn, Male Student, Enjoys Typewriters, Guns, Music

By H. V. LANCASTER JR.

Typewriters, machine guns, Rachmaninoff—these are a few of the interests of John Frederick Lynn, one of about fifteen boys in a student body of approximately 840 girls.

A sophomore from Farmville, John is majoring in business at Longwood. In school John studies amid the machines of commerce, the typewriters, the calculators, and the duplicators; but every Tuesday night he dons the uniform of a private in the Virginia National Guard and learns to use more potent machines, the hand grenade, the machine gun, and the rifle—weapons of national defense.

In his spare time John enjoys playing the piano and listening to all types of music. Among the major composers his favorites are Rachmaninoff and Chopin, who made outstanding contributions to keyboard literature and were talented pianists as well. This interest in piano and piano music may be due to his father, Fred Lynn, who tunes and rebuilds pianos and organs. John's interest in music is not confined to playing and listening but includes the Farmville Presbyterian choir in which he sings bass.

Since coming to Longwood, Lynn has appeared in two plays: "Blood Wedding" which was presented last spring by the Longwood Players, and "Lord Byron's Love Letter," a one-act play by Tennessee Williams, which was given October 5 by Alpha Psi Omega, honorary dramatic fraternity. He has been selected for a role in Thornton Wilder's "The Skin of Our Teeth" which is to be staged in November. John says he likes to watch plays on television and saw "The Skin of Our Teeth" starring Mary Martin on an NBC "Spectacular."

In the fall of 1954 when he was a senior at Farmville High School, John Lynn won a watch in a "take it easy" economy run sponsored by the Farmville Junior Chamber of Commerce. The object of the contest was to see who could adhere to the rules for traffic safety and at the same time get the best mileage on a gallon of gas per ton of car weight. A member of the JC's accompanied each driver to see that he obeyed all traffic regulations. The competition was limited to students of Farmville High School. John took first place with a 1951 Studebaker.

Playing bridge, ping-pong, and basketball are John's pastimes. "Bridge is on top right now," he says, "because that is about the only thing I can find to do." He also likes to read adventure stories, especially novels by Zane Grey. Last year he joined Tau Theta Pi, men's social fraternity at Longwood, and went with several of the members on a fishing trip to Lake Watauga in Tennessee.

As a member of Company G's machine gun detail, John learns how to disassemble, name the parts, re-assemble, and fire a machine gun. He went with Company G., recently nicknamed the "Stonewall Brigade," to camp at an army reservation near Indiantown Gap, Pa., for two weeks of intensive military training.

At the present time John is not sure what he wants to do when he finishes college. He may try to get a master's degree in business administration and then seek a job in business, or he may teach typing and shorthand in high school. But whatever he does, he will take with him interests ranging from footlights to fishing tackle and as varied as typewriters, machine guns, and Rachmaninoff.

Madison Defeated By Longwood Here

The Longwood varsity hockey team again experienced victory as they played host to the Madison team on Saturday. The first game came to a thrilling climax with a score of 2-1. Nancy Andrews making the winning goal in the last minute of the game. Nancy Richardson is credited with making the first goal of the game.

The Longwood team showed tremendous spirit and team work in the second game, finishing with a 4-0 score. Those making scores in the second game were Nancy Andrews, Janie Glenn, Jean O'Connell, and Nancy Striplin.

Seeing action in the first game were: "Delo" Dove, Nancy Striplin, Nancy Andrews, Nancy Richardson, Gayle Cunningham, Carolyn Obenshain, Lou Heier, Margaret Dowdy, Anne Wayne Fuller, Jo Anne Sloop, Carol Wolfe, and Loretta Kuhn, who served as captain.

Second Game

The team for the second game included: Janet Chase, Janie Glenn, Nancy Andrew, Nancy Striplin, Kitty Harris, Patty Roers, Jean O'Connell, Mary Frances Meyers, Patsy Campbell, Linda Vess, Jackie Waller, Willie Taylor, "Peanuts" Winder, Nancy George, Ann Palmer, Barbara Wade, and Annie V. Weaver, captain.

There was a good student turnout for the game and the songs and cheers from the spectators were appreciated by the team. It is hoped that even more spectators will come out for the Tidewater Hockey Tournament which meets here on November 2 and 3.

Basketball Starts Early For Tigers

The Tiger basketballers got off to one of their earliest starts in history by beginning practice on Monday, October 15. Coach Weenie Miller erected seven veterans and a large number of promising newcomers to the opening day of practice.

Among the returnees are Captain Doug Joyce, Russ Holcombe, Warren Carter, Ted Shepherd, Horsley Putt, Bob Humphreys, and Tommy Fennell. The chief loss from last year's squad is Chuck Mottley.

The new cagers are perhaps the best crop of newcomers ever to enroll at Hampden-Sydney. The Bengals figure to be a threat for both the Litle Eight and Mason-Dixon titles. An interesting feature of the coming basketball season is a Little Eight holiday tournament.

MRS. SLATE and MRS. FARRIER enjoy serving the students from behind the counter of the Snack Bar.

Students Appreciate Snack Bar, Service

By LINDA DOLES

Longwood students before 1948 didn't know what they were missing. For in June of that year our campus acquired one of its favorite and very necessary places—the "Rec" with the Snack Bar.

It is hard to imagine Longwood without the "Rec," for this modernly-furnished room with its attractive atmosphere would certainly be missed now. It wouldn't be the same without the Snack Bar and its soda fountain, delicious snacks, and friendly service in the persons of Mrs. M. P. Farrier and Mrs. E. G. Slate, well-known to their customers.

The snack bar, owned and operated by the Alumni Association, was the idea of Dr. Dabney Lancaster, then president of the college and well-regarded for his help in improving Longwood's physical plant. He wished to provide the girls with a home-like place for casual entertainment an relaxation, the Alumni Association furnished the funds necessary to install the equipment for operation.

No remodeling was needed, for ideally located and constructed, the whole recreation hall has always been the same, having the larger room and platform. Originally it was used occasionally for informal dinners and parties and a kitchenette was in place of the snack bar.

Today, representatives from other schools who are planning a recreational hall envy Longwood. They say that the room itself is so perfect with the spacious dancing floor, the railed landing for tables and booths, and the snack bar separate to one side, all within the main college building.

Decorated with shades representing sections of Virginia and pictures donated by the Norfolk and Western Railroad, all of its features are appreciated by the students who take advantage of its comfortable chairs and sturdy tables and booths.

Besides dancing to music from the juke box, they and their dates can play ping-pong or shuffle board or view their favorite program on the television set.

In the Snack Bar they can enjoy hamburgers, hot dogs, sandwiches, soft drinks, ice cream, and candy the four years pass so quickly.

The Snack Bar started off with a bang the first summer when the Pet Ice Cream Company provided free ice cream cones to the students and faculty on opening day. Today the Snack Bar sells about 10 pounds of hamburger, 2 to 3 gallons of Pepsi Cola, and 8 dozen doughnuts daily. Besides those, other "best-sellers" are chocolate marshmallow ice cream, home-made cake, pecan pie, chili, and soup. The cooking is done by Dorothy Parker who has been employed since the Snack Bar opened. The other helper is Freida Branch who has worked there several years.

Mrs. Farrier, manager of the Snack Bar since its opening, is one of Longwood's most enthusiastic admirers. She loves the contact with the girls and misses the groups as the four years pass so quickly.

As for the work she said, "I would

Council Notes

The Student Government is now in the process of sending out letters to alumnae of the College, telling them about the Dabney S. Lancaster Scholarship. The letters are being sent to former students who were at Longwood during Dr. Lancaster's administration, inviting them to contribuate toward the scholarship fund.

Willy's, a downtown hamburger and hot dog stand, is now based on the approved list of eating places. The rule concerning going to Willy's permits students to go there in groups of three between 10:00 and 10:30 p. m.

When returning from rehearsals in Jarman Hall at night, students are to be in groups of three. Standard rules are to be followed when coming back to the dorms from late rehearsals unless special permission is granted.

Plans are being made by the Student Council for a Combo Rec Dance to be held in November 10. The Student Government Combo party last year proved to be a great success. Definite plans for the dance will be announced at a later date.

Mrs. Slate, assistant manager, has been connected with the Snack Bar for six years. She likes working with young people, particularly college students. Born near Farmville, she now lives here, too, and has two sons and three grandchildren. Active in the Methodist Church, Mrs. Slate has been superintendent of the nursery and kindergarten in the Sunday School for 23 years. When not busy at Longwood, she enjoys housekeeping, sewing, and flowers.

The Snack Bar is open from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. daily, from 8:30 a.m. to 10:30 p.m. Saturdays, and from 4 p.m. to 10:30 p.m. Sundays. Three students, Delores Winder, Jeannette Puckett, and Carol Sandidge, open the "Snack" week nights from 10 to 11.

The profits from this business go to the Alumni Association which contribute in many ways to the school.

Besides snacks, the Snack Bar also sells stuffed animals, souvenirs, stationery, and school supplies.

Lancaster Named State Council Chairman; To Study Institutions Of Higher Learning

Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, President Emeritus of Longwood College, was recently named Chairman of the State Council of Education. The Council was enacted by the 1956 General Assembly and became effective on July 1. Its purpose is to promote the development and operation of a "vigorous, progressive, and co-ordinating system of higher education in the state of Virginia."

As former Superintendent of Public Instruction, Dr. Lancaster has been prominent in the educative field. He also served as president of the Association of Virginia Colleges. He received his B. A. degree from the University of Virginia, his M. S. degree from Virginia Polytechnic Institute, and his L. L. D. from the University of Richmond. He has been appointed to serve a four-year term on the Council.

The State Legislature has appropriated $22,500 per year for two years with which the Council may work. The agency plans to act as an advising partner with the school heads, rather than as a critic. It will strive to eliminate duplications and strengthen all courses of study in the ten state-supported schools.

Eight of the ten state-supported schools have independent boards of trustees. It will be the Council's job to bring these closer together and working as a whole. To do this, studies are necessary on the following topics. 1) the question of admissions, 2) prospective future enrollments in reference to adequate facilities, both in the physical plant and personnel, 3) all programs of study, to eliminate duplicated or unnessary course, adding those in great demand, 4) professional and graduate study programs, 5) budget requests; the Council will spend several days every two years at each state institution to check these requests, making recommendations afterwards to the governor, and 6) extensions and / or two-year branches; no more extensions or two-year branches; will be named without the agency's approval. This does not include any for which funds have already been approved.

The Council will also work in cooperation with the Southern Association for Secondary Schools and Colleges.

Plans Underway For Senior Dance

Chairmen for the Senior Dance, which will be on December 15, have been announced by Shirley Hardy and Mary Jo Davis, co-chairmen of Senior Dance.

As chairmen for the decorations committee are Nancy Lenz and Jeanne Saunders. Jackie Sawyer is in charge of music for the gala affair.

The publicity committee will be headed by Belle Fitzgerald and the ticket committee will work under the direction of Jackie Pond. Anne Wayne Fuller is in charge of favors. As chairman of the program committee is Evelyn Rowe, while Margaret Beavers will plan the party after the dance with her committee.

Ann Savedge is in charge of the floor committee and Ann Thomas is leading the figure committee. Acting as secretary-treasurer for the dance is Betty Hodnett.

the possibilities of using the instrument. A sun-projecting screen and sun glass provide for viewing the sun and sunspots. An erecting prism system for terrestrial viewing returns the inverted image of the celestial telescope to the normal upright position.

To many of the Longwood students this telescope has given a first close look at the planets and stars. One enthusiastis freshman remarked that it was worth coming to college just to see that glorious crescent moon through our telescope. While enthusiasm and interest in "taking a look" through this telescope has been very great, Miss Elizabeth Burber, science professor, Burger suggests that even greater enjoyment and satisfaction is ahead as the students learn to manipulate this fine instrument and to explore the heavens for themselves.

ANDREWS SAYS

"The States' Rights group didn't organize to get votes from anybody. They organized to get votes for themselves, and it doesn't make a particle of difference to us which of the old parties they come from," said T. Coleman Andrews in carrying his states' right-tax reform campaign for President to Norfolk.

IT'S DEMOCRAT

Bismarck, N. D. Oct. 27—(AP)—The dictionary says it's Democratic" party. But in North Dakota, a recently rediscovered 1947 state act amended the law designating political parties to make it the "Democrat" party.

Parties Clash As Campus Election Nears

States' Righters To Support 'Cause'

The States' Rights Party has been carrying on a vigorous campaign here at Longwood under the able leadership of Barbara Tyre Ward, chairman.

An impressive campaign speech was given in assembly the day after the States Rights Party was born in Richmond, Virginia. Since then, pictures, posters, and stickers have adorned the whole school. The party was also represented in the recent Circus parade by a decorated car.

Since this party was "born" only a couple of weeks ago, the organization has just started and the campaign has not had time to spread throughout the nation. In fact, Andrews will not be on the ballots of many states. He will be on the Virginia ballot, however; and he will probably get most of his support from Virginia since Richmond and Prince Edward County are the strongholds of the States Rights Party.

The States Rights Party is really more a cause than a party. Because the party has just been organized and is not nearly as strong as the two major parties, it realizes that Andrews has a lesser chance of winning the Presidency.

This is not even its purpose. Its aim in encouraging the public to vote for Andrews is to influence the party that wins the election. The more people who vote for Andrews, the more influence his platform will have on the candidate who becomes the next President.

"We Stand for a Cause!"

The people in this party are not thinking of themselves. They are fighting for this cause because they believe in it.

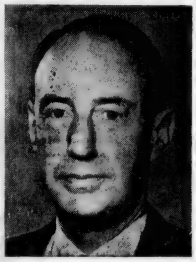
The Democrats and Republicans waited until late to hold their conventions in order to keep new parties, such as the States Rights, from springing up because they knew that many people were dissatisfied with the government and the fact that it holds so much power.

The Democrat and Republican parties should not consider this a mere incident in history but should take note of the effect this cause is having on them as parties and will continue to have. This is not a spur of the moment party. It will not end on November 6. It is building and growing every day and will keep on fighting for what it believes until something is done to remedy the flaws in the government.

Democrats Report Strong Campaign

The Democratic campaign is well under way, reports Nancy Quarles, campaign manager for the Democrat Party. Supporters of the Democrat ticket have been busy preparing for the 1956 Mock Election at Longwood.

The Democrat Campaign was given a vigorous kick-off by the political speech given by Eleanor Stradley, during Assembly on Tuesday, October 16. The speaker was avidly applauded by students who carried posters and pictures of Adlai Stevenson and Estes Kefauver.



Methods of advertising Democratic candidates have been received from the Richmond and Roanoke Headquarters. Five hundred campaign buttons are being distributed and worn by Democratic supporters.

Posters and pictures of the "best candidate on this year's ticket" may be seen in various places around the campus. Stickers for bumpers, doors, and so forth have been distributed about. Leaflets about the party's platform have been sent from party headquarters to be passed out among students.

Besides putting up posters and passing out leaflets and Adlai buttons, Democrat campaign workers have talked to various people concerning the coming election next month.

In the Circus parade last Saturday, the Democrat Party was appropriately represented. An automobile was colorfully decorated, and various campaign slogans were put on the car.

Nancy recently talked with a student from the Norfolk Division of the College of William and Mary concerning their recent mock election. It was found that in their campaign and election, Stevenson and Kefauver were strongly supported by the Student Body.

"Our Test is Time!"

The State Democrat Committee has offered a great deal of assistance in the Democratic campaign at Longwood, for which everyone is very appreciative. The State Democrat Committee is very interested in the outcome of our election; as they feel that it will show a trend of the young people in Virginia.

Above all else, the student body is encouraged to come out and vote on election day.

GOP Given Lead By Youth Voters

Due to the absence of Anita Heflin, Jackie Harnsberger was found wearing an Ike pin and knee-deep in posters serving as Longwood's Republican campaign manager. Jackie, a junior, is a Home Economics major from Luray, Virginia.

The Republican campaign has consisted of posters, pictures, buttons, and stickers obtained from National Republican Headquarters, State Headquarters, and several counties. Posters have been placed over the campus, and the smiling face of Ike can be seen everywhere. These range in size from small to more than lifesize.

The Ike buttons are being worn by a large number of students. The buttons are also found in a great variety of sizes. Many of the students for Eisenhower have placed stickers on their doors which illustrate the idea that there will be peace and prosperity with Eisenhower.

One of the highlights of the parade Saturday was the convertible trimmed in red, white, and blue in which our personal images of Ike, Dick, and Mamie rode.

There was a large poster depicting the idea that both green and white and red and white classes were in favor of Ike.

In the campaign assembly given by the government classes, there was a large ovation given for Ike as Margie Algood and Pat Burdette gave some of the background for the campaign and Ike's chances for winning this November.

One of the reasons that Eisenhower has made such an excellent showing on the Longwood campus is that he is vitally interested in the youth of today. Already he has won in the elections at Randolph-Macon, the University of Virginia, and Norfolk Division of William and Mary. The National Headquarters is holding an interest in the outcome of our mock election and will be waiting for the results.

The girls signing up to help on the campaign have been very helpful in making the campaign such a success. Their efforts have been greatly appreciated.

Jackie's final comment is, "I hope that all Longwood girls who are eligible to vote in our national election this November will not only exercise their right to do so, but will take an active part. I am interested to see if our election will indicate the trend of the nation."

"We Represent Prosperity!"

Agee Studio

STANDING by their candidates "all the way" are Jackie Harnsberger, Barbara Ward, and Nancy Quarles. Jo Davis, mock election chairman, sees that all three campaigns run smoothly.

Campaign Managers Enlist Party Supporters

For ten months now Americans have been observing our biggest and most expensive "show", a presidential campaign. The national conventions in August and the hectic campaign this fall have helped to build up an intensity of interest in politics which is unequalled to any other time.

How should we observe a national election so that it means something in terms of the realities of the American process of government? The election system can mean something only if looked upon as one of a number of processes through which representative government is made to work. Elections permit us to have some say as to which leaders and what political party shall be given governing power.

It is our privilege to take part in and learn from this election campaign. The Presidential Mock Election of Longwood College will be held Thursday, November 1. The polls will be opened from 12:30 to 5:00 p.m. and the returns will be announced at dinner.

The voting precincts will be in the same place that the register tables were located. There will be a list of Registered Voters at each clerk's desk. Only registered voters will be allowed to vote. The polls will be set up like authentic polls with partitions so that the voter may vote in secrecy.

The Head Clerks for each precinct are: Senior, Margaret Beavers; Junior, Sue Taylor; Sophomore, Barbara Odom; and Freshman, Ann Norfleet.

Students representing the three parties (Democrat, Republican, and States Rights) will be at the polls to answer questions the voter might have concerning party policy and platform.

The ballots that will be used are sample ballots donated by different precincts in the state. In order for the ballot to be valid an X must indicate which elector you have chosen. If any other mark is used the vote will not be counted.

"I urge members of the Student Body to vote for their favorite candidate," says Mock Election Chairman Jo Davis.

State Constitution Changes Important In 1956 Election

Next week, when Virginians vote, they will receive three separate ballots—one for the presidential election, a second for the various congressional contests, and a formidable long third ballot. This last one is the three separate proposals for amending our State Constitution.

All three proposals seem to be necessary improvements on present conditions.

The first amendment is concerned with the abolishment of various free services allowed to members of the State Corporation Commission. In the past, they have been provided with free transportation and telephone service. However, as of late, the S. C. C. has begun to stop accepting these services, making the question merely a point of fact. Since this proposal can be voted on now, if is a good idea to make this law final.

The most important change is in the second proposal which concerns the personal property tax. According to Section 169 of the State Constitution, every county and city in Virginia collect, this tax. Next month this tax must be paid on personal belongings such as furniture, jewelry, automobiles, refrigerators, television sets and similar objects. Only one change would be made in this proposed constitutional amendment. The following words would be added to Section 169:

"The General Assembly may define as a separate subject of taxation household goods and personal effects and may allow the governing bodies of counties, cities, and towns to exempt or partially exempt such property from taxation."

There are two very important things to understand about this amendment. It does not repeal the personal property tax. It does give the General Assembly authority to give local governing bodies the power to abandon the tax or levy it only on certain classes of property.

For years, tax reformers have urged the abolishment of this tax in favor of a better one. But to abolish this tax before another one could be fixed in its place would be a near-calamity in several ways. Counties in the whole state on the average get nearly 17 per cent of their local revenue from this tax now. The tax equals nearly one-third of local revenues in some counties.

That is the reason this amendment is only permissive; it only permits the Assembly to allow local governments to abandon the tax. No changes will be made until both these bodies act. If this amendment, as approved, Virginians may see important tax changes within the next few years.

The third and last of these amendments to the State Constitution is not too important except in the sense that it could become so. It is concerned with the governor's term and so far has not been needed. It proposes that a governor's term shall begin "on the Saturday after the second Wednesday in the January succeeding his election, "but shall not end in the fourth year thereafter" until a moment "immediately after the inauguration of his successor."

This would eliminate any problems arising in case an incoming governor died before his inauguration. For as the law now stands with the out-going governor officially leaving his position "on the Tuesday after the second Wednesday in January in the fourth year" there is the possibility of Virginia not having an executive at all for a time.

The Case for the Republicans

Tomorrow the students of Longwood College will cast their votes for their choice of President of the United States of America. Will they elect the candidate best qualified to guide our country? If so, they will elect Dwight D. Eisenhower, who during the last four years has led the country into a period of peace accompanied by prosperity.

According to minority leader, Joe Martin, "the real issues of this campaign are the record of the Eisenhower Administration and the promise that record indicates for the next four years."

Then, what is the record of the Republican Party since 1952? The Eisenhower Administration has brought peace to our country and our boys home from Korea. For the first time in many years the federal budget has been balanced, and a 1.7 billion dollar surplus was applied to the national debt this year.

Not only is this fact significant in itself, but at the same time there has been a ten per cent tax cut. This administration will be remembered as the one which restored the soundness of the American dollar.

The Democrats place much emphasis on their claim of being the friend of the little man, and they accuse the Republicans of neglecting the lower income groups. Is this criticism justified? Employment has reached its highest peak in the nation's history; wages at an all time high. Millions have benefited from social security adjustments and the era of labor peace; the American farmers will soon reap the rewards of the Republican's long term farm program.

The office of vice-president has become an important part of the present administration. President Eisenhower has called Richard Nixon, "the most useful vice-president in American history."

What is the main issue of the campaign? It is this: Can the Democrats oust the administration which has laid the floor plan for many years of peace and prosperity? The best case for the Republican Party is the case of America from 1952-56.

Jackie Harnsberger

The Case for the Democrats

The Democrat Party has long been and is today, the party for the people. Founded over 150 years ago by Thomas Jefferson, it stands for equality and justice for all Americans and favors no particular race or class.

Throughout the years the Democrat party has had the interests of the average citizen, the farmer, the laborer, the white collar worker, in mind and has diligently worked to improve the living standard of the United States.

Evidences of this policy are the Wagner Act, Federal Aid to Public Housing Programs, the Social Security Act, and Parity for Farmers. T. V. A. is a direct result of the concern of the Democrat Party for the citizen as was the plan for Rural Electrification which was urged so strongly by Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Today we are living in an era of prosperity and progress, however it is also an era of crisis. The laborers are crying out for better salaries to meet the ever rising cost of living. The farmer can scarcely exist on the income which is now his.

In many parts of our nation there are people without jobs, and above all else we see with horror a racial crisis of such momentum that we fear for the unity of our nation. These issues are critical, they demand attention. We, the citizens of the United States, must meet these problems, we must find a solution.

How are we to find an answer to the issues which face us? We are already on the way. In 1954 we, the citizens, elected a Democrat Congress, this was our first step in the way toward a secure future for our nation.

Now we find ourselves facing the election of the next President of the United States. Surely, after considering the record of this party, the platform that it supports, and the candidates which it offers, we as thinking citizens must vote for and elect, Adlai Stevenson, Estes Kefauver, and the Democrat Party.

Nancy Quarles

The Case for States' Rights

Third parties have long been an integral part of the American political scene. A new political party, the States' Rights Party, was officially born Monday, October 15, in Richmond, Virginia. It is aimed at putting more conservatism into the two major parties rather than at putting its 1956 presidential candidate into the White House.

For many years a substantial number of people throughout the United States have been in disagreement with the trends in both of the dominant national parties. These people have been drifting in loosely organized groups, but now they have a chance to combine their thoughts and principles under a leader.

For this leader, the States' Righters have chosen T. Coleman Andrews of Richmond, Virginia, and as his running mate, Thomas H. Werdel of California. In the presence of Mr. Andrews' name, many voters will find opportunity to express their grievances against the political parties that are moving toward centralization of governmental power.

The States' Rights party has announced their unity of purpose and general well-being of the people through a strong, impressive platform. Included in this platform is the belief that government power should be limited by the people and that all forms of centralized power, be they Socialist, Communist, Fascist or others, be denunciated.

It is the party's belief that the heart of American government is Local Self-Government, and it is the duty of the several states to protect this right. The party holds that constitutional principles should determine and control all practical measures.

The question of taxes has long been in the air. The States' Rights party believes that taxation should be for the sole purpose of securing revenue for the expense of a constitutionally limited government and the defense of the county.

They also believe that in Foreign Policy, the sovereignty of the United States and the rights of its citizens should never be subordinated through treaty, executive agreement, or alliance to the interests of any foreign nation or to any combination or association of nations.

The platform affirms that the National States' Rights movement is the first defense of American Constitutional principles and is unalterably and forever opposed to the major party merger which now confronts us.

From The Gridiron Bleachers

By ANNE KEZIAH

Victory Stadium in Roanoke, Virginia was the site of probably the most important State football game of this weekend. After an exciting and hard-fought game on a sloppy field, Virginia Tech came out victorious over the University of Virginia, 14-7.

Besides the game, the 18,000 fans enjoyed such added attractions as the marching of the V.P.I. Cadet Corps and the halftime performances of the University of Virginia band and the mighty "Highty-Tighties", Virginia Tech's regimental band.

Down in Davidson, North Carolina, V.M.I.'s determined Keydets pushed across a touchdown and extra point in the final two minutes of play to tie a fired up Davidson eleven, 13-13, in a tightly played Southern Conference battle.

West Virginia Tech came from behind three times to squeeze out a 21-20 victory over Washington and Lee University in Montgomery, West Virginia.

Hampden-Sydney also came out on top, defeating Sewanee 12-7. This was Hampden-Sydney's homecoming and the victory added its own special touch to the already planned festivities.

Johns Hopkins University scored twice in the last six minutes of the game to give the weather an assist in spoiling Randolph-Macon's homecoming as the Jays rolled to a 13-0 Mason Dixon Conference victory.

Emory and Henry was knocked out of the unbeaten ranks as they went down before the Lenoir Rhyne Bears, 25-6, in a game played in Hickory, North Carolina.

Bridgewater College came out in the winners bracket as they downed West Virginia Wesleyan, 25-6.

However, probably the most important game played anywhere this weekend, was in Champaign, Illinois, where Illinois pulled a fantastic homecoming upset, defeating the nation's No. 1 football team, Michigan State, by a score of 20-13. Going into the game as a 21-point underdog, this Illinois victory will go down as one of the greatest surprises ever pulled in the Big 10.

Geographic Group Publishes Bulletin; Society To Confer At Richmond VEA

The Geographic Section of the Virginia Education Association will meet Friday, November 2, in Richmond.

Meredith F. Burrill, from the Department of Interior since 1940, will discuss the subject, "Terminology of Virginia's Geographic Features."

"There is no such thing as a fixed vocabulary in a living language, and one need not be surprised at the variety of terms which have grown up in English for designating geographic features," says Charles F. Lane, president of the Virginia Geographical Society.

Dr. Lane, professor of geography at Longwood, has served as president of the Geographical Society for the past four years.

"The Bulletin", the October issue published by the Virginia Geographical Society, has recently been completed, according to Dr. Lane. Over 300 bulletins will be distributed to members of the society.

The current issue of "The Bulletin" features the historical geography of Virginia.

"It is hoped that the articles in this issue of 'The Bulletin' dealing with geographical influences in American history will offer suggestions and ideas for building other units of study for classroom use. If history is to be meaningful, the geographic elements must receive their due emphasis," writes Dr. Lane in the president's paragraphs introducing "The Bulletin."

"All historical problems ought to be studied geographically and all geographic problems must be studied historically," adds Dr. Lane.

The Virginia Geographic Society publishes two bulletins annually. When compared with bulletins published in other states, the Virginia bulletins stand out as being much more extensive, including colorful maps to clarify the articles.

The present issue features articles written by one present and four former Longwood students who have studied Virginia's geography.

The growth of Jamestown as influenced by geographical factors is discussed by Barbara Tyer Ward, of Richmond.

Another article, "Navigation on the Appomattox and Willis Rivers," was contributed by John M. Austin, a senior from Farmville.

The article, "Geographical Influences on Fredericksburg—Past and Present," is contributed by Dale Brothers, of Suffolk. Shirley Kemp, of Hampton, discusses the development of Hampton and Newport News.

Educators to Meet

Dr. Earl Boggs and Dr. W. Welkerson will represent Virginia at the meeting of the Southern Association of Secondary Schools and Colleges in Dallas, Texas, December 2-8.

Dr. Boggs is on the Committee of Teacher Education, and Dr. Welkerson is representing the State Department.

The main topics will be (1) a report discussion of research on the standards of teacher certification; (2) the nature of standards that should guide good programs in teacher education; and (3) the standards that guide the extension programs of institutions of higher education—graduate and undergraduate work.

Nancy Richardson, general chairman for the tournament, reports that 111 players have registered. In addition to players, there will be coaches, officials, and guests. Games will be played both here at the college and on a field erected at Longwood Estate.

The invitation committee, headed by Annie V. Weaver, is mailing invitations to all eligible teams and keeping them informed as to the developments regarding games, reservations, etc. Publicity for the tournament is being handled by Gayle Cunningham and her publicity committee; and the program which contains schedules, general instructions, and maps has been prepared by Elaine Weddle and the program committee.

When the representatives and guests begin to arrive, Nancy Striplin and her hostess committee will swing into action as will the information committee headed by Hazel Hanks. Teas have been planned for Friday and Saturday afternoon by Ann Miller and the social committee and a luncheon is scheduled for Saturday under the direction of Nancy Andrews and her committee. When the actual games begin, the game, field and official tables committee headed by Anne Wayne Fuller will be on the scene.

H-S Tops Sewanee With 12-7 Victory

Hampden-Sydney's football team slopped through the rain and mud for a 12-7 victory over Sewanee Saturday, to the satisfaction of a homecoming crowd of about 1,500 fans.

Coach Bob Thalman's Tigers, who now have won five times against two setbacks, scored both their touchdowns in the first quarter, then protected that advantage in a bitter defensive battle.

Quarterback Bobby Furr's 60-yard punt return, which placed the ball on the Sewanee 22, set up the initial Hampden-Sydney touchdown. Three plays afterward, halfback Tommy Bryant took a handoff over right tackle and romped 17 yards for the score.

A Sewanee fumble set the Tigers in motion for their second and last touchdown. Halfback Bill Kimbrough fumbled and lineman Henry Irby pounced on the ball for Hampden-Sydney on the Sewanee 10. A line crack lost a yard but on second down, fullback Wally Giglio barreled through the Sewanee defenses into the end zone.

A poor kick that slid off the side of Bill LeHew's foot and carried only to the Tiger 27 gave Sewanee the break that enabled the visitors to score in the second period. Fullback Tom Peebles, star of the Sewanee attack, romped to the three, and two plays later Walter Wilden plunged up the middle for the score, with Hardy Kimbrough converting.

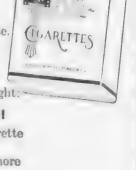
Hockey Team Ties Norfolk Division In Bout on Oct. 24

With the sounding of the starting whistle on Wednesday, October 24, the hockey game between the Norfolk Division of William and Mary and Longwood College moved into full swing. The game was swift moving and at the end of the half the score stood at 0-0. On several occasions the ball had crossed the goal line of both teams but the scores had been nullified by fouls or penalties.



The starting line-up of "Delo" Dove, Nancy Striplin, Nancy Richardson, Loretta Kuhn, Gayle Cunningham, Carolyn Obenshain, Anne Wayne Fuller, Lou Heier, Joann Sloop, Margaret Dowdy, and Carol Wolfe battled back in the second half against a strong Norfolk Division team. Despite scoring attempts by both teams, the final score was Norfolk Division 0, Longwood College 0.

The Longwood student body was behind their team all the way with songs and cheers.

IT'S FOR REAL! by Chester Field

THOUGHTS FOR TODAY $1.98
I met a man with a rather large head
Who looked at me and finally said:
"If ever you're caught
Without any thought
And you think that you ought
To be thinking a thought,
Buy one from me before it's too late.
Thoughts for today, only one-ninety-eight."
"A reasonable price," I said and bought
The following brainy, thoughtful thought:

FAINT PLEASURE AIN'T PLEASURE!
Take your pleasure big! Smoke the cigarette that gives you more of what you're smoking for . . . more real enjoyment, more real rich flavor . . . more smoking satisfaction. Smoke a Chesterfield and enjoy it to the hilt!
Smoke for real . . . smoke Chesterfield!

Traveling, Study Delights Professors Spending Varied Summer Vacations

By LINDA DOLES

What do they do in the summer—these busy, diligent, serious professors of ours at Longwood? Do they just throw away all worries and take a slow boat to China? Or migrate to a lone Pacific Isle? Or do they keep on teaching? Here is a brief view of the summer life of several of Longwood's faculty members:

Fishing

Fishing — Mr. R. ("Charlie Hop") French "took off and had a wonderful vacation on the Potomac River. Caught 'em too." He explains that the reason fish markets hit a new low this past summer is because he caught too many—"little ones, big ones, queer ones, dainty ones. So help me." We believe you, Charlie Hop! Mr. French also visited in Baltimore and Winston-Salem.

Traveling

Traveling—Mr. Walter E. Urben of the music department began his interesting summer by presenting a Sonata Recital at the summer session of the University of Illinois (located in Urbana, Ill.). During July he and his wife showed their small son some of America's wonders in scenery on a trip to his home-state, California, via Mt. Rushmore, the Bad Lands, Yellowstone National Park, Craters of the Moon, Oregon Caves.

Other interesting trips were taken by those professors who studied at other schools part of the summer: Miss Emily Barksdale, Spanish teacher, spent a "delightful vacation" in Mexico City. She attended courses at National University which dates back to 1551 (you thought Longwood was old?) and is now in beautiful new buildings at the edge of the city. Miss Barksdale also visited with several old friends including Miki Duarte, our 1955-56 Spanish informant.

Mrs. Mildred Davis, from the English department, traveled to Vermont and attended the noted Bread Loaf School of English. For language graduates, this is one of the several special summer schools of Middlebury College. Mrs. Davis' comment: "Found both the physical and intellectual climate most stimulating. I recommend Bread Loaf to all of our Seniors."

Green Mountain Falls, Colorado, which even sounds cool and inviting, was the spot where Miss Annie Ross of the art department spent her summer. Staying at her summer home there, she went to classes at the Colorado Springs Fine Arts Center and painted in the inspiring western mountains.

Biology professor Dr. R. Brumfield journeyed to Tennessee, spending all summer at Oak Ridge. There he continued research work with the A. E. C. under contract to Longwood.

Relaxing in Farmville and studying at home proved inviting to some faculty members too. Dr. C. Moss was kept busy here working on a new graduate course.

Summer School

Then there are those teachers who stayed at home but didn't relax—they taught at Longwood's summer session:

Baby - sitting and gardening partly filled Mr. Christy Snead's summer when he wasn't teaching business classes at Longwood. He stayed busy around his home growing vegetables and berries, painting his garage, and having his granddaughter, Christy Ann, spend some time with him and his wife. He also took a trip through Ohio and West Virginia.

Gardening also occupied Mr. J. Wynne's free time between his schedule at Longwood's education department. In August, he and his wife went to Wyoming to attend a special executive school and while there met with various committees about teacher problems.

Dean Earl Boggs directed our summer session and besides his many duties in that respect, he also attended numerous educational and pre - school conferences around the state.

Miss Ethel Sutherland relaxed after teaching math classes by spending the rest of the summer in New York. She also took a brief motor tour of southern Canada.

First taking a special textile course at the University of Tennessee, Miss Lora Bernard returned to Longwood to teach home economic classes for the summer.

Dr. J. Molnar was kept busy between his music classes during the summer by moving to a new home in Farmville and writing several articles for musical magazines. One of these will appear in the November issue of Educational Music Magazine.

Dr. and Mrs. Schlegel "decided to try a new place and a different role" and instead of traveling, taught history and English classes at Longwood. Having tickets to "My Fair Lady" they took a brief trip to New York only to have the show called off that night. Mrs. Schlegel worked on her book, Shaftsbury and the French Deists, which is to be published this fall.

On a whole, the summer vacation was appreciated by the faculty members as much as by the students.

Seminar Students Hear Debate Team

On Friday, October 19, Mr. James M. Helms and seven members of his History Seminar 449 class attended a History Seminar sponsored by the Department of Speech and Drama at the University of Virginia. The main subject of the Seminar was "Foreign Aid."

This was the first time in five years that the Seminar had been held, and there was a great deal of interest shown. The Seminar lasted for one day, and was divided into three sessions. The first session was for organizing purposes, the second was for the forming of committees, and the third for considering and evaluating the conclusions drawn.

This seminar was an activity to unite history majors as a group, sharing similar interests and ideas.

Those students who attended the Seminar are: Suzanne Bunting, Mary Jo Davis, Winifred Biddlecombs, Sarah Pevehouse, Charlotte Phillips, Jackie Pond, and Betty McAden.

"Washtub Farce" To Be Shown Tues.

On Tuesday, November 6, the French 221 class will present "La Farce du Cuvier," or "The Washtub Farce" at the regular meeting of Le Cercle Francais. The performance will be directed by Mlle. Genevieve Laloux, the French informant.

"La Farce du Cuvier" is a comedy which takes place one laundry day, very early in the morning. The hero, Jacquinot, is a henpecked husband, who is forced by his domineering wife and mother-in-law to do all the housework.

When Jacquinot timidly rebels against this tyranny the wife threatens to beat him with her mother's cane, declaring that it is all for his own good. However, in the hilarious scene which ends the play, the wife finally promises to obey her husband and domestic tranquility is restored.

Although the comedy will be presented in French, it will be read and explained in English before the performance. Those students who are not regular members of the French Club are cordially invited to attend the meeting, which will be held in the Small Auditorium at 4 p.m.

THE PRIZE-WINNING FLOAT in Saturday's parade was the Freshman Class entry, a ship called the "Misery Lou."

The "high and mighty" Sophomore Class of 1959 was the winner of the 1956-57 Circus held in Jarman Auditorium, Saturday, October 27, at 8:00 p. m. The Freshman Class won second place.

The winning skit told the story of two puppets in love, Pat Leake and Mary Miller, but the showman, Wayne Boyden, would never dress them on the same social or economic level, and so they couldn't marry.

Donna Boone and Lynne Higginbotham were Sophomore co-chairmen and were assisted by: Jane Moore, who wrote all of the music; Minnie Lee Dean, and Jo Ann Witten, dance; Betty Jean Taylor, Chorus; Liz Nichols, costumes; and Barbara Callicoat, props.

The winning skit was judged on originality, and enthusiasm.

Freshman Co-Chairmen

Freshmen co-chairmen were Mary Beth Baldwin and Carolyn DeHaven. The theme of the freshman skit was "Showboat" with Betty Bowling as the captain of the "Misery Lou." Dixie Hilliard was the mother of the family from the north; Karen Potts was the mother of the southern family. Addie Richardson was a proper northern boy, and Mary Ann Walker was a sweet southern belle.

Cle Koons and June Strother were the junior co-chairmen. The skit was about gaiety and festivity taking place while the father, Tee Pee Waugaman, was troubled because he knew his daughter was going to meet her fate. The daughter, Ann Jeter, knew nothing of this curse. The young people's festivity was interrupted by the volcano, out of which exploded Fate or Death, Jeanne Vestal who claimed its prize.

The senior skit was directed by Sara Lou Wendenburg and Carolyn Clark. The skit was about a fellow, Carolyn Clark, who was engaged to marry a fat girl, Carol Carson. She is advised to reduce, (by Jo Davis) and Patti Parker directs some reducing exercises.

Barnum and Ringling

This year's Circus was opened by Mr. Barnum and Mr. Ringling (Nancy Striplin and Nancy Lenz), who were followed by an acrobatic demonstration by the clowns. Animal trainer, Weedie Norman, a sophomore from Richmond, then put her animals through their stunts.

Ringmaster

Ringmaster, Frances Patton, a junior from Roanoke, was master-of-ceremonies for the program. She had the honor of introducing the class representatives. All four girls were dressed in irridescent fall colors: senior in white, junior in gold, sophomore in purple, and freshman in green.

Class Representatives

Freshman representative was Jean Peyton from Snell, Virginia. Class float chairman, she was on her high school May Court last spring and is this year's Homecoming Queen.

Sophomore representative was Lynne Higginbotham from Charleston, South Carolina. Co-chairman of Circus, she was active in last year's Circus and Freshman production.

Junior representative was Cle Koons, also a Circus co-chairman. Cle is from Richmond, and she was in the fall play last year, "Ring Round the Moon." She was on May Court last Spring.

The senior representative and Circus Queen was Sara Lou Wendenburg, from Richmond also. Sara Lou was Ringmaster last year and is president of House Council.

Although it rained Saturday, the weather cleared up enough for Longwood to have its annual Circus Parade. The parade was a caravan of the four class floats, cars, the political cars of the three parties, clowns and students.

The freshman float won first prize. It was the "Misery Lou," their "Showboat," and it was ingeniously made from chicken wire, napkins, crepe paper; dry ice in the smoke stack made the smoke.

The sophomore float was an old English traveling puppet show called "Bunch and Rudy." The show wagon was pulled by "little boys and girls" from the sophomore class.

The junior float was the fatal volcano with the cursed girl being struck by lightning. The senior float was a pink gondola.

Col. Francis Pickens Miller, prominent Virginia politician and churchman, will address a meeting of college students at the Farmville Methodist Church, Sunday, November 11 at 7:00 p. m. The joint meeting of the four student fellowships is the opening session of Hampden-Sydney College's Fall Religious Emphasis Week to be held on the campus the week of November 11-16.

Those student groups composed of members from Longwood and Hampden-Sydney which are participating in the meeting are the Westminster Fellowship, the Baptist Student Union, the Canterbury Club, and the Wesley Foundation.

COL. FRANCIS P. MILLER

W and L Graduate

Col. Miller is a graduate of Washington and Lee University. He received a B.A. and M.A. from Oxford University, England, where he attended as a Rhodes Scholar. He is a member of the Phi Gamma Delta social fraternity, Phi Beta Kappa, and Omicron Delta Kappa.

Col. Miller is well versed on world affairs, both military and political. During World War I he served in the 5th Field Artillery. He was overseas for nearly three years during World War II, being promoted to a full colonelcy on General Eisenhower's staff and receiving various awards. He was formerly a member of the Board of the United States Military Academy at West Point.

His experience in the field of politics results from his representing Fairfax County in the Virginia House of Delegates and his running against Harry F. Byrd for United States Senator in 1952.

Active Presbyterian

Also Col. Miller is an active layman in the Presbyterian Church. For ten years he was chairman of the World Student Christian Federation. More recently he has served as commissioner to the General Assembly of the Southern Presbyterian Church, Moderator of the Synod of Virginia, and member of the Central Committee of the World Council of Churches.

Hampden-Sydney's annual Fall REW program will be centered around the theme "Measured for Maturity." Besides Col. Miller, Drs. B. Frank Hall, W. Taliaferro Thompson, and Roe Blume will lead the series.

Dr. Hall Moderator

Dr. Hall, who was on campus last year with the University Christian Mission, is pastor of Pearshall Presbyterian Church, Wilmington, North Carolina. Dr. Thompson is the moderator of the General Assembly in the Presbyterian Church, U. S., and professor of Christian Education at Union Seminary. Dr. Blume is an organ research supervisor with E. I. duPont.

Convocations in Johns Auditorium at Hampden-Sydney will be held at 10 o'clock each morning during the week, and seminars conducted by the different speakers will be held in the evenings. The week will conclude with a Communion service in College Church Thursday evening.

As Longwood Goes, So Goes the Nation

True to prediction, President Dwight D. Eisenhower and Vice-President Richard Nixon will remain in office for four more years. In a landslide victory yesterday, the Republican candidates captured a total of 450 electoral votes to defeat the 76 electoral votes of Adlai E. Stevenson and Estes Kefauver. Two hundred and sixty-six electoral votes are needed for an election.

The State of Virginia followed the majority of the nation and several of the "solid South" in giving its twelve electoral votes to President Eisenhower and Vice-President Nixon. This election proved among other things that the "solid South" is not solid anymore. For the second time in its history Louisiana will cast its electoral vote for a Republican.

Among the Southern states which continued their tradition as Democrat mainstays were Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Mississippi, South Carolina, and North Carolina. Virginia, Tennessee, Texas, Kentucky, and Florida cast Republican votes.

From the time that the first state, Connecticut, showed a clear majority for the Republican candidates until Mr. Stevenson appeared in Chicago to concede the election to President, there could be little doubt of a Republican victory. Significant among Republican victories are Tennessee, the home state of Estes Kefauver, and Illinois, the home state of Mr. Stevenson.

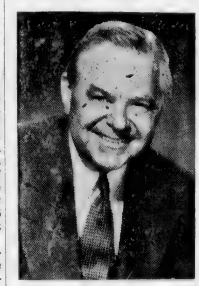
A dramatic moment was just before 1:30 a. m. as Adlai Stevenson walked the one block to Democrat Headquarters in Chicago to concede the election to President Eisenhower. He made the following statement,

"You have won not only election but also the great confidence of the American people. I send to you my warm congratulations." The concession came four years and one day after Mr. Stevenson's loss of 1952. The victory statement from President Eisenhower followed from Washington, D. C.

States' Rights candidate T. Coleman Andrews carried Farmville and Prince Edward County, Virginia.

Longwood Election

Dwight D. Eisenhower scored an overwhelming victory in the mock election held at Longwood last Thursday. Only 611 students voted in the election, which was far from 100 per cent participation. Although there was not full participation in the election, the school was full of enthusiasm and pep during the campaign. The Republican Party received 400 of the 611 votes; 145 went to the Democrats; and 66 went for States Rights.



The freshmen had the lowest percentage of students voting, while the seniors showed the greatest interest in the election.

Jo Davis, chairman for the mock election, thanks everyone who took part in the election and went out to vote.

GENE LOCKHART

Gene Lockhart, well-known star of television, stage, and screen, will appear in Jarman Auditorium, November 27.

The second presentation in this season's Artist Series will be a program of living literature ranging from Shakespeare to Stephen Vincent Benet, including drama, comedy-drama, fantasy, light comedy, satires, and musical sketches.

Two selections from the works of Shakespeare, two from Benet, excerpts from the Lincoln-Douglas debates, and selections from the short stories of de Maupassant, Bret Harte, Edgar A. Poe, and Nathaniel Hawthorne will be presented in a program. Other features will include excerpts from Ibsen's "Peer Gynt," O'Neil's "Ah, Wilderness," Dicken's "Mr. Pickwick," Paul Osborn's "On Borrowed Time," George M. Club To Present French Film Nov. 8

"Les Visiteurs du Soir," a film of love and adventure spurred on by the devil, will be shown in Jarman Hall, November 9, at 8 o'clock.

As an old French legend has it, in 1485 the devil sent two envoys upon the earth to corrupt the human race. In this medieval allegory Satan's envoys are a minstrel couple who descend upon a baronial castle just in time for a prenuptial feast.

Soon the girl envoy has succeeded in seducing both the bridegroom and the father-in-law, while her male counterpart wins the love of the bride-to-be. As Satan steps in these events build up to an overpowering emotional climax and the moral is disclosed.

Noted Cast

The cast is composed of some of the truly great modern French actors and actresses. Marie Dea as the bride, Alain Cuny and Arletty as the devil's envoys, Ledoux as the baron, Jules Berry as the devil, and Marcel Herrain as the bridegroom give superb performances.

The lavish costumes and sets reproduce a medieval background, re-

Professors Active In VEA Meetings

The Virginia Education Association held its Golden Anniversary Convention in Richmond, Virginia, October 29 to November 2, with several Longwood faculty members taking an active part in the proceedings.

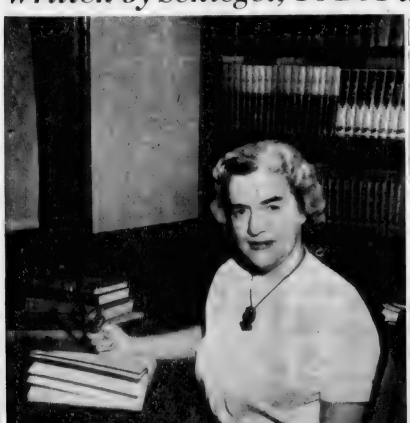
Dr. Charles F. Lane, President of the Virginia Geographical Society, presided over the meeting of the geography section. Dr. R. C. Simonini, Jr., who served as the Program Chairman for the Virginia Association of Teachers of English for this year, was elected president of the group for the coming year.

A talk on the publication of the Virginia Association of Teachers of English Bulletin was given by Mr. F. B. Gresham, who publishes the Bulletin from the Longwood campus. Miss Virginia Bedford served as Chairman of College Teachers in the art section.

Author Speaks

Highlights of the convention included a talk by Billie Davis, author of "I Was A Hobo Kid," who spoke on her school experiences as a migrant child. On Friday evening, Dr. Theodore F. Adams, President, Baptist World Alliance, delivered a challenging message on "Teachers for Such a Time as This."

Miss Virginia E. Lewis, President of the Virginia Education Association, presided over the convention, which elected Mr. Harold Bell, superintendent of Harrisonburg City Schools, as its next president.



Longwood Delegates

Delegates to the convention from Longwood included Dr. F. G. Lankford, Jr., Mr. C. H. Patterson, Mrs. M. L. Landrum, and Miss Elizabeth Burger. Other faculty members attending sessions of the convention were professors Lemen, Davis, Taplin, Schlegel, Nichols, Barksdale, Sutherland, Wiley, Urben, Dunbar, McCombs, Badger, Boggs, Johnson, Myers, Meeker, and Landrum.

Mrs. M. W. Watkins also attended.

Book, Shaftesbury and the French Deists, Written by Schlegel; To Be Published Soon

By H.V. LANCASTER, JR.

(Agee Studio, Farmville, Va.)

MRS. DOROTHY SCHLEGEL, English professor and author, is awaiting publication of her recent book.

Mrs. Dorothy B. Schlegel, assistant professor of English at Longwood is the author of a new book, Shaftesbury and the French Deists, to be published this fall by the University of North Carolina press. The book was scheduled to appear in mid-October, but there has been a slight delay at the binders.

Shaftesbury and the French Deists, is one of a series, "Studies in Comparative Literature," edited by Dr Werner P. Friederich and published by the University of North Carolina Press. The third book in this series, Italian Scholarship in Renaissance England was written by Dr. R. C Simonini, Jr., head of the Longwood English department.

160 Pages

The 160 page book, based upon Mrs. Schlegel's doctoral dissertation, will retail for $4.75 in this country. Foreign sales will be handled by the Librarie Droz in Geneva.

The result of two years of intensive research, Shaftesbury and the French Deists, traces the influence of Anthony Ashley Cooper, third Earl of Shaftesbury, upon four major French thinkers: Voltaire, Diderot, D'Holbach, and Rosseau. Shaftesbury, an English writer and philosopher, believed in the goodness of this world, as opposed to the common Christian belief that this world was predominately evil.

Sinnott Speaks About Achieving Goals And Relationship Between Life, Mind

"Despite our concern with practical problems, we're still interested in the fundamentals," Dr. Edmund Ware Sinnott, dean of the Yale University graduate school, told Longwood College students at their first fall convocation Tuesday.

"We want to know more about the nature of man, his duties, his destiny and his significance in the scheme of things," the noted botanist and educator said.

The Harvard graduate turned Yale professor called on biologists to cooperate with psychologists and philosophers to determine the nature of the species of man.

Once man was regarded as a separate universe. Dr. Sinnott related, but modern biology challenged this conception. Today there are two considered attitudes towards the nature of life.

Vitalist's Belief

"The vitalists think that there is something in living things," Dr. Sinnot explained, "and regard man as a separate universe. Mechanists tend to regard man as a physical and chemical machine, governed by the same laws of physics and chemistry as any machine."

"Actually," Dr. Sinnott said "an organism is composed of a number of integrated parts, each with its place. Something knits that mass into a system.

"We must bring body and mind under the same tent of goal-seeking and self-regulation, for self-regulation determines the achievement of the goal."

Life Has Meaning

"Life is meaningless without freedom and moral values," the author of two college textbooks said, as he traced the relationship between life and mind, noting the unity of matter and energy in the universe.

"Life and mind are but two aspects of the nature of species to which we all belong," he finished.

Tuesday morning Dr. Sinnott spoke at Hampden-Sydney College. Both of his appearances here were under the auspices of the Richmond Area University Center.

A particularly interested member of the platform party was Dr. Robert T. Brumfield, professor of biology at Longwood who had Dr. Sinnott as his major professor at Yale. Other special guests were the presidents of Madison, Mary Washington and Radford Colleges.

Election Elegy

Letter to Editor

At some time or another, editorials are always being written in order to toss an orchid or two in the direction of some deserving group or person who has done an outstanding job of contributing to an extra-curricular occasion. The importance of these traditional occasions is intensified by congratulatory telegrams, sings in the Rotunda, and bushels of lovely flowers from appreciating friends.

However, once in a while an entirely new and different type of job comes along. This job is also extra-curricular, the responsibility just as demanding, and the midnight oil burns just as long while the hundreds of small details are mapped out.

To exemplify this new type of job we must turn our thoughts back a week or so to Longwood's very successful mock election. The purpose of this election was to focus the attention of the student body on our national election. The results showed that more than a little thought and planning had gone on behind the scenes of the various campaigning groups.

Yes, we'll support the song contests, Circus and inner-class games until we run out of breath and ideas. However, these other extra-curricular activities that only come up ever-so-often also need a lot of support and work. So it is here that we present to the people like Jo Davis, Jackie Harnsbergr, Barbara Ward, and Nancy Quarles our salute in print and sincere thanks.

Student Government

Midst wintry rains and an atmosphere of haze, students and faculty members gathered last Tuesday in Jarman Hall for the fall convocation.

To most of the students this activity was new since Longwood has not had similar convocations in many years. In keeping with convocations at other colleges, the purpose was to bring to our campus a noted speaker who would give intellectual inspiration to our college.

Since our number of convocations seems to be limited, it appears to be a matter of great importance that much concern should be given in choosing a speaker. Our student body consists primarily of future teachers. A suitable speaker would be the one who would give a lecture which would concern the average teacher.

When giving opinions of our convocation, many of the students said they were impressed by colorful academic procession and felt indeed fortunate to hear the noted biologist, Dr. Edmund Sinnott, dean of the many students expressed their opinion that Yale University Graduate school.

The students appreciate the concern shown for the college by having this convocation. Educators will continue to be among the most welcomed guests on our campus.

Teaching Tales

Editor's Note: Jackie Marshall, a 1955 graduate, was Managing Editor of the Rotunda last year. She frequently wrote features for the paper and has sent us a letter about "school" and her visit to Longwood on Circus weekend.

'Tis Hallowe'en night in this, the capitol of the old Dominion and all day I've been misinforming my little third grade darlings as to where I, as a student now become "teach," live.

For two hours, I've either trembled in anticipation as multitudes of shrieking, costumed creatures dashed by my window or I've dashed shrieking to Georgia (Jackson) and Helen (Warriner) (my friends and yours) as the same costumed creatures approached our door. Now, after filling the sweaty little palms of a young gent from Mars, a bearded lady, Captain Kidd, a chubby skeleton and the very devil himself with hot chewing gum and rubber chocolates, I have succumbed to the peace of a black autumn night studded by a few beaming jack-o-lanterns in the windows across the street.

Lesson plans, an unbalanced budget, a run in my last pair of nylons, and giddy sense of power in my right to vote obsess my now feeble mind—which is already quite weary from a period of duty known quite familiarly to all teachers as "bus duty." In this obligatory service today, I broke up two fights, retied 14 dress sashes, untied three knots in a jump rope, blew six noses, and fell in a mud puddle yelling for tardy passengers for the last bus.

But—I'm still full of October 27 at Longwood College. I just gotta tell you-all that circus was really great. Indeed—it was thoroughly enjoyed by all us working class people. Fact is, we're still chatting about the whole deal way on into the wee hours of the night—9 or 10 o'clock (working-class hours). The only time I didn't feel right at home was when I got sleepy and "turned in" on the kitchen floor in senior—and then I knew I was—an alumnae.

Everything else was the same, though. Same contagious spirit, same clothes, same gripes, same Alfrieda, same Jean D'Arc, same old Chi (but just on Circus Weekends).

All in all—'twas truly terrific. Each and every detatil in Circus was typically commendable to Longwood. Thanks for it all.

By the way—I was so inspired that next week, my third grade will produce "'Mary Had a Little Lamb Named Rube." Music will be by hum-a-zoo, dances by little Martha Misatys and ad-libs will be uttered by Johnny because he still can't read.

Time:—Recess

Place:—Playground — Bellwood Elementary School.

Price:—10c worth of bubble gum.

Sincerely,

Jackie Marshall

Intriguing Recipe Discloses Method To Cook a Husband

Arlene Francis recently enlivened her television program, "Home," when she told viewers "How to Cook a Husband," from an intriguing recipe she found in an 1810 cookbook. The recipe follows:

"A good many husbands are utterly spoiled by mismanagement in cooking and so are not tender and good. Some women keep them constantly in hot water; others waste them shamefully. It cannot be supposed that any husband will be tender and good when so managed, but they are really delicious when prepared properly . . .

"In selecting a husband, you should not be guided by the silvery appearance as in buying a mackerel; nor by the golden tint as if you wanted salmon. Do not go to the market for him as the best ones are brought to the door. Be sure to select him for yourself as tastes differ.

"It is far better to have none unless you will patiently learn how to cook him. Of course, a preserving kettle of the finest porcelain is best, but if you have nothing better than an earthenware pipkin, it will do—with care. Like crabs and lobsters, husbands are cooked alive.

"They sometimes fly out of the kettle and so become burned and crusty on the edges, so it is wise to secure him in the kettle with a strong silken cord called Comfort, as the one called Duty is apt to be weak.

"Make a clear, steady flame of love, warmth and cheerfulness. Set him as near this as seems to agree with him. If he sputters, do not be anxious, for some husbands do this until they are quite done.

Add a little sugar in the form of what confectioners call kisses, but use no pepper or vinegar on any account. Season to taste with spices, good humor and gaiety preferred, but seasoning must always be used with great discretion and caution.

"Avoid sharpness in testing him for tenderness. Stir him gently lest he lies too flat and close to the kettle and so become useless. You cannot fail to know when he's done.

"If so treated you will find him very digestible, agreeing with you perfectly and will keep as long as you choose unless you become careless and allow the home fires to grow cold. Thus prepared, he will serve a lifetime of Happiness."

From The Gridiron Bleachers

By ANNE KEZIAH

Hepped-up Virginia Military Institute wrote another bitter chapter to William and Mary's football story in a Big Six Virginia Conference game, played Saturday in Lynchburg. Beneath brooding skies and in intermittent rain, the Keydets stormed to an easy 20-6 victory over the Indians, who went into the game as a one touchdown favorite.

Down in Clemson, South Carolina, the state's big team, Virginia Tech, ran into trouble. The mighty "Gobblers" went down before the Clemson Tigers, 21-6. Clemson's homecoming crowd of more than 23,000 persons, saw a good game, keenly contested and hard-played. Probably the turning point of the game, as far as Tech was concerned, was the end-zone pass interception by a Clemson defender. After this, Tech just couldn't seem to get rolling.

In Charlottesville, a hardy, rain-soaked crowd of 8,000 saw the mud-caked University of Virginia team bow to Vanderbilt, 6-2. The sloppy field in Scott Stadium prevented the completion of many scoring attempts, and the best the Cavaliers could gain was a last quarter safety.

The Richmond Spiders traveled to Davidson, North Carolina, where a penalty, a fine punt return, a short jump pass and a five-yard smash through the line brought the Davidson Wildcats a hard fought 7-0 victory in a game marked by muffed opportunities and brilliant goal line stands. Richmond had two excellent scoring opportunities but couldn't seem to cash them in, while Davidson finally managed to score in the final minutes of the game.

Bridgewater College came out in the winners column by scoring early and then rolling to an easy 28-0 win over Newport News Apprentice on a rain-soaked and sloppy field in Bridgewater, Virginia.

Washington and Lee was "whitewashed" after traveling to Crawfordsville, Indiana, as Wabash College drove to a 34-0 victory over the winless Generals.

Up in Roanoke, in the annual Shrine Bowl game, North Carolina's explosive freshman team overwhelmed the University of Virginia freshmen 52-6. This is the first time two freshmen teams have played in the Shrine Bowl, the proceeds of which go to the Shrine Hospital for Crippled Children.

Schlegel

The French writers developed Shaftesbury's ideas in various ways, but their writings contributed to the demand for a better world and the protest against the abuses of the aristocracy which eventually resulted in the French Revolution.

Native of York

A native of York, Pennsylvania, Mrs. Schlegel received her bachelor's degree from Dickinson College where she majored in French and minored in English and Latin. After graduation she taught for several years in York High School.

Meets Husband

One summer while attending Columbia University, she met her future husband in the school cafeteria. She recalls that there were two lunch counters at right angles to each other but that one of them was closed for the summer months. She unwittingly started down the closed lunch counter, but a cheery voice from behind told her that there was no food in that direction. Turning she found that the voice belonged to a smiling young man named Marvin W. Schlegel, now professor of history at Longwood.

After coming to Virginia with her husband, Mrs. Schlegel earned her master's degree from the College of William and Mary and her Ph. D. from the University of North Carolina. She has been teaching English at Longwood since 1952, except for the school year 1954-55 when she obtained a year's leave of absence to go to Europe with her husband, who had been granted a Ford Foundation fellowship for advanced study.

Travel In Europe

During fifteen months of study and travel in Europe, she attended the Johann von Goethe Universitat at Frankfurt and summer sessions of the University of Vienna and the Sorbonne at the University of Paris.

In her spare time Mrs. Schlegel enjoys talking to people, playing the piano, and listening to the works of Chopin, Beethoven, and Debussy. She says that her favorite writers are Marcel Proust, Henry James, and Erasmus, but that for "pure pleasure" she reads the detective stories of Georges Simenon, in German, and Nero Wolfe.

Shaftesbury and the French Deists is Mrs. Schlegel's first published work. During her research she came across evidence that indicates Shaftesbury and the French deists influenced the course of freemasonry. She hopes to pursue this line of investigation further and perhaps publish a book on it some day.

In the meantime, she plans to devote much of her time to her classes and students at Longwood College.

Barnett Discloses H2O Club Members

Mary Ann Barnett, president of the H2O Club, has announced the following girls as new members of the club. These girls were initiated on October 10. Any student who holds, or will hold within a year, a Senior Life Saving Certificate and shows that she is interested in the promotion of the swimming activities on the campus is eligible for membership in the H2O Club.

New members include: Nancy Andrews, Suzanne Barr, Ellen Callaway, Amanda Dillon, Sandy Fitzgerald, Sarah Hackworth, Betty Burks Keith, Janet Lloyd, Mary Miller, Anne Rountree, Nancy Striplin, Linda Vess, Jeanne Vestal, and Elaine Weddle.

The purpose of the H2O Club is to stimulate an interest in all phases of swimming, and to co-operate with the Athletic Association in its promotions, and to stage and sponsor at least once a year some type of water pageant.

MEMBERS of the Longwood Players' crew find much to do behind the scenes before the fall production.

Cast, Crew Work on 'Skin of Our Teeth'

By PAT LEAKE

Recently I decided to visit the rehearsal of the Longwood Players fall production "Skin of Our Teeth," for I was curious to see just what actually took place behind the scenes.

As I walked up the stairs, I heard the sounds of hammer, chisel, and saw the door to the shop was closed; and as I slowly opened it and peeked in, I couldn't believe my eyes. Much to my surprise, I saw girls in work clothes, building scenery as well as any carpenter. And when they saw me, they began telling me about the scene design for the play.

The construction seemed most complicated, but the girls were handling it beautifully. They were working diligently and were really enjoying it.

The Prop Committee was also hard at work making wheels, bones and masks. From what I saw in the shop, I felt this is really going to be an unusual presentation.

Visits Stage

Next I decided to visit stage right. I was curious to watch the light crew manipulate. There were two girls working diligently on the switchboard. After watching them at work for awhile, one word came to mind -Confusion! Those girls were plugging in lights, dimming and brightening lights all at one time. I marveled at their precision and timing. How they did it, I'll never know. My only comment is, "Hats off to the light crew!"

I then journeyed upstairs and entered another room of fascination. Costumes from the world of Rome to the Twenty-fifth Century were hung neatly in place. Oh, how I wanted to try them all on! The costume committee was sewing and cleaning gowns and suits to be used in the play. Reluctantly, I departed for it was a room where transformation of time could take place in a matter of minutes.

Rehearsals Noted

Then the heart of the production came to mind. Thus I ventured into the auditorium where I could view the progress of rehearsal. On stage there were numerous chairs situated in various positions in order to mark the spots where scenery would be placed.

The actors were running through a scene and already knew the majority of their lines. The director was coaching them on interpretation of lines and blocking. Rehearsal was coming along with ease, and I realized I'd better tiptoe out for there was one more place I wanted to visit before leaving.

Green Room

The Green Room was one of the highlights of my tour. This is the actors' lounge where coffee, bridge, study and conversation flourishes constantly. I was greeted warmly, given coffee and refreshments. The actors were engaged in the activities mentioned above, and I was really pleased with the friendly atmosphere which was shown. Time passed all too quickly, and soon I had to leave.

I said good-bye to everyone and as I left the theatre I realized the deep bonds of friendship which existed among everyone connected with the production. I suddenly felt very fortunate for I had been a part of this warmth and friendliness for a few wonderful, unforgettable hours.

Widely Acclaimed

This film has been acclaimed the world over as one of the great movies of the last decade. Color Cup Race Gets Underway In Class Sports

A big event in the college each year is the winning of the Color Cup. This is awarded to the class color winning the majority of the athletic events held on the campus. Sister classes, freshman-junior and sophomore-senior, support each other and strive to win each event contested.

Each year the Cup, which is placed on the mantle in the Home Office, bears the colors of the classes winning the most points during the preceding year.

The records, since 1945-46, show that the Red and Whites have won the Color Cup six times, and the Green and Whites have won it five times. At present the Green and Whites have possession of it.

Competitive events are held in hockey, tennis singles and doubles, volleyball, basketball, softball, wisket, swimming, and archery and the winning class colors are given points towards the Cup. Everyone is urged to support her class and her sister class in these events, which will begin with the class hockey games being played this month.

Faculty Enjoys Vacation Of Hockey, Bridge, Studies

By LINDA DOLES

College professors have fun in the summer too! As we have found here at Longwood, teachers appreciate vacation time like the students do. Some of our faculty traveled, taught, studied, or just loafed. Here are some of the interesting ways in which more of Longwood's professors spent their summer:

Travel: Stopping to see the scenic wonders on the way, Mr. M. B. Coyner, psychology professor, and his wife took a motor trip to California. After spending about two weeks there they returned, sightseeing at Lake Tahoe, Salt Lake City, and other Western cities, completely enjoying their vacation.

Miss Burger

On a much larger scale—large as the whole world in fact—was Miss E. Burger's traveling this past summer. Longwood students "traveled" to the International Hockey Tournament in Australia and then round-the-world with her when the vivid slides the science teacher took on her wonderful trip were shown in assembly this fall.

Miss P. Asher from the music department also toured a variety of places this summer, covering Canada, New York City, New Orleans and Texas. In Lexington, Kentucky, she visited a former Longwood faculty member, Miss Chambers. The rest of the summer Miss Asher spent loafing, but even that was enjoyable, as she attended a house party for a week, relaxing, with swimming, bridge, and reading.

Miss O. Iler spent a very relaxing summer too, for the physical education teacher reports she "loafed." This, we agree, is certainly the most popular way that everyone would like to spend his vacation.

Study

Study: From the occupations of some of our faculty, it is proved that education doesn't stop with teaching. Several professors studied at other colleges last summer.

Miss E. Weddle completed her M. S. degree at the University of Tennessee. Then she journeyed north to Tobyhanna, Pennsylvania to go to hockey camp with several Longwood girls, getting back to sports to resume physical education teaching this fall.

Attending Peabody College, Mrs. B. Badger, Math instructor, completed a dissertation there. She took final examinations and graduated in August.

Teaching

The majority of Longwood's professors stayed here and taught in the summer session. Most of them, though, managed to relax in some way before beginning the fall term.

After instructing classes in art here, Miss V. Bedford vacationed with her family in Athens, Ohio. She also attended an annual art meeting at Madison College. Between classes and traveling, Miss Bedford relaxed by playing golf at Longwood Estate.

English professor, Mr. F. Gresham, taught summer classes here. Then, after a trip with his family to Kansas City to visit relatives, he spoke at different Virginia preschool meetings addressing high school teachers on various English subjects.

Mr. McCorkle taught in the science department and since he doesn't report anything else, it is suspected that he too loafed the rest of the summer. What is needed more than relaxation between two sessions of college teaching?

After teaching education classes here, Miss K. Trent went to her summer home in Buckingham County. There she played host to her sister and brother-in-law from Idaho.

What other faculty members do in the summer will be reported soon. As we can now see, they look forward to vacation-time as much as students do.

Simonini Writes Italian Articles

Dr. R. C. Simonini, Jr., of Longwood College has written an article, "English Study in Italy," which appears in the current Yearbook of Comparative and General Literature, published by the University of North Carolina Press.

This article, which was read at the annual meeting of the National Council of Teachers of English in Detroit, November 1954, traces the evolution of the study of English language and literature in Italy and attempts to evaluate its current status and effectiveness.

Dr. Simonini discusses the contributions of scholars and Italian schools on the present studies of English in Italy. "The observations are based mostly on my experience abroad as a Fulbright professor during the academic year, 1953-54," says Dr. Simonini.

The Yearbook includes a second article by Dr. Simonini. This is a review article on Antonia Porta's La Letteratura Comparata nella Storia e nella Critica, published in Italy. According to Dr. Simonini the book deals with comparative literature and "European consciousness," comparative literature and criticism, and comparative literature as an academic discipline.

WEATHER

"Rain, Rain, Go Away"—and after 19 days, it finally did!

The Prince Edward County Agent reports that some rain fell on 16 of the last 19 days of October. In spite of 16 days of rain, the total rainfall was only 3 66/100 inches. This was due largely to the fact that it drizzled most of each day, instead of raining steadily.

Since November 1, a little over 3/4 of an inch of rain has been reported.

Longwood To Spotlight Star Of Stage, Screen

"She had the same wonderful sense of her family as a unit, and she was always looking for opportunities for us," says Actor Gene Lockhart in comparing his mother to "Mama" of I Remember Mama. It was his mother who urged twenty-five year old Gene Lockhart to try for a part on Broadway, and upon trying, he won a place as Gustave in The Riviera Girl.

Lockhart's Daughter

Familiar to American televiewers is the Lockhart's daughter, June, who appeared with Gene and Kathleen Lockhart in the motion picture A Christmas Carol. She appeared successfully in 1947 on Broadway in For Love or Money.

Gene Lockhart will appear in the second presentation of this season's Artist Series in Jarman Auditorium, November 27. The program of living literature will include drama, comedy-drama, fantasy, light comedy, satires, and musical sketches.

Among the more than eighty movies in which the actor has appeared are One Foot in Heaven (1941), All That Money Can Buy (1941), and Going My Way (1944). Since 1943 he has been a free lance actor. As his reason for this Mr. Lockhart says, "The character actor has a better chance as a free lance."

In December of 1949, Lockhart assumed the lead in the play Death of a Salesman. Having starred in over one hundred television plays, he is an accomplished director, author, composer, actor, and teacher.

Journalistic Group Issues Eleven Bids

Pi Delta Epsilon, national journalistic fraternity, recently issued bids to eleven upperclassmen. New members of the fraternity include Sandra Dyer, Ella Carter, Shirley Hauptman, Ann Brierley, Carolyn Waugaman, Harry Lancaster, Carole Stroupe, Barbara Scott Williams, Frances Rosencranz, Norma Jenrett, and Pat Walton.

Pi Delta Epsilon founded a chapter on the Longwood campus in 1950. Membership is composed of those students who have shown interest in and worked on the college publications for a year or longer. Dr. G. Blake Taplin is the new adviser for the organization.

Italian Film Showing Tonight

"Too Bad She's Bad" Stars Loren, DeSica

"Too Bad She's Bad," a highly amusing Italian film, is being shown today at the State Theatre as the first in the 1956-57 Better Film Series. The highly-rated film stars Sophia Loren, Marcello Mastroianni, and Vittorio de Sica are among a cast of many.

Mastroianni Stars

In this gay, original story Mastroianni plays the part of a young taxi driver who is hired by two young men and girl (Sophia Loren) to drive his cab to the seashore. At the beach, Mastroianni's attention is diverted by Loren's charms while Loren's friends attempt to steal the cab. The men escape and Mastroianni, with Loren under custody, drives back to the city.

Loren makes an escape in heavy traffic; but a few days later, Mastroianni spots her. He forces her into the cab and heads for the police station. Loren talks him out of going to the police, stating that her family will be heartbroken. The cab driver takes pity on the girl, but he insists upon talking with her family.

At Loren's home, Mastroianni meets her father (Vittorio DeSica) and her mother and brothers. Although they convince Mastroianni that they are above reproach they actually make their living through illegal means. DeSica being an accomplished baggage stealer.

Mastroianni and Loren have fallen for each other; meanwhile, the girl tells Mastroianni that she has repented. She gives him a cigarette lighter, which turns out to be stolen, and in a state of anger Mastroianni races to find her to break the engagement.

He locates her with her father at the railway station, where DeSica has just stolen a piece of luggage. He jumps into Mastroianni's cab for refuge, and in the excitement crashes into a car from the Indian embassy. The result is that Mastroianni is presented with the bill, DeSica's efforts to make the embassy pay having failed.

Happy Ending

Finally, Mastroianni catches Loren and DeSica picking a pocket aboard a bus. However, at the police station, DeSica twists the facts and gains an exoneration. Loren repents her ways, and she and Mastroianni embrace.

The charm and hilarity of the comedy import is attributed mainly to Sophia Loren's acting. The film is fast paced and is given high entertainment value. As one critic said, "Too Bad She's Bad" is a perfect blend of sex and high hilarity.

The screen play was written by Suco Cecchi D'Amico, Ennio Fiaiano and Alessandro Continenza from a story by Alberto Moravia. It is produced and directed by Alessandro Blasgetti.

English Fraternity Gives Sixteen Bids

Beorc Eh Thorn, local English fraternity, recently initiated sixteen upperclassmen. New members include Margaret Hudnall, Sylvia Moore, Sylvia Wright, Ann Savedge, Judy Alexander, Ella Carter, Mary Leigh Deane, Flo Pollard, Jo Hillsman, Jeanette Morris, Linda Garrison, Shirley Hauptman, Anita Heflin, Cle Koons, Gayle Peoples, and Rita Hite Nelson.

Disney's Musical, 'Fantasia' To Open Here November 18

"Fantasia," Walt Disney's picture and cartoon demonstration of some of the greatest music of all times, will be shown November 18 and 19, at the State Theatre in Farmville.

The film, which portrays eight pieces of music, no two in the same fashion, has been called the nearest thing ever invented to seeing music. Composed of more than 600,000 separate pictures, "Fantasia" is in technicolor and has the added attraction of new stereophonic sound.

Bach's "Toccata and Fague" is seen on the screen in abstract, with lights, colors and moving patterns. This is followed by pure fantasy in Tchaikovsky's "Nutcracker Suite." In this number the Chinese dance is done by a mushmash of mushrooms, the Russian dance, by thistles and orchids, and the Arabian dance, by fishes.

"Sorcerer's Apprentice"

One of the famous roles of Walt Disney's Mickey Mouse is "The Sorcerer's Apprentice" in which he performs to an orchestra conducted by Leopold Stokowski. "Rite of Spring" by Stravinsky follows. This is an evolutionary coverage of all of the time of the World, complete with cataclysmic upheaval.

As the calm after the storm comes Beethoven's "Pastoral Symphony" portrayed by fauns and cupids. Nonchielli's "Dance of the Hours" provides rowdy slapstick humor with elephants, hippos, and alligators as dancers, and as prima ballerina, there is an ostrich.

Ends with "Ave Maria"

Rocking rocks, screaming meemies, and dancing demons follow in "Night on the Bald Mountain" by Moussorgsky. Schubert's "Ave Maria" comes just as things get almost beyond control to end "Fantasia."

Taplin Pens Study; To Publish Book

Dr. G. B. Taplin, a faculty member of the English department of Longwood College, has recently had an article published in the October issue of The Boston Public Library Quarterly.

Entitled "Mrs. Browning's Poems of 1850," the article concerns the revising of Elizabeth Barrett Browning's poetic volumes of 1834 and 1844, and the writing of new poems in preparation for her "new edition," which was to be published in November of 1850.

New Edition

According to Dr. Taplin's study, Mrs. Browning's "new edition," published by Chapman and Hall, was compiled in two octavo volumes. The most important and first published in this edition were her translations of Prometheus Bound, a translation of Beon's Lament for Adonis, and the "Sonneta from the Portuguese."

Because no separate edition was issued in America, Mrs. Browning's Poems of 1850 were in partial obscurity in the United States. However, Mrs. Browning did receive several reviews in America and England in praise of her recent accomplishments.

Poet Laureate Consideration

In April of 1850, Mrs. Browning was considered for the poet laureateship of England, upon the death of Wordsworth. The position, however, was awarded to Tennyson whom Mrs. Browning considered more worthy than Leigh Hunt, the third candidate.

Dr. Taplin, an authority on Elizabeth Barrett Browning, has recently completed a novel concerning her life and work. The novel is now being prepared for publication.

Kappa Delta Pi, honor society in education, has recently initiated seventeen new members. The new members are: Eliza Buchanan, Nancy Richardson, Ellen Webb, Ella Carter, Cornelia Ann Batte, Lucia Hart, Marjorie Algood, Betsy Ruckman, Sylvia Wright, Sylvia Moore, Mary Beth Picinich, Pat Walton, Mary Leigh Dean, Anita Heflin, Marjorie Crismond, Judy Alexander, and Charles H. Patterson.

Camera Artist

THE ANTROBUS FAMILY is gathered in a typical scene from "Skin of Our Teeth." Garnett Smith (Mr. Antrobus) scolds Jim Jordan (Henry), while Cat Ozmon (Gladys) and Donna Boone (Mrs. Antrobus) look on.

"Skin Of Our Teeth To Hit The Boards!"

By H. V. LANCASTER, JR.

Take the story of the struggles and achievements of mankind, roll into three acts, salt well with witty dialogue, and you have "The Skin of Our Teeth" to be presented Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, Nov. 15, 16, and 17, at Jarman Hall, and Monday, Nov. 19, at Johns Auditorium by the Longwood Players and Hampden-Sydney Jongleurs. Curtain time for all four performances is 8 p. m.

Thornton Wilder's experimental play, which was produced in New York starring Tallulah Bankhead and Frederic March, is the major fall production of the college Thespians and is directed by David Wiley of the Longwood College faculty. The three act drama won the Pulitzer Prize in 1948.

Through the medium of a twentieth century household—Mr. and Mrs. Antrobus, their son Henry, their daughter Gladys, and their maid Sabina—, Wilder tries to portray the hopes, fears, ambitions, and accomplishments of the human race over the past five thousand years. To do this, emphasis is placed on three periods of man's existence: the approaching Ice Age, the coming Flood, and the aftermath of war.

Unusual Play

"The Skin of Our Teeth" is an unusual play. The players frequently step out of character, the scenery mysteriously moves up and down, a dinosaur and a mammoth converse with humans, and the cast even holds a hurried rehearsal on stage at the begining of the third act.

Amy McFall will re-create Tallulah Bankhead's role as Sabina, Garnet Smith will take Frederic March's part as Mr. Antrobus, Donna Boone will be Mrs. Antrobus, Jim Jordon will play Henry, and Herb Goodman will act as the Doctor.

Comedy or Tragedy?

Whether "The Skin of Our Teeth" is a comedy or tragedy must be decided by the individual for himself, for in some respects the play is a mirror reflecting the achievements, the failures, and the hopes of one's own life. The characters in the play sometimes wonder why they continue to struggle against seemingly tremendous odds; but they find, as we often do, that we come through by "the skin of our teeth."

Assembly Features Debate On Wilson

The assembly program for Tuesday, November 13 featured an informal debate on Woodrow Wilson in honor of The Woodrow Wilson Centennial Celebration. The debates presented by three Longwood students and three Hampden-Sydney students with Charlotte Phillips as moderator and Dr. Marvin Schlegel as chairman.

The topics discussed both pro and con were: Wilson in the field of Education, Wilson's Domestic Policy, and Wilson's International Policy. Susan Bunting and Mary Jo Davis debated the subject of Wilson in the field of Education; Winifred Biddlecomb and John Brinkley, Wilson's Domestic Policy; and Doug Houck and Tommy Biggs, Wilson's International Policy.

Thanksgiving Thoughts

Are you thankful for the many blessings that come your way each day? Do you take full advantage of all your opportunities to give thanks? In Philemon we find these words, "With thanksgiving let your requests be made." Do we remember to thank even before we receive or do we ask and receive and never take time to thank?

Those first settlers were so thankful for the bountiful harvest that had been theirs that first year in America. It was then that they held their first Thanksgiving a period of prayers and fasting. Chief Massasoit and their other Indian friends, who had been so helpful in getting them established in this new world, joined them in the celebration. This was a carry-over of their thanksgiving feasts which they had held in Holland during their exile from the Spaniards.

Today we live in such a hustle and bustle we seldom stop long enough to bow our heads for a moment of Thankgiving. We are so busy with football games, parties, and family gatherings that we forget to stop and remember together all the many blessings that have been ours during the past year.

Through the years, since that first Thanksgiving, we have observed this holiday. The date has varied slightly but almost always it has been in November after the crops were harvested. This year, as we observe the national holiday, Thanksgiving Day, it is the hope of people the world over that we shall stop and give thanks.

Have you ever thought about the letters that make up Thanksgiving?

T is for those who paved our way.
H is for the bountiful harvest that day.
A is for the answer to their pleas.
N is for the nation they founded with their deeds.
K is for the kindne s to each other.
S is for the spirit as toward a brother.
G is for the giving of their best.
I is for the interest of the rest.
V is for the victory of the day.
I is for the Indians helping every way.
N is for the number whose stay was impossible.
G is for the God who made all thing possible.

This spells Thanksgiving—a time to stop all else and give thanks to the God and Father of us all.

As Thanksgiving draws near and we, here at Longwood, have our chance to give to the poor through our Thanksgiving boxes may each of us give with a generous heart.

We have so much for which to be thankful. May we observe this Thanksgiving with "unselfish devotion." Becky Riddick

Church and College

The October 27 issue of the Richmond Times-Dispatch carried results of a poll investigating the religious habits of college students. Representing Virginia colleges, a small group of student leaders and recent graduates were selected for a discussion of their colleges' religious life.

The students include two Omicron Delta Kappa members, a Phi Beta Kappa, a campus publication leader and several fraternity and sorority officers. Ministers from college towns were interviewed also.

According to a poll by Bill Grigg, church attendance at Virginia colleges seems to vary from 100 per cent at Virginia Military Institute where attendance is mandatory to less than 30 per cent at several colleges. Here is what the students have to say:

"'After being up late and after six days of college work . . . extra sack . . . is pretty attractive."—Washington and Lee.

"The girls going to church . . . aren't necessarily more religious. Some are, but some just didn't get invited out the night before. Another factor is the churches in Fredericksburg are distant . . . geographically and I guess you would say in 'personality.'." Mary Washington College.

"I plan to study medicine and my old religious ideas don't seem compatible . . ." Randolph-Macon Women's College sophomore.

"I go to church because although I don't know all the answers I think Christianity has them."—University of Richmond.

"There is a need felt to communicate with other persons who have the same beliefs." University of Virginia.

The students said that church - goers have an excellent chance to influence other students to attend church.

"When fraternity brothers who have stayed up as late as I and partied as hard, get up for church . . . they prove there is value . . ." W&L.

Some students say they get no beneficial or practical teaching from attending church. Church tells them what they should believe, they say. But they want reasons for believing what they can accept.

"I've heard ministers say, in effect, to believe because it's healthy and consoling . . . sort of a mixture of Norman Vincent Peale . . . with Dale Carnegie. The ministers must have better reasons than that. The beliefs I'll end up with are those I know . . . or am pretty sure . . . are true, not the ones that are 'healthy'."—U. Va.

"'We in the church have not communicated to the students the Christian Gospel . . . We are not Christian enough to witness. We have tried to say we have a private pipeline to God and either you come to Him our way or not at all. This is not the teaching of the New Testament. We have not helped young people to understand the meaning of the church as God at work in the world in and through us."—Lexington Minister.

An attempt has been made on the Longwood campus to learn the students attitude toward attending churches here in Farmville. In taking a poll Sunday during church hours, it was found that of eight students considered outstanding in their different churches, seven of these girls were at church. These girls were not necessarily leaders, but girls with whom certain churches are associated easily.

"It seems that a majority of the students go home on weekends," one student said, "But those who do stay here do attend church at some hour on Sunday."

"I don't think the students as a whole are to be considered as unusually active in church affairs; but when considering other college campuses, I think our campus is more than above average in its church participation."—A Junior student.

"I think that Longwood girls are definitely sincere in their religious life. The Baptist Student Union, for example, stands out on our campus."—A Freshman student.

"Church attendance is good considering the number of girls who leave every weekend. However, participation in church groups is not as good as it could be. I believe church activity on this campus is just about equal to that of other small college campuses."—A Junior student.

"Many Longwood girls attend church on Sunday. Their religion doesn't end with that. It is reflected in their lives throughout the entire week."—A Senior student.

Obligation or Opportunity?

Thanks to several people the Salk vaccine shots for poliomyelitis will be made available without charge this year for Longwood students. This important inoculation, up to now only obtainable for small children, should be appreciated here.

Longwood attempts to provide its students with the best possible opportunities and services during the school year. By realizing this fact students should be willing and eager to participate in beneficial advantages that the administration goes to some effort to procure.

The Salk vaccine inoculations which will be given in several series during the two semesters, are not widely used throughout the country. As far as research shows they have proven invaluable in the protection of small children against polio.

Now that the vaccine is available for older students a program like the one to be featured here is being arranged in many places so young people too can be given some protecton against infantile paralysis.

We should all realize how important the combatting of this disease is for the health and welfare of all our people. The more persons that are inoculated with this new vaccine that has proven so helpful, the more cases of polio will be eliminated, aiding a big problem and expense, besides saving many lives in our country.

It is important to remember we are all citizens of the United States and as college students are being educated to help ourselves and our country. Begin now to support this fact by active participation in one of America's most successful disease-combatting accomplishments—Salk vaccine inoculation. —L. D.

Washington and Lee's Generals ended a 12-game losing streak extending over two seasons of amateur play by upsetting favored Sewanee, 22-7, Saturday before a surprised W and L homecoming crowd of 2,000. It was the Generals' first gridiron victory since 1953 when the last of the school's subsidized teams defeated William and Mary in the final game of the campaign.

Tigers Triumph

Over at Death Valley, Hampden-Sydney "ran wild" in the fourth quarter to defeat their arch-rivals, Randolph-Macon, 27-7. This was the 56th meeting of the two most bitter rivals in the Old Dominion. Last year, it was Randolph-Macon who knocked the Tigers out of a perfect season, and the Tigers were really out for revenge.

Bridgewater and Gallaudet scrapped to a 7-7 tie in a Gallaudet homecoming game in Washington. Both teams went through the first quarter scoreless, then scored in the second quarter.

Up in Blacksburg, a chilled Miles Stadium crowd of 7,000 was kept on edge as Virginia Tech and Wake Forest battled to a 13-13 tie. This is the first tie for the Gobblers, who now have a 6-2-1 record. Tech fans are now looking forward to the annual V.P.I.-V.M.I. game which will be played Thanksgiving Day in Roanoke.

Keydets Downed

V.M.I. saw West Virginia ride to their 20th straight Southern Conference football victory Saturday, as the Mountaineers defeated the spirited Keydets, 13-6. West Virginia scored the second time it got its hands on the ball and again in the third quarter. The Keydets struck back late in the third period after Carl Kasko recovered a fumble on the WVU 13. Pete Johnson scored two plays later.

Scott Stadium, in Charlotteaville, was the scene of the U. Va.-North Carolina game. Ed Sutton gave the North Carolina supporters the kind of thrills they were accustomed to when Charlie Justice was racing for touchdowns, as he led the Tar Heels to a 21-7 victory over the Cavaliers. Though losing the game, Virginia fans saw Jim Bakhtiar break an Atlantic Coast Conference record. He now has a total of 169 rushes this season, wiping out the record of 158, which he set last year.

Indians Fall

The William and Mary Indians traveled to West Point where they saw another game added to their losing streak as they fell before the Cadets, 34-6. Winless in their last 11 games, the visitors from Virginia did themselves proud in the first half until Army's pass defense finally started to close in with a final total of five interceptions.

Most of the State teams will end their 1956 seasons this Saturday. There are five games on top, one of the most important being the Emory and Henry-Randolph-Macon game. Tech and V.M.I. do not play this week, as these arch-rivals will be getting ready for their "Turkey day" meeting.

Revenge Is Sweet In Tiger Triumph

Revenge is sweet and that's what the Hampden-Sydney Tigers got Saturday. After being deprived of a perfect season a year ago by a 7-6 defeat at the hands of arch-rival Randolph-Macon, the Tigers broke loose in the final quarter for three quick touchdowns and a 27-7 triumph over the Yellow Jackets.

For three periods the Jackets and Tigers battled on even terms, each club bagging a second-quarter touchdown, but there was no holding the hepped-up Tigers in that final period when quarterback Bob Furr and fullback Bill LeHew took over.

The Tigers struck swiftly for their initial touchdown early in the second quarter, after tackle Gene Cooke had claimed Les Davis' fumble on the Tiger 29. Four plays later, Bill Benson slashed through a big hole in the left side of the Jacket line for the score, and Furr added the extra point.

A 37-yard gallop by Ed Dovel to the Tiger 15 gave the Jackets their first big chance late in the second quarter. Davis ripped to the 12, but Benson leaped high to intercept Keeton's pass on the Tiger two. However, the Tigers were held at a standstill and LeHew was forced to punt and this time the Jackets came back to score. Keeton slipped over right tackle and smashed his way to the 11. Then Coppage hit end Snookie Wawner with a jump pass over center, and Wawner took it on the five and romped across the goal. Coppage added the extra point to tie the count at 7-7.

In the fourth quarter on a fourth-and-eight situation, Furr elected to try a field goal from the 17, but the kick was far wide of its mark. However, late in the period, Tommy Bryant sprang loose on a 16-yard run, and this time the Tigers went on to cover 54 yards in seven plays. Furr finally bucked over for the TD, but his attempted conversion was low.

The rest of the game was all Hampden-Sydney. After driving to the 12, Furr slipped to his left and passed to Jim Felty, all alone in the end zone. Furr's placement gave the Tigers a 20-7 cushion.

Davis' fumble on the R-M 33 in the closing moments gave the Tigers still another chance and they didn't waste it. LeHew picked up two yards and Furr called the same play that had worked so beautifully a few moments before. He ran to his left and lofted a pass to Felty who had slipped behind the Jacket secondary. Felty snatched the pigskin on the five and took three short steps into the end zone. Furr's conversion was good and the game ended 27-7.

The triumph was the sixth in eight games for Coach Bob Thalman's charges, and put the Tigers in position to capture the Mason-Dixon Conference crown, should Johns Hopkins lose to Western Maryland Saturday. The Tigers can tie the Jackets for the Little Eight title if R-M can upset Emory and Henry. All the Wasps need is a win to clinch the title. This week finds Hampden-Sydney playing Washington and Lee, in Lexington.

Hockey Players In Practice For Tidewater Tournament

Richmond club placed five players on the 11-woman first team selected at the Tidewater Hockey tournament held over the week end at Longwood College. The first team will represent the Tidewater Association in the Southeastern tournament at Baltimore Saturday and Sunday.

Westhampton College and the Little Colonels each placed two players on the first team, and Longwood College and Petersburg Club each had one.

L. C. Team Standing

Longwood College and Richmond led in team standings, with two wins apiece. Longwood downed Westhampton 1-0 and Petersburg 4-0, while Richmond was beating William and Mary College 7-0 and Westhampton 2-0.

The Little Colonels were one goal better than the Norfolk division of William and Mary, which they defeated 2-1, then battled to a 1-1 tie with William and Mary. The Norfolk team managed to salvage a 1-0 victory over Mary Washington College. In the tournament's highest scoring game, Petersburg whipped Mary Washington 7-1.

Following the tournament games the hand-picked first team squeaked by the reserves by a 3-2 margin. Of the 11 first stringers, nine are repeat choices from the 1955 team.

They include Mary Jane Miller, president of the Tidewater association of the Richmond club, and her teammates Clara McCarter, Mollie Fleet, Edith Brandt and All-American Harriet Walton; Carol Dickerson and Judy Twyford, of Westhampton College; and Jane Sheema, and Helen Smith, of the Little Colonels. Named for the first time were Loretta Kuhn, Longwood right inner, and Dolores Webb, of the Petersburg club.

William and Mary placed six players on the reserve team, including Lynne Carr, Patricia Atkinson, Linda Schrader, Judy Dickerson, Joanne Robinson and Jogina Diamantl. Others selected were Lorraine Chapman, Little Colonels; Augusta Chapman, Richmond Club; Carol Brie, Westhampton, and Carol Wolfe, Longwood.

Longwood Substitutes

Substitutes named were Louise Heier and Nancy Richardson of Longwood, and Patsy Norman, of the Norfolk division of William and Mary.

COMMITTEE CHAIRMEN for Senior Dance have plans underway for coming festive event.

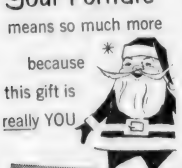
Seniors Plan For Gay Dance Called 'Christmas Carousel'

The senior class invites everyone to join with it the evening of December 15 in the lightness and gaiety of a Christmas Carousel.

Pick your favorite colored frocks and walk your favorite fellow down the Colonnade to the gym. There, when the music of the Collegians begins at 8:00 p.m., the Carousel of Reindeers will come alive and our laughter of mingling voices will carry forth the Christmas spirit.

Through an arch of candy canes we may enter beneath a canopy sky. The sleigh is filled with the musicians and the silver wall behind them is a reflection of our glowing happiness. Silver trees may be seen here and there and the mural brings all our warm thoughts of Christmas into view.

The time comes for the senior figure with the senior girls all dressed in white. The gym is filled to capacity and the masculine darks with feminine lights and gay colors seem like a large Christmas tree ball reflecting in the snowy light.



The people who are making all this gaiety possible are: Jo Davis and Shirley Hardy, chairmen and their committee chairmen: Jeanne Saunders and Nancy Lenz, decorations; Belle Fitzgerald, publicity; Ann Wayne Fuller, favors; Jackie Sawyer, band; Margaret Beavers, party; Jackie Pond, tickets; and Ann Savedge, floor.

Frosh To Receive Mid-Term Grades From New Advisers

On Thursday, November 15, Longwood will return to the system of giving out grades which was formerly used here for several years. Between 1:00 and 2:00 p. m. the advisers will hand out the mid-semester estimates to the members of the Freshman Class. Grades of the upper classmen will be delivered through the post office.

Choose Advisors

This year after three weeks of class attendance, the member of the Freshman Class in choosing their advisers distributed their choice among forty-one members of the faculty. Each faculty adviser is limited to twelve advisees.

Heads of Departments are ineligible to serve as Freshman advisers in as much as they are engaged in supervising upper classmen who are majoring in their fields of study. The work has been increased this year, since for the first time, sophomores are regarded as the advisees of the heads of the departments in which they are majoring, or tentatively majoring.

Dept. Heads Assisted

Because of the number of students enrolled in Elementary and Business Education the heads of those particular departments will have assistance in this advisory work. Mr. Norman O. Myers will assist Dr. Landrum, and Dr. Edgar M. Johnson and Mr. Charles H. Patterson, will assist Dr. Boggs.

LOST: DINOSAUR AND MAMMOTH!

Gladys and Henry Antrobus are in tears—literally in tears! Why? Because they lost their faaa-vorite little pets, a dinosaur and a mammoth, about 5:30 this afternoon.

If any of you wonderful people should locate them, please (we plead with you) return these precious animals to Jarman Hall by Thursday night at 8:00 p. m. sharp—So that our little Gladys and Henry can survive "by the skin of their teeth!"

Professor Prefers Travel; Others Teach, Relax, Study

By LINDA DOLES

"Across the Artic Circle into the land of the Midnite Sun"— a highlight of one Longwood professor's vacation last summer, shows that teachers enjoy adventurous events during their summer.

Besides travel, our faculty notes many other interesting and exciting pastimes during the summer: new vacation spots, fishing, loafing, teaching, or studying. The following are several professor's reports about their choice of activity this past summer.

Miss Nichols

Miss M. Nichols, English instructor, preferred traveling and joined the Study Abroad Tours sponsored by the National Council of Teachers of English. The sixteen member group flew from New York to Scotland, spending two weeks in the British Isles.

After sailing to Norway they cruised up the coast to Hommerfest, the northern-most city of Europe, truly the "Land of the Midnight Sun." Then via boat and train the group journeyed to Sweden and Denmark, visiting the main cities. They went next to Berlin, Germany, by plane and ended their tour by flying home from Holland.

Teaching interested Mrs. J. Lemon who instructed classes in art for the University of Virginia. These were extension classes taught at Abingdon, Danville, and Gate City. Taking part in the Arts Festival at Abingdon, she was in charge of the public school art exhibit there.

Teaching

Many professors chose to stay at Longwood to teach in the summer session. Preferring life at Longwood were Dr. M. Landrum, business teacher; Miss E. Clark, music teacher; Dr. R. Simonini, Jr., English teacher; and Mr. N. Myers, business teacher.

Miss Clark highlighted her summer by a week's stay in New York; Dr. Simonini did extensive research and writing and attended several professional meetings; and Mr. Myers, taking rod and reel, traveled to Cape Charles and Cape Hatteras and angled for some big ones.

Varied Occupations

Dr. E. Johnson, education professor, stayed busy with building fences, cutting hay, and fishing at Ocean View. Besides all these varied activities he also attended educational conferences at the University of Virginia and in Richmond.

Choosing to study, Miss J. Bailey, music teacher, attended summer school, also presenting an organ recital at Longwood's summer session. She traveled twice to the mid-western United States.

Although Miss H. Draper, French teacher, describes her summer as one of loafing it appears differently, for she spent most of the time repairing her Gatlinburg, Tennessee home.

Dr. Lankford, Boggs To Speak This Week

Dr. Francis G. Lankford, Jr., president of Longwood College, will attend the fourth mathematics conference for teachers of Mathematics in North Carolina, to be held at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, on Saturday, November 17.

Dr. Lankford will speak on the topic, "Developing Independence In Arithmetic."

Dr. Boggs

Dr. Earl R. Boggs, Dean of Longwood College, spoke at the P. T. A. meeting of Park View High School, South Hill, Virginia, on Monday night, November 12.

On Thursday, November 15 at 10 a. m., Dr. Boggs will attend the annual meeting of the Summer Session Directors to be held in Jefferson Hall at the University of Virginia at Charlottesville, Va. The purpose of the meeting is to give consideration to the matters that are of interest and concern to the institutions offering summer school work in Virginia.

Collegiate Who's Who Honors Fifteen Students

Spanish, French To Give Christmas Fiesta, Fete

The annual Spanish - French Christmas party, which in Spanish means "fiesta" and in French is translated "fete," will be held in the main rec on Friday, December 14. Through the many previous parties both the Spanish and French customs have become part of the traditional Christmas season at Longwood. By means of songs, dances, and reproductions of legends and stories, the Christmas traditions of both countries, past and present, are brought to life.

The French legend to be presented this Christmas is one of the 40 miracle plays which have been preserved in the National Library of France. The legend is taken from the Middle Ages, and it is entitled 'Miracle de Notre Dame." As is characteristic of the plays, there is a miracle in which the Lady intervenes. The legend will be set for miracle plays.

Two Legends Presented

There will be two Spanish legends presented, "The Legend of the Poinsettia" and "The Legend of the Three Kings". Both are among the most famous Spanish legends. "The Legend of the Three Kings" depicts an early counterpart of our modern Santa Claus idea. Here the Spanish children set out straw and water for the wise men's camels, and in the turn the wise men left them gifts.

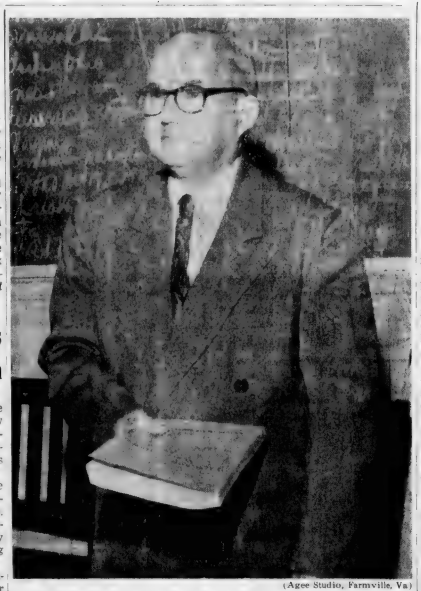
Another French custom, that of selling miniature saints at Christmas, will be represented by students dressed in appropriate costumes. All this, amidst songs and dances, both old and new, depict the colorful French Fete.

"Las Posados"

"Las Posados" will be another feature of the Spanish part of the program. Nine days before Christmas and every night until Christmas, groups of people visit the different houses in a particular town singing. After the four verses of the song have been sung, two by the outsiders and two by the people inside the house, those outside are invited in for refreshments. The outsiders represent Joseph and Mary, and those inside the house represent the innkeeper.

Also two dances will be presented by the Spanish club—"Meringue" and "La Sandunga." Many other Mexican, Spanish, and Puerto Rican songs will be sung; and, since without it the party would not be complete, the "Fiesta" will climax with the breaking of the "pintas"—huge decorated containers full of goodies.

Lankford Accepts Bids for New Dorm



Governor Stanley's recent release of $598,500 for construction of a new dormitory on the campus was followed this week by a call for construction bids by President Francis Lankford, Jr.

The dormitory, to meet one of the college's pressing needs, will provide living quarters for 171 students. Bids for construction will be received until January 8 when they will be opened at 2 p.m. according to an announcement this week.

The last General Assembly authorized the project, among many for improvements and expansion at state-supported institutions, but it requires official notice from the Governor before approved funds are released for actual use.

Thompson and Payne, of Roanoke, is the firm of architects called into the work by the college. Preliminary drawings of the building have been approved by the State Art Commission, another requirement before work may be commenced.

State clearing and foundation work are expected to be started shortly after a contract has been awarded. The building will be erected on Pine Street adjoining the present Junior-Senior dormitory.

Dr. Francis Simkins, author, historian and professor, is awaiting publication of his new Virginia History textbook.

Virginia To Adopt Textbook By Outstanding Professor

By PAT BURDETTE

Dr. Francis B. Simkins has written a textbook, Virginia: History, Geography, Government, to be published in January by Charles Scribner's Sons. This book is to be used by the seventh-grade pupils in the Virginia Public Schools.

Dr. Simkins said that his reason for writing this book was because he was called up on the phone and asked to do it. This is the first book he has written for grade school study and he said, "The book is intended to arouse patriotism, and from all the reports I have received, it is to be a very beautiful book."

Dr. Simkins was born in Edgefield, South Carolina. He describes the town as being "old-fashioned" and "non-Republican" at the time of his birth. He said that the basis of his education was three books, the Bible, Shakespeare, and the Sears Roebuck catalogue.

His high school education was brief and of little value. He remarked that the boys were quite rowdy and interested in things other than study. His father finally took him out of high school and entered him in the University of South Carolina.

It was while he was at the University that he became interested in history. Dr. Simkins said, "I had an old history professor who was a city-man. He was very different from the country people I had known. Instead of having a red country neck, he had a creamy one."

"This professor began pointing me out in class and telling the other students about my ancestors and how my grandfather was killed in the Civil War. It was then that I really got interested in local history." During Dr. Simkin's day as an upperclassman, he became a member of the Literary Society and senior orator.

He went to Columbia University for graduate study. The Columbia Press printed textbooks for the University of South Carolina, and it was through these that Dr. Simkins became interested in Columbia University.

Dr. Simkins is a top-notch historian throughout the country. During conventions and meetings of the history professors, the leading historians in the country are anxious to meet and talk with him.

He taught in many other schools before coming to Longwood. Among these were the University of Louisiana and the University of South Carolina.

Fifteen seniors at Longwood have been selected for "Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges." The new electorates include Margaret Beavers, Sandra Dyer, Anne Wayne Fuller, Nancy Lea Harris, Joe Hillsman, Loretta Kuhn, Harry Lancaster, Jr., Nancy Lenz, Gayle Peoples, Frances Raine, Nicole Rothe, Jeanne Saunders, Caroline Stoneman, Nancy Striplin and Sara Lou Wendenburg.

Network Features Talk By Lankford

By ELLA CARTER

Max Maxwell, master of ceremonies for the radio program, "Let's Go Visiting," interviewed Dr. Francis G. Lankford, Jr., last week. In this person-to-person meeting a tape recording on the subject of education was made. It will be heard over radio stations in 35 states.

"Many of us are greatly concerned about teachers for the great influx of students soon to reach college age," said Mr. Maxwell. In this recording we will attempt to show how this problem is being considered by Longwood, he added.

One of the oldest radio programs existing today, "Let's Go Visiting," has made a survey of the purpose of Longwood, its background as a state college, the obstacles to be overcome in keeping good teachers, and how to interest others in entering the teaching profession.

In answering to the purpose of Longwood as a teachers' college, Dr. Lankford referred to points made in his inaugural address last December.

"It gives me great satisfaction that the dominant purpose of Longwood College is the preparation of teachers," Dr. Lankford began. There is no more important function that an institution of higher learning can have than to educate, soundly, young men and women to teach in our country's elementary and secondary schools," he said.

Emphasizing the program of selection in new students each year, Dr. Lankford discussed the inherence in any program for the careful selection of those who are admitted. "Not all secondary school graduates have the scholastic capacity or the personality to make successful teachers," he added.

Dr. Lankford explained how Longwood's background has been established to help meet the goal for better teachers.

College Panelists To Appear On TV

A program emphasizing student teaching, one aspect of Longwood College's teacher training curriculum, will be presented at 6 p.m., December 8, by television station WXEX, channel 8 in Petersburg.

Student teachers Florence King and Gloria Kratsch, supervising teacher Mrs. Kathleen Newman, and eight fifth - grade students will participate in a demonstrat on classroom scene. The subject of their lesson will be "How do we use magnetism and electricity?"

The lesson is to begin with a review of previous experience with magnetism and will include the use of electricity in magnetism and the use of magnetism in making electricity.

Dr. F. G. Lankford, Jr., will open the program by explaining the objectives of Longwood College and the program of teacher education. A panel composed of Miss Kate Trent, Miss Lucy Adams, Miss Elizabeth Burger, Mr. Charles Patterson, and Dr. Lankford will further discuss student teaching and the teacher training porgram.

Collegians To Play For Senior Dance

by Belle Fitzgerald

Christmas Carousel! Christmas Carousel! Everyone is invited to attend the Senior Dance on December 15. With all the gaiety of our Christmas Season, with all the happiness of smiling faces and laughing voices, the Seniors welcome you.

Through the archway of peppermint into the Carousel of Christmas, we will hear the music of the Collegians from the University of Richmond. Having brought us such a delightful time last year, the Collegians will again lead us in our wonderland of music across the wintertime of Christmas in their sleigh of bass notes with the runners full of the light and gay notes of Christmas.

Around the Christmas Carousel, reindeer come alive with our dancing. The couples will move in various patterns as the festive colors will weave in and out to create patterns of snowflakes and speckled tinsel.

Christmas Carousel! Christmas Carousel! are the echoes that grow louder as the time grows closer for the Collegians to begin our evening of entertainment. Tickets are on sale after meals, until dance time on December 15 for $2.40.

AKG Wins Top Honors at Convention; Societies Add Pledges, Plan Programs

The National AKG Fall Convention was held at the University of South Carolina in Columbia, South Carolina last week-end. Each college having this national honorary fraternity was represented at the convention.

Eight girls representing the AKG of Longwood College were Jo Hillsman, Nancy Lea Harris, Nancy Strickler, Gayle Peoples, Lucia Hart, and Francis Patton. Miss Elizabeth Burger, faculty advisor of the fraternity, accompanied them.

The theme of the convention was the "Six Points of the Star," which is also the emblem of the fraternity. An important highlight of the convention was the installation of the national officers for the year '56-57. Longwood had representation in the national officers this year. Nancy Lenz was installed as Secretary.

The Longwood AKG Scrapbook of activities won first place in the scrapbook contest. For this award, the Longwood Chapter was presented the gavel to keep this year.

With more honors in store, Nancy Lenz's design for the cover of the national scrapbook was selected for first choice. Her design was the shield burned in on wood.

Phys. Ed. Methods Discussed by Evans

Dr. Ruth Evans, director of physical education and counselor of women at Springfield College, Massachusetts, conducted discussion groups and demonstrations at the college today for elementary, physical education, and music majors. The theme of the program was physical education in the elementary school.

The program began at 10:00 a.m. when Dr. Evans met with the elementary and music majors. Discussion groups for the physical education majors were held at 11:00 a.m. The Elementary Teachers District Meeting was held in the afternoon with Dr. Evans conducting demonstrations with the second and fifth grades of the Farmville Elementary School. Teachers from the surrounding counties attended this meeting.

Dr. Evans has previously been elementary supervisor for the Springfield schools and has taught at the Teachers College of Columbia University in New York City. Method Modified Sincere and hearty congratulations are in order for those members of the Senior Class who were recently honored by selection for Who's Who Among American Colleges and Universities. Membership is this organization is a fitting reward or recognition for fifteen girls at Longwood who have obtained outstanding records of achievement in all phases of college life during their years here. Careful and lengthy consideration is behind the final selection of these students.

However, it should be called to the attention of the student body that the method of nomination and selection of candidates for Who's Who has been slightly altered and a somewhat different method is now in process. This method was devised in an effort to broaden the basis of selection, include both student and faculty participation, and to enlarge faculty participation.

After considerable study of the existing manner of selection it was decided to ask the Senior members of Alpha Kappa Gamma, national honorary achievement fraternity on campus, to nominate as many names for candidates as the quota assigned for Longwood. At the same time, each Senior member of A. K. G. was automatically given one nomination. This is a means of adding student participation to the method of selection.

In addition, five members of the faculty, acting individually, were asked to make nominations. These faculty members were selected by the offices which they held, bringing them into contact with the individual students and their records. These five members include the adviser to Student Government, the adviser to the Y. W. C. A., the Director of Physical Education, the adviser to A. K. G., and the sponsor of the Senior Class. It is evident that membership on this committee is variable from year to year or over a period of time.

From the faculty and student lists of nominees submitted, a committee of the Administration and Faculty was asked to elect the members of Who's Who. The members of the Selection Committee were chosen as to include the President of the College, the Dean of the College, the Dean of Women, the Registrar, and the Faculty Chairman of the Committee on Student Standards. (Faculty Student Standards)

This method was put into effect for the first time this year. In reflection upon the different aspects of the plan, it appears that the overall selection of Who's Who includes both faculty and student participation and allows for a greater and more varied method of faculty participation.

Rewarding Results

When a new measure which affects the entire student body or a great majority of its students is put into effect, it is always interesting and rewarding to watch student reaction to it when the practical test of its effect comes.

One of the measures recently initiated at Longwood was the penalty of double cuts for not attending a class immediately before or after a school holiday. The first test of this measure came with the Thanksgiving holidays and records are now available showing student reaction and proving its effectiveness.

Students are to be commended on their observance of this new rule. Class attendance both before and after the holidays was high, and figures show that over three times as many students cut their classes for last year's Thanksgiving holidays as cut this year. Actual statistics show that 416 students took a total of 1,231 cuts before the holidays last November, thus making such a rule compulsory. This year 151 students cut a total number of 267 classes.

A further breakdown of the figures shows that on November 21 last year, the Monday before the holidays began on Wednesday, 225 cuts were taken; on November 22, 354 cuts were taken, and on November 23, 652 cuts were recorded. On the same days this year before the holidays, 99 cuts were taken on November 19, 55 cuts were taken on November 20, and 113 cuts were recorded on November 21.

The faculty and administration are pleased with the over-all class attendance prior to and following this holiday. It is hoped, at the same time, that students will keep this regulation in mind when leaving for the Christmas holidays.

Letter To The Editor

Professors Praised

Far too often we notice only the things in life which are trying and unpleasant and in so doing we overlook the many benefits we possess and accept them as routine and commonplace. As college students we belong to a group notorious in this practice and for that reason, I submit these few words of prase for one of these benefits.

We students of Longwood College have in our society one of the greatest boons of education - that of an able and devoted faculty. We have heard too often our friends who attend other colleges remark on the lack of interest, the departmental jealousies, and the poor teaching which prevails in their classrooms. We have never been subjected to these malpractices and cannot therefore appreciate what their absence means to our development.

Our professors are competent in their fields and practice teaching methods which are worthy of our admiration and emulation. It is a pleasure rather than an ordeal to attend a class where the instructor is himself interestd in the subject and when he presents the matrial in an enthusiastic and understandable manner. We as students can take no credit for this situation, but can only wonder at our good fortune in having such persons on our faculty.

Beyond this, and far more important to us as individuals, lies the fact that we have the opportunity to know the faculty not just as classroom instructors, but as counselors and friends. We seldom find them too busy to hear our problems and to give us kindly and sound advice. They are concerned not only with our scholastic development, but as we grow into adulthood, they are interested in our progress as mature, clear thinking individuals.

Through this interest our faculty has succeeded in making learning a living experience, and has given us much more than cold facts as mementos of our college days. We are indeed fortunate to find ourselves in an institution where our professors are not merely names or faces which appear three times a week behind their lecture desks.

I hope that in this brief statement I express what many of my fellow students feel and may provoke in all a realization and cognizance, that we may more fully appreciate our faculty. They are indeed more than instructors; they are dedicated individuals, truly worthy of the title "teacher."

Comedy, "Skin of Our Teeth" Gains Critic's High Praise

By G. TAPLIN

The presentation of Thornton Wilder's Pulitzer - Prize - winning "The Skin of Our Teeth" by the Longwood Players and the Hampden-Sydney Jongleurs from November 15 to 19 was, in the opinion of Farmville's experienced playgoers, David Wiley's most brilliant success to date.

Technically, the production itself was all but flawless, and most of the acting was of an unusually high calibre for an amateur performance. In view of the many weeks of careful preparation and the consequent verve and finesse with which this play was presented, it certainly deserved a much larger audience than the one which attended on the opening night.

Top honors for acting to Garnet Smith, a Hampden-Sydney student, for his sensitive, polished portrayal of Mr. Antrobus. Mr. Smith has a fine presence and a resounding, though well-modulated voice, which could be heard without difficulty anywhere in the hall. He did not appear to be a college boy acting a part; rather he created the illusion that he himself was Mr. Antrobus.

As the Greek derivation of the name suggests, Mr. Antrobus is a symbol of man, who over a period of thousands of years has raised himself from savagery, has escaped destruction from wild animals, an ice age, floods, wars, and other perils, always by the skin of his teeth, to achieve a kind of civilization. In spite of his having to cope with almost every conceivable disaster, he never loses his resilience, and at the end of the play he is looking forward to building new worlds.

Similar to Morality Plays

With its mixture of buffoonery, allegory, and moral and religious seriousness, this drama is somewhat similar to the morality plays of the Middle Ages. The entire action of "The Skin of Our Teeth" is a kind of play within a play, since it is supposed to be a rehearsal, with the actors occasionally refusing to play the scenes and with the prompter having to come from behind the stage to settle the arguments.

Much of this farce, however, merely delays the action and does not appear to serve any useful purpose. Perhaps Mr. Wilder is thus playing with his audience to sugarcoat the pill of his didacticism.

While Mr. Antrobus represents the creative and original aspects of man, his wife and the mother of his children is a symbol of the conservative and moralistic forces of society The part of Mrs. Antrobus was played by Donna Boone, who recited her lines with energy and spirit.

Mrs. Antrobus, as interpreted by Miss Boone, however, was not a sympathetic character. She nagged at her husband so constantly to remind him of his domestic responsibilities that one could hardly blame him for wishing now and then to take a moral holiday with the family maid, Sabina.

McFall Noted

Amy McFall played this part with great charm. Sabina is the eternal temptress or siren, who is at first the chore servant of the Antrobus family, later appears as the winner of an Atlantic City beauty contest and the "seducer" of Mr. Antrobus, and finally at the end of the play she is once again the maid in the suburban home of Mr. and Mrs. Antrobus.

With her good looks and pleasant voice, Miss McFall had many of the characteristics Mr. Wilder intended for the part of Sabina, although perhaps not all of the sophistication.

Although the Fortune Teller is only a minor part, Barbara Burnside, who played this role, gave one of the most memorable performances of the evening. Her costume was striking, and through the strength of her acting and the mysterious and compelling quality of her voice, much of the action of the second act pivoted about her.

Lesser Parts Rated

However well all the lesser parts were played, several deserve particular mention. Catherine Ozmon, as Gladys, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Antrobus, and Jim Jordan as their son, Henry, were both realistic

Consider Christian Characteristics

When the Christmas Pageant begins there will be a hush over the audience as the Madonna of our Senior Class is revealed. As we look at her we feel that this girl who was chosen by the student body of Longwood College has the characteristics that we as students and Christians feel necessary for an individual to possess to be chosen as Madonna of our Christmas revelation.

Begin thinking now about your choice for the Madonna of our pageant. There are girls among you that have a Christian character. Think seriously about your Senior Class, and then make your choice with God as your Guide.

Church News

By MARGARET NEWTON

Baptist

This week is Freshman Week for the B.S.U., and officers chosen from the freshman class are carrying out their duties diligently. Freshman Week is headed by Betty McCarty from Fredericksburg, Va., who is honorary president.

The Longwood B.S.U. held a convention Sunday, December 2. Although it had to be a miniature convention, it contained all the elements of a larger one. Officers of Freshman Week were in charge. B.S.U. members were served a supper at 5:30 at the center, and at 7 they assembled in the Baptist Church to hear Mr. Ralph Winders, State Student Secretary, bring an inspiring message. The theme of the convention was the same as the convention at Newport News, "Christ The Lord, My Lord." After the convention, fellowship hour was held at the center.

A mass Y.W.A. meeting was held December 4, in the Student Center. It was a very special meeting because of the Lottie Moon Christmas Offering for Foreign Missions. Our goal has been set at $125. The classes will be competing against each other to see which one gets the most money for this worthy cause.

Episcopal

A film, 'The Stones Cry Out," was shown in the church on December 2.

On December 9 one of the Canterbury Club members will lead a discussion on "Why Keep Christmas?" from a sermon by Peter Marshall.

Plans are being made for an afternoon Christmas party on December 8.

Presbyterian

Union Vespers were held at the Presbyterian Church on November 18. A Bible professor of Hampden-Sydney, Mr. McAllister, was the speaker. Union fellowship was enjoyed by all following the evening church services.

The regular meeting was held on December 2, followed by fellowship hour.

Methodist

The Wesley Foundation Drama Club has its regular meeting the first Tuesday of each month at 4 p.m. All who are interested in this club should come to the center at this time.

Coffee hour, December 7, will be used for decorating the Student Center and the Christmas tree. Come over at 7 p. m. for fun and fellowship.

On December 11, the Wesley Foundation will have a Christmas Open House at the Center. It will last from 2:30 to 5:30. Everyone is invited.

BurgerRecognized At Hockey Meet

Miss Elizabeth Burger, associate professor of science at Longwood College, was recently selected as an honorary member of the United States Field Hockey Association at the National Conference and Tournament held in Philadelphia on November 20-24.

Throughout the fifty-five years of the history of this sport's organization for women, outstanding sportswomen who have contributed to the advancement of field hockey have been recognized as honorary members.

Miss Burger is a former officer of the USFHA. She had played on the All-American Team for a number of years, serves as a national umpire, has captained the All-American Team in this country and in the international conferences and tournaments, and has recently returned from the International Conference in Australia as Umpire-Manager of the U. S. Team. This honor comes to her after extensive and distinguished service to women's hockey.

Hockey Team Defeats W&M

The Longwood College varsity squad traveled to Williamsburg on Friday, November 16, to play the College of William and Mary in our final game of the season. The first team battled against the William and Mary team and came out the victor by the score of 3 to 1, and the second team followed in good order and won by the score of 2 to 0.

Loretta Kuhn, Anne Wayne Fuller, Nancy Striplin, and Peanuts Grimstead played their last hockey game as members of the Longwood team. Each of these girls has taken a great deal of interest in hockey and the athletic program at Longwood, and Loretta went to the Southeast Sectional Field Hockey tournament this fall as a member of the Tidewater First team.

Plans are being made now for the 1963 International Field Hockey Tournament which will be held in the Ununited States, and Longwood has been asked to help raise funds for this purpose. Nancy George is serving as student fund-raising chairman here at Longwood.

Class Hockey Ends As Freshmen Fall

On November 20 the freshman class and the sophomore class met in the final game of class hockey with the sophomore class coming out the victor. The triumph of the sophomore and senior class gave ten points toward the Color Cup to Green and White.

The senior class went undefeated in class competition. They defeated their sophomore sisters 1 to 0, the juniors 3 to 0, and the freshmen 1 to 0. Their victories came despite the fact that they played without a full team. The other green and white team, the sophomores, won their games against the juniors and freshmen by the score of 1 to 0 and 2 to 0, respectively.

The juniors won only the game against the freshmen, and the freshmen had a winless season. The next opportunity for winning points toward Color Cup will be the class volleyball and basketball games to be held after Christmas.

Rewiring has been going on throughout the school and the work will be continued through the winter. A new line is being laid from the back of the tea room to the West Wing. Fluorescent lighting will be installed in the classrooms. A panel box will be placed in the wall on each floor and the lighting will be controlled individually.

H 2 O Plunges Into Water Fantasy

(Agee Studio, Farmville, Va

The H20 Club adds finishing touches to spectacular water fantasy, "Nutcracker Suite."

The H20 Club will present the annual Christmas water pageant, "The Nutcracker Suite," on Thursday, December 6, at 7 p. m. and Friday, December 7, at 7and 9 p. m. The price of admission is 35 cents.

The pageant, directed by Nancy Richardson with Ann Jeter assisting, will follow the original story based on "The Nutcracker Suite."

Loretta Kuhn plays the part of Maria, a little girl who sneaks downstairs on Christmas morning to find one of her gifts, a nutcracker, portrayed by Anne Edmunds, fighting with the mice men. She throws a shoe at them and the nutcracker turns into a prince charming. The sugar plum fairy, played by Mary Ann Barnett, Maria, and the prince will lead you through the enchanting fantasy of fairy land. There you will see a comical orchestra of bugs, flowers being sprinkled with dew drops from the wands of agile fairies, "swimming" mushrooms, and other sights that will give you a much remembered night of entertainment.

To close the show, there will be a special surprise number. Water pageant chairmen have worked hard to present this surprisingly different finale to top off the entertainment, so if you see the pageant on Thursday night, don't tell your friends who plan to see it Friday about this spectacular climax.

The props committee, headed by Sandy Fitzgerald, has been working since school started to give the pool enclosure fairyland personification. As you enter Maria's house, a typical Christmas scene faces you. Across the pool is the mural of the bug orchestra, vividly painted in striking colors. At the other end, mushrooms of every size and color will be found. The props are truly spectacular and will add so much to the enjoyment of the pageant.

Chairmen of the other committees are: Kate Krebiel, costumes; Nancy Andrews, music; "Peanuts" Winder Grimstead, lighting; and Amanda Dillon, publicity.

The pageant promises to be a highlight of the school year, and everyone is urged to attend one of the performances.

Seeing action on the varsity hockey team for the last time are Evelyn Rowe, "Peanuts" Winder Grimstead, Loretta Kuhn, Anne Wayne Fuller, and Nancy Striplin.

Paschall Speaks To Faculty About Teacher Certification

The State Department of Education is engaged in taking another long look at the present regulations and requirements for the preparation and certification of public school teachers, Dr. Davis Y. Paschall, Director of Teacher Education, recently spoke before the Longwood College faculty on the nature and desirability of this study.

He pointed out that periodically in the past teacher certification requirements have been revised and that this contemplated study is in accord with former procedure. Dr. Paschall also outlined certain controversial points in reference to the certification requirements and their interpretation.

To assist the Department of Education in this work last Thursday, November 29, some fifty or more persons representing all levels of public education attended a meeting in Richmond. Longwood College was represented by Dr. Earl R. Boggs, Dr. Edgar M. Johnson and Mr. M. H. Bittinger.

teenagers in the early part of the action.

Toward the end of the drama Mr. Jordan gave a convincing demonstration of his enlarged role as the dictator, or enemy of mankind, Tom Pretlow, as the Telegraph Boy, provided unexpected humor when he announced in the changing voice of a sixteen-year-old that he was the head of a family and had a wife and two children to provide for.

Pat Leake and Marie Messick, who enacted the roles of Dinosaur and Mammoth, though all but smothered in their encasing costumes, were both humorous and pathetic.

Effective Sets

The sets, which were practically the same for the first and third acts, representing the interior of the Antrobus residence in Excelsior, New Jersey, were simple, dignified, and in good taste. The scenery for the second act, which had for its background an Atlantic City convention, was gaily colored and not too cluttered with detail. The use of the organ loft, with its elevating machine, was perhaps the most inspired arrangement in the production.

At the beginning of the first and second acts, the voice of the announcer was slightly muffled, and the words were spoken too rapidly. On the second evening, however, the sound was much clearer owing to technical improvements, but the announcer's voice was still hard to understand because of the speed of delivery.

But the blame for this should be placed upon the audience, many of whom were talking among themselves and apparently failed to understand that the pictures being shown on the screen and the announcer's voice were part of the play.

Others Mentioned

Others who deserve mention for this successful performance are assistant director, Florence Sogholan, and stage manager Patti Lou Parker; also Pat Walton, Mary Mayo, Vicki Brinkley, Carol Lash, and Alta Ann Wheeler, who were, respectively, in charge of scenery, wardrobe, lighting, properties, and make-up.

After this auspicious beginning of the present theatre season, we shall look forward to Mr. Wiley's production in the spring.

VOLUME XXXVI | Longwood College, Farmville Va., December 12, 1956 | Number 9

Senior Dance To Highlight Yuletide Festivities

(Acee's Studio)

STUDENTS of French and Spanish combine talents to produce colorful Christmas program.

Fete-Fiesta Dramatizes Legends

The Christmas Fete-Fiesta, which will be held in the Main Rec on Friday, December 14 at 8 o'clock, has become an annual spectacle presented to the college jointly by the French and Spanish clubs. It is a departmental project designed to bring to the students a more vivid understanding of the people, whose language is studied, and their customs in celebrating one of the most important holidays of the year.

Laloux, Rothe Authors

Though the Fete-Fiesta has become a spectacle for the college its primary purpose is still reserved for the further development of the French and Spanish classes.

Genevieve Laloux and Nicole Rothe wrote the dramatization for the French legend taken from the miracle plays of the Middle Ages. The legend will be presented according to the Middle Age dramatic conventions. The stage used during the Middle Ages was the area immediately in front of the church. On this stage all the scenes are set and are visible from the beginning of the production with the characters moving from scene to scene making their exits and entrances, always, from the church door.

Molly Workman, with the assistance of Genevieve Laloux, is director of the play. The theme is centered around the birth of the Christ Child and two miracles which were revealed because of God's gift of love and faith to all humanity. The characters are: Joseph, Louise Norman; Mary, Sue LaFontaine; the baker, Donna Boone; the father, Linda Doles; and the girl, Nancy Lenz.

Another feature will be the dances which were adapted for the Fete by Patti Lou Parker. "Pas de Quatre" a ballet with four people will be danced to an excerpt from "Le Coq d'Or". Participating in this dance are: Barbara Simkins, Vicki Brinkley, Mary Linda League, and Patti Lou Parker.

Set in Doll Shop

The setting for the song "Le Noel des Petits Santons" is a doll shop. As in the song, the dolls come to life at midnight on Christmas Eve through the faith of a little boy's belief in them. The thirteen dolls were chosen from classes 111 and 121.

Each of the characters in the legend and the dancers are to be dressed in authentic costumes, with the chorus and other members of French Club dressed in peasant costumes of different regions in France and different eras in French History.

The music and songs directed by Gail Branch will be sung by the chorus, the quartet, and entire French Club. All the songs sung during the Fete have been compiled and typed into a booklet by Nancy Drudge. Each member of the French Club will be given a booklet as a souvenir and as a reference.

The Spanish Club will begin its festivities with "Las Posadas" which are fiestas celebrated in homes, city squares, and in other public places. "Las Posadas" are ceremonies in which both the families and their guests take part.

Immediately after "Las Posadas" a skit depicting Mexican life around the Christmas season will be presented, followed by two dances; the "Sandunga" directed by Elena Flores, and the "Meringue" directed by Daphne R' Arango.

Three Kings

In Mexico the three kings come on January 6 bringing presents to the children instead of our custom of Santa Claus on Christmas Eve. The particular scene, taken from this custom, portrayed this year by the Spanish Club, will be that of a Mexican family anxiously awaiting the arrival of the three kings.

A more serious theme will be revealed in the legend of the origin of the "Poinsettia". A little girl (Pat Walton) is lamenting because she has no flowers to adorn the altar in honor of the Christ Child. An angel (Betty McCleuny) appears explaining that God sees even the tiniest gift.

The Fiesta ends with a Gypsy song and dance to be done by the 421 class which consists of Nan Brimmer, Jeanette Morris, Pat Jones, Bobby Scott Williams, and Traci Faison. Following this will be the traditional breaking of the "Pinatas". These are hanging decorations, filled with candies, which are broken by the children at the end of the festivities.

Pageant To Reveal Student Madonna

The Y.W.C.A. Christmas pageant, "A Christmas Message for Today," will be presented Thursday night, December 13, at 10:15 in Jarman Hall.

Directed by Helen Jean Young, the pageant will be a tableau of seven scenes from Christ's life, covering the period from the Annunciation to the Great Commission. In the Nativity scene the name of the Madonna, chosen by the entire student body, will be revealed. The Madonna, a member of the senior class, will typify the qualities of Christ's mother.

The cast is as follows: narrator, Donna Boone; Gabriel, Mary Lee Teel; Joseph, Cass Connor, Innkeeper, Sally Harneys; shepherds, Virlinda Joyner, Barbara Ensmann, and Jane Denton; children, Celia Carter, Charles Simonini, Judy Baldwin, and Diane Simonini.

As women are Josie Curry, Carolyn Wilson, Annie Mae Williams, and Jo Ann Witten; men, Judy Eckstrom, Jean Johnson, and Julie Robinson; mother, Jerrye Edwards; disciples, Mary Helen Jones, Barbara Odom, Dot Boswell, Scottie Cale, Addie Richardson, Shirley Alcock, Virlinda Joyner, Lois Ogburn, Jo Ann Baldwin, Karen Hood, Patsy Campbell. The Longwood chorus will take the part of the choir.

Following the last scene, the White Christmas offering will be taken.

Gresham Reports On LC Graduates

What are the results of the follow-up program at Longwood College and how are our graduates rated? Mr. Foster Gresham has presented a report on our follow-up program during the past three years to the faculty. The operation of this survey has consisted of visitation, personal conferences, correspondence, questionaires, and coffee hours.

During 1954 and 1955, Mrs. Kathleen C. Cover held conferences with individuals and groups of graduates. This visitation program was designed to indicate an interest on the part of the college in our alumnae and to obtain their reactions as beginning teachers on the adequacy of their training.

Conferences Helpful

Personal conferences with administrators in school systems in which former Longwood students were teaching have resulted in the evaluation of 131 graduates in addition to the acquisition of a number of suggestions for the improvement of our program. These suggestions have been reported to the faculty and administration.

Correspondence during the spring of 1956 with the administrators of school systems in which 1955 graduates were teaching have resulted in evaluations of forty-three alumnae. At the same time questionaires were answered by thirty-six of our 1955 graduates now teaching. The coffee hours held for beginning teachers returning for Circus weekend have helped to bring graduates together with faculty members.

Beneficial Results

Mr. Gresham feels that the follow-up program has had several beneficial results. First, it has helped to establish good public relations. "I found the administrators generally enthusiastic about the opportunity to discuss with someone from the college

Simonini To Speak On Italian Scholar

Dr. R. C. Simonini, Jr., will speak on the program of the Modern Language Association meeting in Washington, D. C., December 27-29. He is head of the Longwood College English department.

Dr. Simonini will read a paper entitled "John Florio, Englishman in Italian" at the Renaissance section meeting during the Friday morning session of the convention. Florio was an Elizabethan linguist who developed new techniques for the study of languages. His many achievements as a scholar, Dr. Simonini says, mark him as one of the foremost humanists of the period.

More than 3,000 scholars from throughout the United States and Canada in fields of the modern languages are expected to register for the seventy-first annual meeting of the MLA. Also attending the meeting from Longwood will be Miss Helen Draper, head of the foreign languages department, and Miss Mary P. Nichols, Dr. Richard K. Meeker, and Dr. Gardner B. Taplin, all of the department of English.

"Charlie Hop" Chosen To Distribute Favors

The Senior Class of 1957 will highlight the Christmas season on Saturday December 15, at 8:00 p.m. when the Longwood gymnasium becomes a ballroom for the scene of Christmas Carousel.

At one end of the gym will be an archway of candy canes and peppermint sticks; at the other end of the gym there will be a sleigh filled with the musicians. Behind them will be a silver wall reflecting the glowing happiness of the evening. The Carousel of Reindeer will come alive and carry forth the Chrismas spirit. Silver trees may be seen here and there, and the murals on the walls will bring all the warm thoughts of Christmas into view.

Back again, after having brought such a delightful time to the students of Longwood last year, are the Collegians from the University of Richmond to lead the wonderland of music.

Lohr To Return

At intermission time, there will be the traditional senior figure with the senior girls all dressed in white Jane Lohr Lee, a member of the 1956 graduating class and Honorary Class Member of the Class of '57, will return to lead the figure.

Favors will be presented to the senior girls at the intermission festivities. "Charlie Hop," faculty advisor and class sponsor, will present the girls with their favors.

Combo Party

Following the dance, there will be a Combo Party for the seniors at Longwood Estate. The Senior Party will be from 12 to 2:15 a.m.

Many hard hours of hard work have been spent to make Christmas Carousel possible. Co-chairmen Shirley Hardy and Jo Davis have been ably assisted in their work by the various committee chairmen which include Nancy Lenz and Jeanne Saunders, decorations; Belle Fitzgerald, publicity; Jackie Sawyer, music; Jackie Pond, tickets; Anne Wayne Fuller, favors; Evelyn Rowe, programs; Margaret Beavers, party after dance; Ann Thomas, figure; and Ann Savedge, floor.

Tickets for the dance sell for $2.40 and are on sale every night.

Longwood Unites Voices With U.Va.; Presents Handel's "Messiah" Sunday

The Longwood College Choir will present its annual Christmas Concert on Sunday, December 16, in Jarman Hall, at 8:30 p.m. The Glee Club of the University of Virginia will appear jointly with the choir, presenting a group by themselves, and combining with the choir in the traditional selections from Handel's "The Messiah." The College Madrigal Singers will also appear on the program.

Mr. Donald MacInnis, the Director of the University Glee Club, will conduct his group in Bach's "In Dulci Jubilo," the English carol, "God Rest Ye Merry, Gentlemen," the French carol, "Les Anges Dans Nos Campagnes," Lockwood's "Christmas Hymn," and Nile's "I Wonder as I Wander."

The Longwood Choir, under the direction of John W. Molnar, will sing a Thirteenth Century plainsong, "Divinum Mysterium," Sweelinck's "Hodie Christus Natus Est," Johann Christian Bach's "Glory to God in the Highest," and four selections from Britten's "Ceremony of Carols." The Madrigal Singers will sing Vittoria's "O Tanquam Agnus," and Gaveart's "Slumber Song of the Infant Jesus."

The two groups will combine to sing the traditional choruses from Handel's "The Messiah." These are "And the Glory of the Lord," "O Thou that Tellest Good Tidings to Zion," with Carol Carson as soloist, "For Unto Us a Child Is Born," "There Were Shepherds," with Gay Allen as soloist, "Glory to God in the Highest," and "Hallelujah."

Assisting Mr. MacInnis will be Mr. David Davis, the Assistant Director of the University Glee Club. From the Longwood Faculty, Mr. James K. McCombs will conduct the Madrigal Singers, Mr. Walter Urben will play the piano accompaniments to several of the choruses, and Miss Josephine Bailey will play the organ accompaniments to the "Messiah" choruses. The student accompanists will be Miss Ann Hart and Miss Elsie Wells, for the Longwood Choir, and Mr. Barry Rogers, for the University Glee Club.

The concert is open to the public. A silver offering will be received.

Children of Farmville Elementary School will present the play, "The Why Fo' Christmas," Monday night, Dec. 17, at 7:30 o'clock in Jarman Hall of Longwood College.

The dramatic production, a part of the Christmas season observance in the public schools, is sponsored by the Elementary P-TA. Student teachers are assisting in preparations.

Consider Christmas

"And the Word Became Flesh and dwelt among us, full of grace and truth."

For the Christian, Christmas is a time for rejoicing in memory of the birth of Jesus, the Saviour of the world, but has not this rejoicing become mockery? We are so busy rejoicing that, as the innkeeper of old, we have no room for the Christ Child. We are so wrapped up in dances, in buying Christmas cards and gifts, in going to parties, and in leaving school to be with the family and friends at home that the idea of fun, excitement and pleasure has outspirited the true meaning of Christmas. Our Joy to the World becomes Joy from the World.

Let us take a step towards rejoicing in the right way by following this simple Christmas formula:

*C*ome All Ye Faithful, Let Us Adore Him."

*H*elp others to find the true spirit of Christmas; if it can be kept for a day, you can keep it always, but you can't keep it alone.

*R*ejoice in spirit and in truth.

*I*nspire others by showing the Christian Way.

*S*ilently thank God for His great love.

*T*ake heart for the future in the belief that the principles of Christianity will triumph.

*M*arvel at the greatness, truth and goodness of the Nativity story. No story could last as long, nor be repeated and still loved as much, if it were not the greatest story ever lived.

"*A*wake, salute the happy morn whereon the Savior of the world was born."

*S*ee the spirit of Christmas as reflected in the eyes of a child.

Letter To The Editor

Straightforward Strategy

One of the advantages of a small school is that you are personally acquainted with your administration. When you meet a member of the Administration or Faculty in the halls of Longwood they can often call you by name. That is one of the characteristics of a small college. The most important characteristic, however, is that you as an individual have a right to voice any opinions directly to the Administration or to your Student Government.

Last week brought up a problem among the student body. A petition was circulated among the students, an anonymous note was sent to the President, and rumors of a rasher appeal were started and circulated. However, due to some wise person or persons this problem was given to the presidents of the four classes, who, through conference with the President of the College, secured satisfying results. This last action is the one which should have been taken in the first place.

Our President has expressed that if ever a problem comes up, he would be glad to have an individual or group discuss the matter with him. He wants to satisfy the students as much as possible and has certainly shown this in the handling of this present problem.

Even in larger schools petitions and strikes are frowned upon. But these larger schools lack what we at Longwood have in our closeness with the Administration. Let us be proud of the fact that the student body of Longwood doesn't need petitions and strikes to obtain what it wants. Let us be proud of the fact that as individuals we may present our problems directly to the President and through conference obtain satisfying results.

Misplaced Letters To Santa Published

It seems as though a few absent-minded Longwood girls mailed their letters to Santa Claus in the wrong place this year, because some of them turned up in the Rotunda copy box. Wishing to do a good deed for we hope Santa reads the Rotunda — we printed these messages to him.

(Ed's Note: We're not sure that all of these writers are Longwood students).

This student (?) (spells terribly) penned a poem to Santa:

Dear Mr. Sandy Claws,
Some childes want electric trains
And some want a doll that bills and cries
Some want trucks an' cars an'
planes
But Mr. Claws I want a—SUSPRISE!

I been pretty good this year
Mama says I coluda been better
But anyway I pulled out a cheer
And set right down to right this letter.
Member Mr. Claws—I want a
SUSPRISE!

Love,
Dottie Boswell

A Longwood student?:
Dear Santi Claus,

Three years ago you bringed me a snow suit. Two years ago you brung me a sled. One years ago you bringed skis. Dear Santi, this year could you pleasee bring me some snow.

Hopefulingly,
Nancy "Bru"

This one couldn't be a Longwood student, evidently her little brother (Dennis, you know, the Menace) asked her to mail it for him:

Dear Santa,

I'm not going to ask for a lot of big stuff this year like a football an da pogo stick. This year all I want is a baby brother. Last year if you can remember, I had it on the end of my list and you brought me everything but that, so this year all I'm going to ask for is a baby brother. Now you gotta bring it to me cause I don't want nothing else.

I want him to be about as tall as the door knob and as big around as Daddy's golf case. I want him to like to eat all the stuff I don't like, like carrots and oatmeal. I want him to like to sleep on the bottom bunk bed and like to pick up toys.

Well, Santa, I gotta go now. Thanks for all the nice stuff you brought me last year.

Love,
Dennis

P. S. Don't tell Mommie and Daddy, Santa, cause I want to keep it a secret. Won't they be surprised when they wake up Christmas morning and see a baby brother under the tree?

Another serious one!:
Dear Santa:

Even tho' I have the humor of Mr. Bittinger, the scientific knowledge of Miss Burger, the versitality of Dr. Schlegel, the attractiveness of Miss Mattox, the dignity of Mr. Gresham, the friendliness of "Charlie Hop," the gentleness of Dr. Moss, and the patience of Job, there is still one thing I've always wanted—the above to be true.

Love,
Demetria Koumparakis

This one is definitely serious!:

Dear Santa,

There are only three things I want you to bring me this Christmas—a lavendar Cadillac, a full-length mink, and four very good research papers. But, Santa, I realize that there are other little girls like me who don't want to be forgotten on Christmas Eve, and I don't want to seem selfish or anything like that—so I'll really understand if the Cadillac and mink aren't in my stocking Christmas morning—but gee, Santa, don't let me down about the papers!

Love,
Flo Sogholan

Here's hoping Santa Claus gives Longwood all its Holiday wishes. Merry Christmas everybody!

P.S. Thanks for letting us go home early, Santa!

Rich, Cross-eyed Bachelor Featured In Wellard's Novel

by Sally Ryan

Two centuries ago a French philosopher and satirist named Voltaire had his characters wandering around in search of the best of all posible worlds.

Now comes a modern novel by Longwood's James Wellard somewhat reminiscent of Voltaire's great work. An Englishman and his old friend, Concimitant Convergent Strabismus, prance through 246 pages looking for the most beautiful woman in the world.

The hero of "The Memoirs of a Cross-Eyed Man" is not only cross-eyed, but bulbous-nosed, walrus mustached, moneyed and a bachelor, which is probably best considering the nature of his quest. He finds his appearance somewhat of a handicap, since "a cross-eyed man can never get around to telling a woman that he loves her—unless, of course, he's wooing the green-grocer's spinster daughter."

Dansielle Ashe's Choice

And Thomas Ashe, savior of beautiful young damsels, is not wooing the green grocer's spinster daughter. His first choice is Danielle, a French girl who seemed to satisfy even his stiff requirements. She, however, has other things in mind, and the disillusioned shining knight proceeds from a Paris night club to a film unit on location in Tunisia, where he finds number two, Shala Delisle, a 21-year-old American movie queen.

Sir Ashe is given the role of King Mutton, later deposed, in the epic "The Queen of Carthage," wherein he meets the object of his search, discovers who her suitors are, and proceeds to protect her interests by getting rid of them one by one. Miss Delisle will only be protected so far, and after a flight across the desert, a camel ride accidentally taken in the best of flowering knighthood style, we find our traveler back at Victoria Station in London, ready to take off for Peru and Rosa Paradis.

Wellard's Travels Traced

The wanderings of Ashe might be those of Wellard himself, who

Assembly Features History of College

Tuesday, December 11, last year's orientation classes, under the auspices of Miss Gleaves and the direction of Mr. Wiley, presented The History of Longwood College From the Beginning to the Present. Slides, costumes, and narration were used to tell the history of the school.

Slides of various buildings and campus scenes at Longwood, taken by Mr. Wiley, were shown; costumed characters, depicting four eras, appeared throughout the narration.

Those girls representing the four major periods were: Dot Marshall, Civil War period; Lou Gray, 1890's; Barbara Heck, 1920's; and Lillian Rosson, the present.

The narration was done by Nancy George.

arrived at Longwood this fall via London, the Mediterranean area and Chicago.

On the packet of this latest book Wellard writes: "I have been many places and done many things and enjoyed most of them, including the curious, and possibly bad, habit I have got into of writing books.

"Of life's three goals—health wealth, and wisdom—I enjoy the first and am still pursuing the other two. In this search for the Grail, I resemble the principle character of "The Memoirs of a Cross-Eyed Man," though I am not normally strabismic, except late at night after marking schoolgirls' themes on "My Ideal Husband."

Other Books Named

Dr. Wellard is the author of 15 books, including "Deep Is the Night," "Summer at the Castle," "Night in Babylon," "Woman Returning," "To a High Mountain" and "Action of the Tiger," which is being filmed by Metro-Goldwyn Mayer.

His non-fiction works include "Man in a Helmet," a biography of Gen George S. Patton, "The Ancient Way" and "Understanding the English."

"The Memoirs of a Cross-Eyed Man," newly published, will be sold at bookstores across the nation. Locally it will be available at the Weyanoke Book Shop.

Science Class Sees UNC Planetarium

Members of Longwood's Science class for Elementary Education majors traveled to Chapel Hill last Thursday to see the Christmas pageant at Morehead Planetarium and to visit the Orrery at the University of North Carolina.

The students visited the Chapel at Duke University in Durham North Carolina, and then proceeded to Chapel Hill. Morehead Planetarium is one of two planetariums in the world that includes an Orrery. The Orrery illustrates the relative motions and positions of the bodies of the solar system.

"Star of Bethlehem", the Christmas pageant, portrays the Christmas story with narration, music, and pictures set within the background of the stars and planets.

FBLA Yule Party Honors Freshmen

Last night at 7:00 the F.B.L.A. held a Christmas party for all in the small auditorium. The party was given to acquaint the freshmen business majors with the F. B.L.A. and its function. Refreshments were served, and entertainment was provided. A very good time was enjoyed by all attending.

The F.B.L.A. is composed of two teams, the Elite team and the Pica team. There was much competition between thes two teams to get new members and also to get old members back.

FTA Adds Members In Initiation Service

The Future Teachers of America, whose main objective is to prepare its members in every way possible for the teaching profession, initiated the following: Jackie Adams, Judy Alexander, Sue Amory, Jean Anderson, Pat Ashby, Emily Atkinson, Hazel Bell, Nan Brimmer, Eleanor Clements, Marjorie Crismond, Jane Crute, Joan Coakley, Suzanne Faison, Mary Ann Foster, Anne Wayne Fuller, Linda Garrison, Sara Hackworth, Barbara R. Library Exhibits Christmas Spirit

Walk into the Longwood Library and enter the magic atmosphere of the Christmas spirit as interpreted by our Art Department. In flurries of angel hair, ornaments, and aluminum hang mobiles of musical notes, bells, and stars, moving with the slightest stir of the wind.

Through the scent of freshly-cut pine appears the center of interest—the tree itself. It stands adorned with candy canes, angles, snow flakes, stars, and unique balls made of foil and colored paper. Presents wrapped like wagons, candles, and newspapers lay temptingly in their modern beauty under the lowest branches of the tree.

On a background of royal blue clouds, angels, and horns proclaim that it is Christmas at Longwood College again.

Two '55 Graduates Rate High Praise

James Parker and Dorothy Rector, 1955 graduates of Longwood, have recently offered excellent performances in Sean O'Casey's, "Red Roses for Me," in Minor Hall's Little Theater in Charlottesville.

Both players, who are doing graduate work at the University of Virginia, were active in dramatics while in school here, taking leading roles in the production of the Longwood Players.

In reviews of the play which was directed by E. Roger Boyle, James was highly praised. He is said to be "the best thing that has happened to the Players in recent years." His performance was described as extremely sensitive and natural.

Lankford To Meet With Researchers

Dr. Francis Lankford, President of the College, will attend a writing conference in connection with the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics at Ann Arbor, Michigan on December 14, 15, and 16. Dr. Lankford is now serving a two-year term as college vice-president of the Council.

The Council has planned three yearbooks, the chapters being written by the top researchers in the field. Being responsible for one of the yearbook's chapters, Dr. Lankford will confer with other authors in Ann Arbor.

H-S Tigers Triumph Over Medical College

Hampden-Sydney, snapping a two-game losing skein, tore into the Medical College of Virginia, Friday night, and came out victorious, 106-61, scoring 68 points in a frantic last half.

The Tigers hit on 51 per cent of their floor shots and converted 24 of 32 four throws in the one-sided triumph that evened their record at 2-2.

Freshman Leon Hawker, with 22 points; freshman Vernelle Martin, with 19; and Horsley Putt, also with 19, were the big scorers for Hampden-Sydney. Ted Shepherd and Warren Carter contributed 10 points apiece.

Retired Professor Enjoys New Hobby

A former member of the Longwood Faculty has taken to raising Weimaraner puppies instead of teaching teachers how to teach. Mr. J. M. Grainger, who was head of the Department of English from 1910 until 1950, now lives on his farm just west of Farmville where he looks after his garden, his cows, his horse, his chickens, his bees, and his Weimaraners.

The Weimaraner is a German breed of dog developed at the ancient city of Weimar as "the super dog to suit the super man." It has the color and shape, speed and grace of a greyhound, the nose and longish ears of a bloodhound, and the hunting talents of a pointer. The most versatile of all hunters, it may be trained to hunt all kinds of game—big or small—on land or in water and even in the air.

Being super-intelligent, gentle and kind in disposition, and also one of the most beautiful of dogs, it makes a devoted pet and companion for man. A real glamor dog and Hollywood favorite, a Weimaraner accompanied Grace Kelly to Europe when she sailed to become Princess of Monaco.

Besides Gray Lady von Albade, the mother dog, Mr. Grainger now has a new litter of eight Weimaraner puppies, which will be just eight weeks old Christmas. He has consented to bring them to the Longwood campus for the students to see and "squeal over!" They will be in front of the Rotunda on Thursday just after lunch.

Borhom, Alumnae, Wins Hockey Honor

Clara Borhom "Bo-Bo" McCarter, a 1954 Longwood graduate, recently received a honorable mention position at the National Conference and Tournament of the United States Field Hockey Association. This means that she was considered the third best player in her position.

"Bo-Bo" never played hockey before coming to Longwood, but while she was here, she was on the varsity team for four years. Since graduation, she has been playing with the Richmond Professional Club.

During the recent tournament, held here at Longwood, "Bo-Bo" received a first position on the Tidewater Team. She then traveled to Delaware, where she was chosen to be on the South Eastern team. Following that, she was sent to the National Tournament in Philadelphia where she received the honorable mention.

FRESHMAN KATHE HEGNSLE, from Denmark, now feels completely American after becoming naturalized Thanksgiving.

Danish Student, Now Citizen, Loses Accent, Likes America

By Linda Doles

Standing in Richmond's District Court November 20 with 100 other immigrants, Kathe Hegnsle, a Longwood freshman from Denmark, repeated the oath of allegiance to the United States and became an American citizen.

It is certain that Kathe (pronounced Katy) will always remember Thanksgiving 1956, and talking to her it is easy to see how glad and proud she is about her newly-acquired citizenship. "I wanted it for so long," she said. "I thought I was doing something real special until I saw that 100 others were taking the oath too." But Kathe still did "something special," and as she described the ceremony adding, "the oath itself means a lot when you think about it," it is apparent that it will always be very special to her.

Parents Naturalized

Her parents became citizens in Jamestown last July 4. If their papers had gone through earlier Kathe would have automatically become a citizen, but after the age of 18 an individual must apply separately.

She and her family have been in the United States living in Richmond for six years. Immigrants applying for citizenship are required to be residents for a 5-year period. The naturalization process requires several things—a lot of "red tape," one of the last important being an oral test on American history. Kathe, a good student, had no trouble with that.

Leaving Denmark when she was 12 she had many close associations with her home-land and hated to leave family and friends. Born in the city of Aarhus and growing up in the town of Vejle and later Copenhagen, Kathe had lived the average life of any little Danish girl. She went to school, took dreaded dancing lessons, learned to ski and ice skate.

Schools Different

The schools she attended are very different from the American system in several ways. Classes are scheduled like our college—different classes and teachers during the week and no Saturday holiday. There are no extra-curricular activities, schools are "purely academic."

"After the fifth grade children are given a test which if passed enables them to continue to four years of work is similar to our high school. They are able to take the test in the sixth and seventh grades also. If the test is not passed they can remain in the school till the twelfth grade and then end their formal education, while students who enter the "high school" for four years usually continue their studies at a university.

The winters in Denmark are long, dark, and cold; summer vacation is from the end of June till the middle of August. Winter sports—ice skating, skiing, and others are most popular and Kathe remarked that they are "one thing I really miss."

Recalls War

Although young then, Kathe recalls "flashes of pictures" about incidents that occurred in Denmark during World War II. She remembers being scared during air raids, especially when her father's store was bombed, she and her family watching from their home.

Russian Threat

The Hegnsle's reasons for leaving Denmark are many. The threat from Russia was one of the main ones, and also, as Kathe said, "Europeans think America is a land of 'milk and honey'." They had dreamed of America for a long time and finally in 1950 they made the decision.

Arriving in New York in April after a long ocean trip, Kathe said, "All of it threw me for a spin, everything was so new to me." Unable to speak or understand English, everything was different to the Hegnsles.

They drove to Richmond just as spring was coming, a beautiful welcome. The old city was so "picturesque and pretty," and Kathe fell in love with the Dogwood trees.

She entered the seventh grade the following September after taking private English lessons all summer. She attended Hermitage High School and took part in many extra-curricular activities.

Christian Education Major

Here at Longwood Kathe is a sociology major but her main interest is Christian Education.

Gresham's Study

our graduates and their problems, and I believe that each visit helped to establish a closer relationship between the college and the school visited", says Mr. Gresham in his report.

The second result of the program was several suggestions for the improvement of our training program. These suggestions will be passed on to the departments and discussed with supervising teachers.

Thirdly, the follow-up program is a help to beginning teachers. Coffee hours provide graduates with the opportunity to discuss their experiences as teachers with members of the faculty and supervising teachers.

Appraisal Provided

Finally, the program has provided an appraisal of our work. These evaluations of our graduates over the past four years serve as a judgment of the effectiveness of Longwood College as a teacher-training institution.

The results of this program show a consistent advance in the number of graduates rated by school administrators as excellent or above average. An increase from 48% for the class of 1952 to 74% for the class of 1955 is encouraging.

Many teacher-training colleges and universities report some form of follow-up activities. Actual assistance to public school officials in the adjustment of graduates to the requirements of teaching, visitation, observation, counseling, bulletins and newsletters are included in the follow-up activities of many schools.

French Informant To Visit Michigan

Genevieve Laloux, our French student assistant, will spend her Christmas vacation at Michigan State University with other foreign students from colleges throughout the United States.

These students are invited to Michigan State University for a "Christmas Adventure in World Understanding." This program is designed exclusively for a select group of 125 foreign students. Besides being one of the 125 accepted, Genevieve also was awarded one of the few scholarships offered to the students.

While at Michigan State University she will visit various Detroit industrial firms, an automobile plant, farms of the surrounding area, and have discussions with business and labor leaders, plus a tour of the state capitol and meeting with prominent public officials. The program consists, too, of parties, discussions, movies and spending Christmas Eve with a family in East Lansing, Michigan.

Michigan State University sponsors a "Christmas Advent in World Understanding" to give the foreign students a brief but full experience of life in the midwestern United States.

Dancers To Be On TV

"Nutcracker Suite," as produced by the Floyd Ward school of dance, will be shown Monday at 5 p. m. over channel 7, WDBJ-TV, in Roanoke.

WFLO Sponsors Safety Production

Two Longwood College and two Hampden-Sydney students, a Longwood assistant professor, and WFLO Station manager have just completed a dramatic radio show for the Virginia Governor's Highway Safety Committee.

The production, transcribed for state wide programming, is a quarter hour program titled "Four Who Walk with Death." It tells a gruesome story of four pedestrians who are typical of the thousands who meet death annually on the nation's streets and highways. The program was broadcast on WFLO Saturday, December 8, at 4 p. m. It will be heard on nearly all Virginia radio stations some time during December.

Those who appear in the program are: Garnett Smith, 1200 Confederate Avenue, Richmond, Virginia; Charter Wells, Jr., 210 West 33rd Street, Norfolk 4, Virginia; Donna Boone, 512 Park Blvd., Marion, Virginia; Barbara Burnside, 212 South Courthouse Road, Arlington, Virginia; Mr. David W. Wiley, Assistant Professor of Speech and Drama, Longwood College, and Mr. John D. Wilson, WFLO Radio Station manager. The program was produced in radio station WFLO studios.

Construction of Dorm Awaits Final Approval

Bids for the construction of the new 171 student dormitory at Longwood were open last week in the office of J. H. Wamsley, business manager and treasurer of the College. Low bid of $563,000 was submitted by John W. Daniel and Company of Danville.

Two local firms entered bids on the new dormitory. Mottley Construction Company submitted a bid of 578,777, and Taylor Manufacturing Company bid 616,259.

Approval Needed

The bids will go to Governor Thomas B. Stanley for approval before work can be started on the project. Wamsley estimated that the low bid should be approved within a week and construction will begin as soon as posible.

Wamsley said that the price of removing this building was included in the base cost of the estimates for the new dormitory.

Appropriations

The General Assembly appropriated money for construction at several other state colleges. The amount of money appropriated came to $3,000,000 and was ear-marked for the following other projects: Madison College—two dormitories, each housing 180 students, $346,500 each; William and Mary—200-student dormitory, $647,500; and Virginia School for the Deaf and Blind—classroom building and equipment, $335,000.

Miss Kate Trent, professor of education and elementary supervisor, plans to attend Peabody College for Teachers on a leave of absence. She will further study reading education for children while there.

Trent Gets Absence Leave For Child Study at Peabody

By LINDA DOLES

What better place to teach than where one first learned to teach? So besides loving her alma mater Kate Trent found other reasons for returning to Longwood College where she now is assistant professor of Education and Supervisor of the primary grades in the Elementary Training School.

Soon, however, having obtained a leave of absence, Miss Trent will journey to Nashville to attend the Spring Quarter of Peabody College for Teachers.

There she will take classes and work with children in the field in which she is "particularly interested"—that of reading. She is leaving in February in order to have a month's observation in the demonstration school and child study center there before the session begins in March.

Noted Elementary Worker

Miss Trent, who now has a prominent career in elementary work, began her studies in this field early. For her last two years in high school she was chosen as one of 40 local girls to board at Longwod and be taught in regular classes by student teachers and professors. This was the beginning of the college's now-extensive student practice teaching program.

Outstanding College Student

Feeling quite at home at the college by then, Miss Trent from nearby Buckingham County, decided to continue her education right here and entered college. Her interesting college life was spotlighted by the office of president of Student Government her senior year. She also was a member of Alpha Kappa Gamma, Student Standards, and of Sigma Sigma Sigma social sorority.

After graduation Miss Trent went to Columbia University to receive her master's degree. She spent a year of study at Catholic University in Washington, D. C.

Attends Coumbia

After teaching in the public schools of Virginia in Richmond, she taught at Mary Washington College. Next she went to Michigan State Normal College, then Wilson Teachers' College in Washington, D. C. In all these schools she served as supervisor in the elementary training schools. One summer she also taught in a reading clinic in Lincoln

Prefers Longwood

But Miss Trent's wish—"I always hoped to teach at Longwood College"—came true and nine years ago she came back to become supervisor in the primary grades. Four years ago she became general supervisor of the primary grades and began teaching education classes in the college.

Miss Trent is a member of Delta Kappa Gamma, honorary teachers' organization. Here in Farmville she belongs to John's Memorial Episcopal Church and is very active in its choir. In summer she relaxes from her work here at her home in Buckingham County.

A Rec Dance will be sponsored by the Student Standards Committee on Saturday night from 8:00 until 12:00. Admission charge will be ten cents and music will be provided free of charge.

Entertainment will be given during the evening. Among the features will be the "Freshman Quartet" with vocal selections; Carolyn DeHaven in a dance number; and Dixie Hilliard with a song. Jane Moore will accompany the various selections.

Cheerful Cherubs To Brighten Study For Exam Week

Dreading preparing for exams? Even during that period of hectic concentration there can be an air of cheerfulness and joyful surprises.

Fun to Exams

The Baptist Student Union is sponsoring again Cheerful Cherub. Longwood Ladies' favorite game. This game was devised to add a little fun to exam period and lift the strain and tension of studying. All students who wish to join the Cheerful Cherub game will sign-up at supper tonight.

Rules for Game

Each person who signs up will be given a secret cherub as well as being a secret cherub for someone else. The game will start Monday, January 21. The rules of the game are:

1. A Cheerful Cherub visits the person to whom she has been assigned every day leaving candy, gum, or something else nice with a note or verse to make the day more sheerful.

2. A Cheerful Cherub keeps his identity a secret until the last day of the game.

"Mystery-Horror" Film Now Showing At State

The second in the Better Film Series, "Diabolique," is now being shown at the State Theater. This French Thriller has continuously received ratings of "very good" since its release in November, 1955.

The trouble with too many mystery films is that they are not very mystifying and with too many horror films that they are insufficiently frightening. "Diabolique," a new mystery-horror film from France, is extraordinarily successful on both counts.

Rare Movie

Indeed it is so good and rare of its kind that exhibitors who do not ordinarily play foreign products would do well to take a look at this picture and weigh its possibilities for their patronage. Overcoming resistance to the subtitles (which are excellent) is the only problem.

That shouldn't be too much of a barrier to enjoyment, however, for filmgoers whose idea of a good time is in being scared half to death.

Gruesome Murder

Director H. C. Clouzot starts his assault on the audience's nerves early with a gruesome murder, mystifies them as to the whereabouts of the corpse throughout and then builds up to a climax, which, for unmitigated horror, has not been matched on any screen for years and years.

Attention Snatcher

Fascinating, too, are the characters in this story, whose machinations snatch attention from the start. The headmaster of a private boys' school in a French village is despised for his tyrannical ways by everyone—but by no one so much as his wife and his mistress, both of whom are teachers in the school and past friends.

Fed up with his many abuses, the two women decide to murder him, which they do forthwith. But then the corpse mysteriously disappears, and the rest of the film is concerned with their efforts to track it down. The solution lies in a surprising gimmick that is worthy of Agatha Christie, and the build-up to it seldom lets up in suspense.

Major credit for the picture's success must go to M. Clouzot, who, in addition to directing, was producer and wrote the screen play in collaboration with G. Geronimi.

Realistic

The acting, like the production, is on a high level of realism with Simone Signoret particularly effective as the more cold-blooded of the murderesses. Vera Clouzot provides a strong contrast as her weak and unwilling accomplice, and Paul Meurisse is odious as their victim.

Degrees Awarded As Semester Ends

Twelve Longwood College students will receive degrees at the end of the current semester. The February graduating class is composed of nine Elementary Education majors and three Business Education majors.

Recipients

Diane Acree, an Elementary Education major from Tappahannock, plans to teach in Chesterfield County. (Mrs.) Jacqueline Edwards Bly, of Franklin, will be teaching in the elementary school in Franklin. Ellen Willis of Rice, Hazel Hanks of Robley, Jean Hines Morris of Gladys, and Margaret Hudnall of Mila, will be teaching in the elementary schools of Henrico County.

(Mrs.) Virginia Crockett Ingle, a Business Education major, will remain in Cumberland, where she is teaching at present. (Mrs.) Barbara Ward, Elementary Education major from Norfolk, will be teaching in Norfolk.

Others Make Plans

Mrs. Mary Alice Roberts has accepted a secretarial position at Radford. She is a Business Education major from Roanoke. Peggy Packett Straughan of Warsaw and Sara Lou Wendenburg McRee of Aylett plan to join their husbands. Wedding bells are in the future for Joan Knight Jones, Elementary Education major from Montross. Joan plans to be married in June. She plans to teach in Montross until then.

Jamestown Theme Chosen for Contest

Once again the Colonnade is sponsoring a contest to encourage creative writing among the student body. This will mark the fourth consecutive year in which the winter issue of the Colonnade has been devoted primarily to the winning entires of the contest.

The Colonnade has become an annual link in the extracurricular activities at Longwood, designed to inspire more students to develop their creative writing ability and to have their work in competition and print.

Theme

The theme chosen this year was taken from the Jamestown Centennial which will be celebrated this summer. The theme is "Early Virginia to the Revolution." All topics must be taken from the period of the first settlement in America up to the Revolution.

One-Act Play

This year a fourth category, the one-act-play, has been added to the previous three; poetry, short story, and essay. Students are being especially urged to choose this category, the one-act-play, in order to balance the entries in all categories.

As far as space allows the prize-winning entries will be printed in the winter issue of the Colonnade. Also, in each category there is offered $5. first prize and $3. second prize.

The deadline has been set for January 19, 1957.

Wamsley Watches Worn Waterways

The freshmen are really in hot water now and they have one of their fellow classmates to thank for it.

It seems that one industrious freshman was preparing a paper on the history of the water system at Longwood College. In order to secure information, she went to Mr. Wamsley, who described the college's water system at great length. He concluded by telling her of the recently remodeled plumbing in the freshman dorm and emphasized its effectiveness in supplying the girls with hot water.

Surprise

You can imagine his surprise when the young lady calmly stated, "But, Mr. Wamsley, we don't have any hot water in the freshman dorm!"

Upon investigation, Mr. Wamsley discovered that the freshmen really didn't have any hot water due to corrosion in the pipe lines. The lines were repaired during the Christmas holiday, however, and now the freshmen enjoy the home-like comfort of hot water.

Serious Situation

It is probable that each and every member of the student body realizes and is concerned over a very serious situation which has arisen on our campus. The nature of the situation is not new or different in that it has not arisen before on this and other campuses, not is it one which is limited to the college environment. However, each incident which contributes to the over-all situation increases the gravity of the problem, and the person or persons involved must be dealt with severely.

As was pointed out in the general student body meeting of last week, the responsibility of dealing with this problem is not in the hands of one or a few members of our student body. The members of our Student Council, who were elected by the student body and vested with the authority of governing and regulating student life here at Longwood, could not be expected to single-handedly control a situation such as this which affects indirectly a vast majority of the students on campus. It should be kept in mind that this is a delicate situation which requires the attention and cooperation of every member of the student body.

The responsibility for this type of problem was assumed by each and every member of the student body when she entered Longwood and voluntarily pledged her name to support and abide by the Honor Code which exists here. All problems which arise under the provisions of these simple but significant words must be met, at least in part, by the students themselves apart from the Student Council.

One of the greatest ways which students could carry out this responsibility is to report immediately and accurately any incidents or facts which may have bearing on the problem at hand to those in authority. In some cases definite action may be taken in controlling situation only immediately after it has occurred, in which cases facts must be clear and accurate.

There are many other ways in which the individual student may assume part of the responsibility of this problem. There are ways in which individual students may lessen or even eliminate the possibility of these "incidents" occurring at all, since the actual responsibility of personal property is of individual concern. However, when when this gets "out of hand" the council uses the power with which it is vested to explore the situation.

There is one way in particular in which students, perhaps without realizing it, antagonize and contribute to the severity of this and many other types of problems, this phase being the most difficult to control or cope with. Whenever something large, serious, or otherwise impressive arises among a large group of students, there is an overwhelming tendency to discuss, exaggerate, distort and even improvise the facts concerning the situation. The circulating of rumors, distorted facts, and exaggerated details can easily create an atmosphere of tension, fear, and in many cases panic which often turns out to be more serious than the problem involved.

There are actually few students who are not guilty of touching up or adding to the facts at one time or another on campus, but the seriousness of this tendency on a large scale in a problem such as the one at hand must be felt and checked by each student in order to keep emotional involvement under control. There is in reality no way of foreseeing how long such a situation may prevail on our campus.

It is the desire of the Student Council, the students at large, the Administration, the Faculty, and all others involved in student life at Longwood that something may be done in the near future to put this situation and the problems connected with it behind us for good. Meanwhile, it is hoped that students will cooperate and assist by assuming a personal responsibility towards its elimination.

Inside Improvements

Returning to school after the past holiday, students were soon aware of the improvements which are being made in our dining room. At the present time the painting of the walls and tables has been completed. The chairs will also be sprayed a light green.

Plans are now being made to refinish the floor, adding a new strip down the center isle. Every window will have soft green curtains. Most of the new china, a Bombay pattern of Syracuse china, has now arrived and will be in use when the new dishwashing machine is installed. According to the committee in charge of dining room improvements, these plans will be completed before Founders' Day.

The Administration is clearly doing its part in improving our dining room. At the present time, it appears that we students are not sharing our own responsibility in keeping our dining room and its entrance a very neat place. Before each meal, coats and books may be found cluttering the Rotunda. The entrance to the dining room, which has two large hangers, takes on a very untidy look also. Inside the dining room are five long hangers. Therefore, it is unnecessary for students to simply throw their coats in any convenient place around them.

Students are given the privilege of smoking at the dining room entrance. The cigarette butts which are usually scattered about the floor after each meal show much unconcern on the students' behalf for the appearance of our school. Unless smokers become more aware of proper disposal of cigarette butts, they will be asked to smoke down in the snack instead.

This place is a passageway. After the bells ring for meals, students should not continue standing there; but should move so students may enter the dining room without feeling they are at a cashmere sweater sale.

Lets try to do our part. The administration is doing theirs.

Peanuts, Milk Cure Advised For Anything But Insomnia

From Cornet

A friend of mine, having heard that I am sometimes troubled with insomnia, suggested the following plan:

"Eat a pint of peanuts, and drink two or three glasses of milk just before retiring. You'll be asleep in no time."

I did so and my friend was right. I soon fell asleep. Then a man with his head under his arm came along and asked me if I wanted to buy his feet. As we were dickering, the dragon on which I was riding slipped out of his skin and left me floating in mid-air.

While I was considering just how I was going to get down, a bull with two heads peered at me over the edge of the wall and said he would haul me up if I would climb up and rig a windlass for him. Then, as I was sliding down the mountain the brakeman came in and I asked him when the train would reach my station. "We passed that four hundred years ago," he said, as he folded up the train and slipped it into his vest pocket.

At this point the clown came in and pulled the center-pole out of the ground, lifting the tent and all the people up into the air, while I stood below watching myself go out of sight among the clouds.

With that I woke up and found that I had been sleeping exactly ten minutes!

Alumna To Study in Mexico

Helen Warriner, a 1956 graduate of Longwood College, has been awarded the Dorothea Buck Latin-American Fellowship, given annually by the Virginia Federation of Women's Clubs.

Teaches In Richmond

Helen is now an English and general language teacher at Albert H. Hill Junior High School in Richmond. She will leave the last of February to take up her studies at the University of Mexico in Mexico City. There she hopes to specialize in Spanish literature and history with some emphasis also on Spanish-American literature.

Spanish Major

"I hope I don't have too much trouble with the language," she told a Richmond News Leader reporter. "After all it was my major at Longwood College."

After learning that the fellowship was being offered this year to a Virginian seeking to study in Latin America, Helen went to Lynchburg to meet and be interviewed by Mrs. James W. Wiltshire Jr., chairman of the committee.

Mrs. Wiltshire, in announcing the award, commented that it was established "for the purpose of creating friendship and better understanding between the people of the United States and the people of Latin America."

Carrying a stipend of $1,000 it is given alternately to a Virginian for study in Latin America and a student from that area for study in a Virginia institution.

Longstreet's Book Depicts Jazz Life

NEW ORLEANS, LA.(Special) "They didn't sing the blues in the rich places, in the smart nightclubs in the old days. They went on tour, —played black-and-tan joints, the smoky little places, the broken-down roadhouses, the ratty vaudeville houses failing to fight off the movies. It was a time and an era before people knew the blues were art, and it was a hard livin' and a lonely thing."

Inspiration?

What led the great jazz musicians of our era to follow their nomadic, unstable, often tragic trade in the "smoky little places" of New Orleans, Chicago, Kansas City, Memphis? Was it mere accident, or instinct, or keen foresight that brought them together in the crowded barrel-house joints to put together new sounds?

In "The Real Jazz Old and New" published today by Louisiana State University Press, Stephen Longstreet traces some of the psychological motives of the great jazz figures of the era and tells their stories in their own language. Further, he looks deep into the motives behind the music itself—its origins, influences, modifications, and characteristic forms. Throughout is the theme that Jazz is really a unique business: it can introduce us to the sublime when its feet are still tapping out a boogie-beat.

Jazz Illustrated

To bring this history into even more exciting focus, "The Real Jazz" has been lavishly illustrated by the author with full-page drawings that proudly strut the real stuff—they are the personification of jazz itself.

As author Longstreet says, "You can begin anyplace" in telling the Jazz story. He prefers to begin in cultures—Negro, Spanish, French, New Orleans where any number of Caribbean—churned together, and where the very earliest syncopated music, distinctly African, was beat out on the bones and tom-toms in Congo Square.

By 1900 the jazzmen were drifting on to other places. Longstreet picks up the story in Chicago and follows the sometimes-up, sometimes-down careers of Jelly Roll Morton, Kid Oliver, Nick LaRocca, Louis Armstrong and Bix Beiderbeck

Jazz Label

Then, all of a sudden, after 1918, it was "The Jazz Age." They wore the label self-consciously, those shieks and flappers, and they patronized jazz music, so jazz found itself in the social whirl and the livin' was high. "You can't imagine Jazz getting any place in Richmond or Seattle. It had to be a town where the dyin' was easy, the money come by without hard work, and the citizens not too much in love with easy odds."

To Concert Hall

At the height of this frenzy two names stood at the fore: Bix Beiderbecke and Louie Armstrong. Their stories make two absorbing and contrasting chapters—one a success story and the other pure tragedy.

Later, jazz moved inevitably home to Harlem, where in the 30's it became "swing," led by people like Coleman Hawkins, Glenn Miller, Benny Goodman, Red Norvo, Jack Teagarden, Fats Waller, Gene Krupa and Dorsey Brothers. And of course, New Yorker George Gershwin, whose "Rhapsody in Blue" and "Concerto in F" attempted to reconcile jazz with the concert hall.

Colorful Book

So, on and on, come the names and faces and sounds. Longstreet records them faithfully and excitingly in this big colorful book. He does not by-pass the hard times, but he does not let them triumph over the pure pleasure of reading the real jazz story. Big and brassy as a Rampart Street parade, mournful as The Misery Blues, "The Real Jazz Old and New" (Louisiana State University Press, $5.00) will hang in your memory as long as the music which brought it forth.

Tigers Score Victories After Tournament

Coach Weenie Miller's rapidly improving Hampden-Sydney Tigers, fresh from a dazzling performance in the Little Eight Tournament at Roanoke, returned to their home court last week where they met rugged foes.

Win By Thirty Points

The Bengal five, after advancing to the semi-finals of the Quantico Invitational Tournament, journeyed to Roanoke, where they walked off with the championship in the Little Eight Tourney there. The Tigers decisively defeated the Yellow Jackets of Randolph-Macon by thirty points in the deciding contest of the tournament. The Tigers went into the tournament second-seeded, but after their first game they were picked the team to win.

Decisive Win

On Tuesday night, the Bengals again met Randolph-Macon in a game which was a thriller all the way. The decisive win meant a lot to the Tigers, mainly due to the traditional rivalry the two school have built up. On Friday, January 11, the Tigers played host to Mt. Saint Mary's, a team which is capable of holding its own against any foe, but again the Tigers came out victorious.

Defeats Foe

The next night, Saturday, January 12, Coach Miller and his boys had their jobs cut out for them as they battled a much-improved V.M.I. quintet. However, the Tigers came through in true Hampden-Sydney style and defeated the Big Six foe, 93-83.

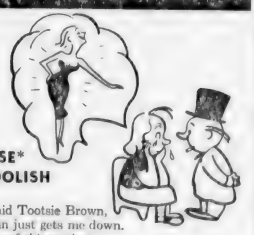
Veteran Performer

Hampden-Sydney's 1956-57 round-ball aspirations have been greatly brightened by the veteran-like performance of little freshman guard, Leon Hawker. Hawker is a product of George Washington High in Danville, and his fine play has tabbed him as one of the young players in the Old Dominion to watch for the next four years.

Forward Horsley Putt, a junior from Lynchburg, has contributed greatly to the recent surge of the Tigers cage fortunes. His speed and scoring have definitely aided in the Bengals improvement, and he stands as the leading rebounder on the squad.

Trouble Spellers

Veterans Doug Joyce, Russ Holcomb, and Warren Carter have found themselves now and these three, coupled with the above-mentioned Hawker and Putt, form a team which could spell trouble for any quintet in the state.



Backing these five up will be Ted Shepherd and freshmen Gil Sayres and Vernelle Martin, who have provided more than adequate bench strength for the Bengals all season.

If Hampden-Sydney can continue to keep up the caliber of basketball they have exhibited as of late, their chances for the remainder of the season appear extremely bright.

PENNY WISE* POUND FOOLISH

"I'm sad to say," said Tootsie Brown,
"The weight I gain just gets me down.
Each bite, each drop of this or that,
Immediately turns to fat.
Some girls, I note, can eat and eat
And yet they still look trim and neat.
To aggravate the situation
I much dislike my fat's location.
I wouldn't so much want to change me,
If only I could rearrange me."

Agee Studio

Chairmen of the committees for Junior Dance are busily planning for the class' first dance. Carole Stroupe is general chairman for the festivity.

Come to the Mardi Gras! Come to the Mardi Gras! Festivities of the Mardi Gras will come alive at Longwood on February 23, at 8:00 p.m. in the Longwood gymnasium, when the Junior Class presents the second formal dance of the season.

Also, he secures the musicians for road shows, such as "South Pacific," "Pajama Game," and the Chicago Ballet, which appear at the Mosque in Richmond.

In addition, he conducts the weekly outdoor concerts at the Carillon in Byrd Park during the summer. In October, he played for the Tobacco Festival in Richmond.

Junior Party

Following the dance will be a party for the members of the Junior Class.

The committee for decorations for the dance will be headed by Judy Holderman. Co-chairmen for the party afterwards are Shirley Alcock and Emily Atkinson; publicity chairman is Sally Tilson; chairman of the ticket committee is Sue Jett; in charge of music is B. J. Spruhan; favors will be handled by Jackie Harnsberger and Carolyn Stonnell; and invitations, Carolyn Kelly.

Grants Offered For Study In Britain, France, Austria

Kenneth Holland, president of the Institute of International Education, has announced the following scholarships for graduate and undergraduate study in foreign universities during the summer of 1957. Applicants for all the awards should apply to the Institute, the central office of which is located at 1 East 67th Street, New York City. The regional office of the organization for this area is 1530 "P" Street, N. W., Washington 5, D. C.

Study In England

Summer study at British universities is open to American students in 1957. Six-week courses will be offered at Oxford, at Stratford-on-Avon, and at the capital cities of London and Edinburgh.

Limited Group

A limited number of scholarships will be available to American students. Two full scholarships are reserved for graduate students. Award and admission application forms may be secured from the Institute of International Education in New York City or from its regional offices in Chicago, Denver, Houston, San Francisco and Washington.

Closing date for scholarship applications is March 1, 1957, for regular applications, March 30, 1957.

British Universities have combined annually since 1948 to organize a special program of summer schools. Courses are planned to serve the needs of post-graduate students, but highly qualified undergraduates in their junior or senior years will be accepted. Many American universities allow credit for attendance at these sessions to both graduate and undergraduate students.

Courses Offered

Courses to be offered next summer are: Shakespeare and Elizabethan Drama, the University of Birmingham course given at Stratford; Literature and Art in Georgian England, 1740-1830, at the University of London; Literature, Politics and the Arts in Seventeenth-Century England, at Oxford University; The European Inheritance given by the Scottish Universities at the University of Edinburgh; and English Law and Jurisprudence at the University of London. The last course is open only to students enrolled in accredited law and law school graduates.

Excursions

Each of the schools provides a variety of excursions to places of interest in its area and often arranges visits which are not open to the general public.

These courses are not designed primarily for undergraduates. In previous years, graduate students, teachers and mature people working in a variety of professional fields have attended the schools with profit.

Study In France

Opportunities to study or teach in France during 1957-58 are available to American graduate students. The French Government is offering approximately thirty university fellowships through the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and forty teaching assistantships through the Ministry of Education. The fellowship awards are for students with definite academic projects or study plans. The assistantships afford language teaching experience and an opportunity to become better acquainted with France.

Nominations

Nominations of candidates for fellowships and assistantships will be made by a joint committee of French and American educators working in cooperation with the French Cultural Services and the Institute of International Education.

Closing date for application is February 1, 1957.

Requirements

The French Government awards are open to men and women preferably under 30 years of age. Applicants must be U. S. citizens. Other eligibility requirements are: a bachelors degree from an American college or university by the time of departure; good academic record; good knowledge of French; correct usage of English; good moral character, personality and adaptability; and good health. Assistants must be unmarried, and unmarried candidates are preferred for the fellowships.

Recipients of French teaching assistantships will teach conversational English in secondary schools and teacher training institutions in France. These posts are intended for future teachers of French. A few applicants with special training in American literature and some experience in college teaching may be selected for postes de lecteurs, teaching assignments in French universities. Stipends cover maintenance.

Graduate fellowships are open to students in all fields of study. In the field of medicine, candidates must have the M. D. degree. Fellows study in French universities and other state institutions. These awards provide tuition and a modest maintenance.

Austrian Scholarships

Four scholarships for graduate study in Austria during 1957-58 are offered to American students by the Austrian government. March 1, 1957 is the closing date for the competition, which is open to unmarried American citizens.

Expenses

The scholarships include eight monthly stipends of 1,600 Austrian schillings (approximately $100), enough to cover room and board as well as tuition and incidental expenses. One travel payment of 1,400 Austrian schillings (approximately $55) will be offered. Grantees will be responsible for all other expenses, including round trip travel. Applicants may, if eligible, apply for Fulbright travel grants to cover the costs of international travel.

The awards may be used for study at an Austrian university or institution of higher learning in all fields, including history, social sciences, language, literature, and other liberal arts subjects.

Christian Study Conference Calls for Unity on Campus

Ann Glover, sponsored by the "Y" as a representative from Longwood, Evelyn Roache, and Mary Davis attended the United Student Christian Council Southeastern Regional Study Conference held at Davidson College, North Carolina, December 27 through January 1. This council is composed of eleven denominational groups and the student YMCA and YWCA.

Interracial Group

Unique in its emphasis upon group and individual study, this interracial conference brought together students, faculty, and administrative officials from 15 different Christian denominations and 126 colleges, including 20 Negro students. One of seven regional conferences held during the Christmas holidays, ot attracted 319 deelgates.

Disunity

The conference theme, "Our United Witness on the Campus" was explored in platform addresses, facilitated discussions, and small group Bible study. Professor Waldo Beach of Duke University in five addresses described the ideal of the university, the social and intellectual disunity on the campus, and possible strategies for the recovery of wholeness in the academic community.

The student-led Bible study focused upon the unity of the Church in the New Testament, under the guidance of Professor Albert C. Winn of Stillman College Evening interest groups discussed stragtegy for Christion concern in fraternities and sororities, student government, summer work projects, eucumenical relations, study groups, religious emphasis weeks, and race relations.

Worship was according to the various traditions represented in the conference and was led by the Conference Chaplain, the Reverend Irvin Elligen of Richmond, Virginia. Larry Eisenberg of Nashville, Tennessee, served as Conference Fellowship Director.

Enlarge Programs

"This conference will help all student Christian movements recognize the importance of study as a Christian calling, and enlarge their programs of study on the campus," said Herluf Jensen, Executive Secretary of the USCC. "We have learned much here about our disunity and the need for more unity in our witnessing on the campus."

One of our own students has said that the conference wasn't a peaches-and-cream affair; three to four hours a day were spent in studying, but each person got something from the conference which he couldn't transmit to other people in mere words.

Players To Stage "The Crucible"

The Rotunda

See "Romeo and Juliet" Tonight

VOLUME XXXVI | Longwood College, Farmville Va., February 13, 1957 | Number 11

Dean Gleaves Announces Coming Retirement

Foreign Film Playing Here

ROMEO AND JULIET, another presentation in the series of Foreign Films, is playing tonight at the State Theater.

This UA-Rank-Universalcine production of Shakespeare's famous romantic tragedy is a significant contribution to the art of the motion picture. It is a beautiful retelling, against an Italian Renaissance background, of the ever new tragic story of young love engraved in the minds and hearts of English-speaking peoples by William Shakespeare.

Although the words are Shakespeare's, credit for the many excellencies of the picture also must go to Renalto Castellani, who adapted the play to the screen and directed it, to the Technicolor company for exquisite color, and to the Italian Craftsmen who fashioned the buildings and sets used.

The structure, the characterizations and most of the rich imagery of the dialogue of Shakespeare's play have been retained. The text of the play, of course, has been shortened. The camera does its part in telling the story of the "star-crossed lovers." The picture's 140 minutes of running time utilize more of the words and spirit of Shakespeare than was possible in the 1936 MGM version which ran two hours. Castellani's picture was made mostly in Italy in a reconstruction of the times of the story, in color by Technicolor and with two young people.

Laurence Harvey, Romeo, has appeared in a number of British films and should have a bright future. Susan Shentall's screen future already may be behind her. The role of Juliet was her first, and she has announced, her last part. If that decision is not changed, the British film industry will have lost one of its potential stars of first magnitude.

Stanley Okays Dorm Bid

Governor Thomas B. Stanley has given final approval for the construction of the new 171-student dormitory here, according to J. H. Wamsley, business manager and treasurer of the college.

The construction of this estimated $562,700 senior dormitory will begin in April. This bid was given by John W. Daniel and Company of Danville. The destruction of the former Venable home located on the corner of Pine and Madison gives evidence of work underway for the new building.

Matches Junior Wing

From the outside the new dormitory will completely match the junior wing of Cunningham Hall. All changes will be inside the building. When Cunningham Hall was first built, it was assumed that someday in the future another wing would be added to complete the construction, Mr. Wamsley said.

Modern Improvements

Architectural drawings will be completed within the next few weeks. The building will be five stories high, the first floor being on the ground level. The recreation floor will be reverse that in the Junior building. It will be located on the fifth floor, but this floor itself will not be visible from the front of the building. The building will include an elevator system. A speaker system will be located in the hostess office. Further information concerning the inside of the building and the floor plans will be given in this paper at a later date.

Mr. Wamsley says that the new building will probably be completed by September, 1958.

Trial Issue Edited By Carter, Staff

This issue of THE ROTUNDA has been published by a temporarily acting staff. Ella Carter, a junior, held the position as Editor-in-Chief.

This organization is an honorary dramatic fraternity for the purpose of providing an honor society for students doing a high standard of work in the college theatre.

Dean's List Set at 2.5

In order for a student's name to appear on the coming Dean's List, she must have an average of 2.5 or higher on the past semester's work. She must have no grade under "C" in any class. These requirements are not the same as those formerly used, according to Dean Earl Boggs and Miss Virginia Wall, registrar.

Able Dean Completes Loyal Administration

By LINDA GARRISON

Miss Ruth Gleaves, Dean of Women at Longwood College, has announced today that she will retire in June. Miss Gleaves, an alumna of the college, has been on the staff of Longwood for fifteen years and has held her present position since 1943.

Since becoming Dean, Miss Gleaves has been a constant and faithful friend of the students, a gracious hostess to visitors and guests of the college, and a vital member of the college administration and the Farmville community. Although she thoroughly enjoys her work the Dean seriously recalls that the most difficult aspect of her job has been "learning to do a dozen things at one time."

Active Teaching Career

Miss Gleaves was born in Wythe County, Virginia, and attended a private school in Wytheville. She received her B.S. degree in education from Longwood and her M.A. degree from Columbia University. She has done additional work in her field at the University of Chicago, and University of Tennessee, and Columbia University. Among the schools at which she has taught are Wythe County public schools; Richmond public schools, Franklin High School, and the high schools of Jacksonville, Florida.

While a student at Longwood, the versatile Dean was president of the Student Council, a member of Alpha Kappa Gamma honorary fraternity, a member of the Cotillion Club, and an active participant in sports.

In addition to her teaching career, Miss Gleaves became the first hostess at Longwood Estate in 1929, where she originated the now famous Longwood cinnamon buns and mints. She also served as secretary of the "Y" in Richmond during the year 1934-35.

Joins Longwood Staff In '42

Having taught Home Economics for two years at Radford College, Miss Gleaves joined the Longwood staff as professor of Home Economics in 1942 under the presidency of Dr. J. L. Jarman. Home Economics has always been a major interest of the Dean, and her hobby is experimenting with and practicing the culinary arts.

Miss Gleaves recalls her great surprise at being asked to accept the position as Dean of Women in 1943. The greatest challenge which faced her as she took the position was the tremendous need for redecoration and renovation of the entire college interior. Her first request of Dr. Dabney Lancaster, president of the college at that time, was for a committee to work with her on physical improvements of the college. Miss Emily Barksdale, professor of Spanish, and Miss Janice Lemen, professor of art, were on the original committee which undertook the task, even though funds were unavailable in the post-war years.

Improvements Begin

The improvement program began with the redecoration of the Rotunda, Home Office, Virginia Room, Dean's Office, and the faculty women's lounge. Following these improvements came the redecoration of the Student Rooms, Y.W.C.A. Lounge, and cafeteria room and the addition of a freshman parlor and music room.

After the new Tabb Hall was built, the committee decorated the sophomore parlors. Then the main corridor on hall was redecorated with metal furniture and a vivid color scheme. The lounges on second and third floor Reynolds were furnished. In Recreation Room at the Library was retouched, and the junior and senior parlors were completely redecorated.

From time to time the committee has been called on to help in the Goals

Why are you in English class 112, or why are you in Education class 341? THINK. Your immediate answer will probably be, "Because these classes are required, and I have no other choice." This may be true, but chances are most likely that such courses can be exceedingly dull and unrewarding if you have no other underlying purpose. Again, THINK. What is your goal? Why are you working for a college degree?

The future is in the present; the future will not be very different if there is no comprehension of the present. Assuming that every one of us has a goal to be worked toward, the answers to the above questions are within you and can only be answered by your own strivings. Goals, then guide your life, and without them you would lead a meaningless life of an endless wanderer. Goals vary; they change, but you set them for yourself.

Unending volumes of "literature" are being written about women. Many magazines are devoted entirely to their problems, their motivations, their jobs, and the effect of their attitudes upon society. Their problems and goals they set are of fundamental importance. One does not need to be reminded that they affect men's well-being as well. Today with twenty times as many girls being graduated from colleges as in 1900, interest has heightened on the subject of goals and curriculum for women.

The most adequate statement so far stresses self-realization as a fundamental goal. The most common statement of woman's goal is often expressed in terms of three major occupational spheres. Their complex lives are assumed to include homemaking, gainful employment, and community service. However, these are also men's goals as well, but the emphasis on each has been changed.

What is the aim of Longwood College? We assume that it is to turn out leaders in different fields. The main intention of the college is to give qualified teachers for our schools. The immediate goal of your science professor is to give to you the fundamentals of the coures he is teaching. But what is your own goal? Do you study Business Education with the idea of becoming a good teacher or executive secretary? Are you enrolled in Elementary Education in order to become a good teacher or is this study just a means to an end?

We frequently have no direction in our lives. Now is the time to decide and formulate goals. What are your goals? Why are you here at Longwood? You alone can give the answers. Study them carefully; your life depends on them.

Sidewalks Are Safer

Jane and her roommate left the theatre. Still captured by the turbulent life of Van Gosh, the two students walked in a daze preferring the thoughts of Kirk Douglas to the assignments waiting on their desk.

Not having yet returned to Earth, 1957, the moviegoers made a beeline for High Street. Following them were many other students jogging along to the opposite street corner. Each group crossed the street at any convenient place. All were happy.

Suddenly an ignored stop light changed. Within a matter of seconds car brakes were screeching as several students scattered to escape a very close accident.

In this mythical story none of the pedestrians were injured; but the risk involved presents a serious situation for us. To see groups of students crossing from the State Theatre directly to the corner at the Post Office is a common scene. But there might be a first time sooner or later for such an accident to occur. It is usually true that cautions againts such beelines would be heeded after a possible injury. However, the ounce of prevention still holds its value.

This hazardous condition of students perhaps unconsciously littering across the highway can be prevented by a few moments of mere thinking. Students should walk down as far as the College Shop and cross at the signal of the stop light. Many drivers are often forced to a slow down or a complete stop when they meet pedestrians walking abreast on the highway.

Amazing as it may seem, girls seem to be the most frequent violators in jaywalking or refusing to stay on the sidewalks. Let's step out of this limelight and watch for the stop light. Sidewalks are made for safety, but they're also made for walking.

Miller's "The Crucible" To Appear Here

By PAT LEAKE

Farmville Coming soon is Arthur Miller's forceful play "The Crucible." The dark days of witchcraft in Salem, Massachusetts will be brought to life by the Longwood Players. Written with an intense personal conviction concerning the question of liberty of conscience, Arthur Miller has given us a play with broad significance.

Arthur Miller, famed playwright, novelist, and husband of vivacious Marilyn Monroe, was born into a middle class family of the Harlem district in New York and lived in Brooklyn until he entered the University of Michigan.

While studying at the University he began writing plays to help finance his education. He showed much talent and won many awards. He was given the Avery Hopwood award for two years and received an award from the Hollywood Bureau of New Plays.

Perhaps Arthur Miller's most well-known play is "Death of a Salesman." It is hailed as being the most outstanding play in his career.

The year 1953 marked the premiere of one of the most outstanding productions ever presented on the Broadway stage. It is by far the most moving and forceful story ever written by the eminent Mr. Miller.

Some favorable reviews are as follows:

New York—"An important addition to any drama collection." "A drama of emotional power and impact."

San Francisco—" 'The Crucible' has its jabbing lines and forceful single scenes written with vigor of Mr. Arthur Miller."

Chicago—"A play of enormous strength and intelligence."

Brooklyn—"A play of granite and fire over the rest of the season's plays."

This will surely be one of the Longwood Players most outstanding and exciting productions which no now will want to miss. Be sure and see "The Crucible," which will be presented March 28, 29, and 30, at 8 p.m in Jarmon Auditorium on the Longwood campus.

'Twas The Night Before St. Valentine's

By Traci Faison

'Twas the night before Valentine's,
When all through the dorm
Not a creature was stirring,
Not even my form;
My cards were selected
With a great deal of care,
And were given to postman
To send everywhere;
So here I am nestled
All snug in my bed,
While visions of lonely hearts
Dance in my head.
My roomie has finished
Her usual "Night Cap",
And was settling down
For a few hours nap,
When out in the hall
There arose such a clatter,
I sprang from my sack
To see what was the matter.
Away to the entrance
I flew like an ace,
Tore open the door
And fell flat on my face.
The light cast a beam
On the dirty old floor,
And roomie let loose
With a gosh awful snore.
When what to my blood-shot
Eyes should appear,
But that stupid cupid
With his rusty old spear.
My little ole roomie,
Now all full of spunk,
Took one look at cupid
And said "Good cow, I'm drunk."
To the top of the ceiling
And on down the hall,
He checked all the rooms,
The house mother's and all;
When finally convinced
There was no one around,
In through the transom
He came with a bound.
He was dressed all in nothing
From his foot to his head,
Except for some arrows
Of red and white lead;
I gazed at the bundle
Flung over his back,
When he grabbed an arrow
From out of his pack.
He winked with his eye
And twisted his head,
And caught me as I
Was crawling under the bed;
He spoke not a word,
But went straight to his work;
Took aim with his bow,
And let loose with a jerk.
The rusty old arrow
Just sailed through the air,
And finally pierced me,
(I guess you know where)!
Before I could move
He was turning about,
And there I was trying
To pull that thing out;
But I heard him exclaim
Ere he fled out of sight,
"Happy Valentines day
All you lovers . . . Goodnight."

English Lecturer To Speak Tomorrow

Dr. Claude C. Abbott, prominent English educator, will lecture here Thursday, February 14 at 1 p.m. in the small auditorium.

Dr. Abbott, professor of English Language and Literature at the University of Durham in England, will speak on the James Boswell papers, a subject on which he is quite an expert having discovered some of these valuable papers himself.

Boswell, the 18th century biographer of the writer, Dr. Samuel Johnson, has become a literary figure whose genius is now known through recent discoveries of more of his papers.

Also Editor of the Durham University Journal, Dr. Abbott has several published poems and other works, including "A Catalogue of Papers" relating to Boswell. He was educated in England and received his doctorate at Cambridge University.

Death Overcomes 50-Year Employee

NANNY PICKETT

Longwood lost one of its oldest and most faithful employees on Monday, January 21, with the death of Nanny Pickett. Nanny was about 82.

A maid who last worked about the Post Office and the president's office, Nanny began her job here in 1902 and remained until her death. She lived at her home on Race Street with her sister and brother. When Longwood House first opened in 1928, Nanny worked there for its first ten years.

"There was never a more loyal and faithful maid," commented Miss Ruth Gleaves, Dean of Women.

Miss Gleaves

decoration of various offices in the college as well as the conference room. Throughout the committee's existence it has aided in the decoration of Longwood Estate. A subcommittee was set up to collect original paintings by Virginia artists, and the fifth work is being purchased this year. These paintings will be very valuable in the future and will bring a note of distinction to the college.

One of Miss Gleaves' main objectives has been the dining hall, where she has made a constant and efficient effort to improve the quality of food as well as the physical appearance of the room. Work in that area has reached a height this year with the purchasing of new china and redecoration of the interior.

Traditions Established

Several of Longwood's traditions have been established or modified under Miss Gleaves' competent administration. The monthly birthday dinners, orientation teas, high school weekends, and the junior and senior dances have been established, and the Christmas banquet, the celebration of Christmas on campus, and the YWCA pageant have undergone improving modifications. Her attention to the minute but important details of preparing delicious and attractive dishes and the observance of the correct social customs on these occasions have set a high standard for the college to always guard.

Miss Gleaves cheerfully notes that "nothing more could have happened during my first year as Dean." It was during 1948 that the section of sophomore building now replaced by Tabb Hall burned to the ground. Miss Barksdale, a close friend of the Dean, recalls that Miss Gleaves calmly supervised proceedings in such a way that there was no interruption in the routine of the college, nor was any girl without a comfortable place to stay at any time while the new building was going up.

Also during her first year, Miss Gleaves saw the reactivation of Kappa Delta and Zeta Tau Alpha social sororities on campus.

Hostess for Thousands

One of the main responsibilities which the Dean has faced throughout her administration has been acting as hostess for the many thousands of guests who have visited the campus on various occasion. She has been directly connected with two presidential inaugurations at the college. Longwood has played host to a Fireman's Convention, two state SCA conventions, numerous high school weekends each year, several Virginia Garden Club meetings and, in addition, meetings of the P.T.A., 4-H Club, Secretaries of the NEA, and various local clubs. The largest crowd which she has welcomed appeared with the dedication of Jarman Auditorium and the Science Building.

Active In Organizations

Along with her campus obligations Miss Gleaves participates in several national organizations, among them being the National Association Deans of Women and Counselors, the American Association of University Women, the Virginia Education Association, the Daughters of the American Revolution, the Daughters of the Confederacy, and the Regional Deans' Association.

"Miss Gleaves has always been able, active, and steady member of the staff," notes Dr. Gordon Moss, head of the History Department and professor throughout the Dean's administration. "She has more than restored here at Longwood a stable, home-like atmosphere for the girls."

Miss Barksdale further comments, "Miss Gleaves has a truly remarkable faculty for remembering names and details; one which is essential to her position."

To Publish Book

Upon retirement Miss Gleaves looks forward to doing some of the things which she has always wanted to do and for which she hasn't had time. She will return to her home in Wythe County, do some traveling, and pursue her interests in the culinary arts. In the near future she hopes to publish a book in this field.

Dr. Francis Lankford, President of the College, states that no successor as Dean has been yet named. Two interviews have been held and applications are now being considered.

"I shall always be grateful help and loyal support she has given me in my first years at Longwood," says Dr. Lankford. "It has been a great comfort to have the benefit of her good judgment and her sympathetic understanding of the numerous problems we have worked on together. We shall all miss her greatly and wish for her every happiness in her much-deserved retirement."

"An Ideal Dean"

It is with sincere regret that the students and college administration learn of Miss Gleaves' retirement. There is probably no other one person who has done so much or devoted so much time towards making the college the warm and friendly place it is today, or left with the college such high ideals of social conduct. "She is, by her very appearance, an ideal Dean," comments Miss Helen Draper, head of the Department of Foriegn Languages. "Her queenly stature, neat and appropriate dress, and pleasant expression which reveals her wonderful sense of humor lend her rare distinction."

Gay Mardi Gras Festivities Planned For Nearing Dance

By CAROLYN STONNELL

Preparations are well underway for Junior Dance to be held here on February 23. All committees have been organized and are working under the direction of the general chairman, Carole Stroupe.

Ole New Orleans

The gym will be reminiscent of ole New Orleans as the traditional Mardi Gras colors and merry makers bring it alive. On entering the gym you will step through the mouth of a huge clown face and be caught up in the festivities of the Mardi Gras. The side walls will be decorated with green, yellow, and purple crepe paper with a ceiling covered by hundreds of balloons in assorted colors and green, yellow, and purple confetti.

The bandstand will resemble a French Quarter pavilion and will be lighted by the soft glow of small lanterns. Surrounding the pavilion will be a wrought iron railing with ivy winding back to the alcove. In the background "Class of '58" will be spelled out in the traditional colors of Mardi Gras.

Those responsible for the decorations are: Judy Holderman chairman, and co-workers Sally Tilson, Nan Brimmer, Madeline Bailey, Sara Gayhart, Barbara Parkinson, Carol Lash, Kathy O'Leary, Ellen Calloway, Amanda Dillon and Marodith Nichols.

In keeping with the Mardi Gras theme the Juniors have chosen programs in the shape of masks for their favors. These programs are black with gold lettering and a gold braid for carrying them. Jackie Harnsburger and Carolyn Stonnell are in charge of favors.

Longwood Exhibits Virginia Art Work

By JANE CRAWFORD

A small brown haired girl with a string of pearls in her hand sits in the Virginia Room. Few Longwood students notice her as they busily pass her by. This little girl's name is Kathy. She is in a painting by Greta Matson which the college has been able to buy because of a fund that was established in 1949. This fund provides for the purchase of paintings by Virginia artists. The 1949 summer graduating class made the first contribution, and several classes since then have made gifts to it. Quite a few private donations have also been accepted.

Four paintings have been collected so far. Each is obviously Virginia subject matter.

Most Popular Painting

"It Started Early in the Morning" hangs in the Rotunda. This painting by Edith deFord was voted by the public the most popular painting in the Virginia Museum's 1951 biennial exhibition of the works of Virgina artists.

Greta Matson's "Kathy With Pearls" has traveled all over the United States in exhibitions sponsored by LaTasca Pearl Retailers.

The third painting, "Chesapeake," by Jack Whitney Clifton, is displayed in the Student Lounge.

These painters are distinguished Virginia artists whose works have been displayed in various exhibits.

The college hopes to purchase another painting this year.

Moore To Be Relieved Of Campus Duties Here

DR. RAY A. MOORE — Agee Studio

Energetic Physician To Continue Practice

By LINDA DOLES

Dr. Ray A. Moore, Longwood College physician, has asked to be relieved from his duties at the school at the end of this session.

Dr. Moore, who since 1941 has inaugurated and successfully carried out at Longwood one of the finest college health services in the state, feels that he should be freer "to devote more time to his general practice and to his old friends."

His extensive work at Longwood has kept this energetic doctor very busy; and he and his untiring efforts will be a great loss to the college. Although he will also continue his practice at Hampden-Sydney College, his alma mater, Dr. Moore will miss his health services here, for as he says, "I love Longwood next to Hampden-Sydney."

Recalls "Delightful Experience"

The amiable, good-natured doctor feels that his work at Longwood has all been a "delightful experience" for him. He has "had the pleasure of working under three college presidents" and is happy to say of all his co-workers that "it has been a real joy and privilege to work with such fine people who have been so patient and cooperative."

Dr. Moore was born in nearby Charlotte County, but grew up in Hampden-Sydney and attended Hampden-Sydney College after preparatory instruction under private tutors and in the then two-room Worsham School.

After graduating with an A. B. degree, he taught school two years in West Virginia and then entered medical school. He received his M. D. degree from the Medical College of Virginia in 1906, was President of the Student Body in his senior year, interned at Virginia Hospital, Richmond, Va., practiced two years in Neola, W. Virginia, and moved to Charlotte County where he practiced until 1927 when he located in this community.

On Hospital Staff Since '27

He has been on the active staff of the Southside Community Hospital since 1927, is a member of the American Medical Association, American Academy of General

Southern Culture Institute Financed Here by Alumnae

An Institute of Southern Culture has been established at Longwood to promote the study of traditional aspects of Southern civilization.

This will be done through academic course work, special lectures, and through the publication of research in the field. Financial support for the Institute has been provided by the Longwood College Alumnae Association.

According to Dr. Lankford, this is the first institute in the United States to be devoted specifically to the study of Southern regionalism.

The Institute is currently sponsoring two series of lectures in the spring and summer by visiting scholars and members of the faculty. The spring series, scheduled for April 26, will consist of lectures on "Education that Doesn't Educate: The Persistence of Virginia Folkways" by Dr. Francis B. Simkins, professor of history at Longwood; "The Image of an Army: The Confederate War in Southern Literature" by Dr. Louis D. Rubin, Jr., associate editor of the Richmond News Leader; and "Critical Essays in the Southern Literary Messenger" by Dr. Gardner B. Taplin, associate professor of English at Longwood.

The summer lectures to be held on July 10 will consist of speeches on "Assessment of Virginia's Natural Qualities by Explorers and Early Settlers" by Dr. Gary Dun-

New Orleans Atmosphere Ready For Kaminsky

—Agee Studio

ORCHESTRA LEADER JACK KAMINSKY and Junior Dance Committee chairmen make final plans.

". . . The greatest music . . ." and the gayest atmosphere this side of New Orleans will make the Junior's "Mardi Gras" dance a gala occasion this coming Saturday night.

Jack Kaminsky, well known orchestra leader in the Richmond area who will supply this music, remarked while making plans with the committees last week that "My orchestra has the greatest music this side of New Orleans."

The junior class meanwhile are busy with crepe paper and other decorations to make the gym a festive replica of New Orleans during Mardi Gras.

For the dance, girls may wear formal or semiformal dresses or costumes and their dates may wear either dark suits or tuxedoes.

After the dance there will be a party in the small auditorium from 12 until 1:30 a. m. for the members of the Junior Class and their dates. A combo will furnish music and refreshments will be served.

Dance tickets are being sold after lunch and dinner outside the dining hall.

Letter To The Editor

Tribute and Thanks

There come many times, many instances when we as individuals realize our inadequacies. There come many times, many instances when we as students realize our shortcomings. For words cannot give expression to innermost thought, or sincerest feeling.

Our college life marks the beginning of a break from the familiar and a turn toward growing independence. And the break comes sharply and pin-pointedly. But there is always one individual who delves in understanding.

And we find evidences of such understanding in the concern for each student, in the coordination of student-administrative work, in the willingness to help—in all the small everyday events that add salt and pepper to living.

Tributes are written; thank you's are sent—but none seem to fulfill the duty of the moment. For to so many of us, Miss Gleaves, you have given to us, have personified in yourself the spirit of Longwood College. So many of our mental pictures of Longwood—the white columns, the green lawns, the sings in the Rotunda, the productions, the Circuses, are encased in an atmosphere of understanding, of harmony.

For the much that you give and have given, for the sense of belonging that you find for each of us, for presenting us with the best of Longwood—we seek to say thank you.

With warmest affection,
A Student

Attractive, Appreciated and Anticipated

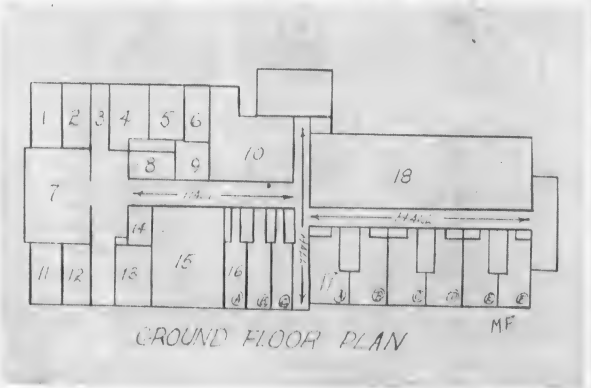
The recently approved plans for Longwood's new dormitory represent the first step in the construction of this much-needed building which is intended for use in September, 1958.

The architectural firm of Thompson and Payne in Roanoke planned with Dr. Lankford and several others to make this building not only a modern and serviceable unit, but also a beautiful new asset to our campus.

The five-story building, housing 189 girls, will have 96 bedrooms with connecting baths. There will be an elevator from the first floor to the roof which will feature a tiled sun deck.

Facing Pine Sreet will be an entrance to match Cunningham Hall's junior wing but the main entrance will be on Madison Street.

Besides one main parlor there will be four dating parlors opening on the main foyer and reception room. A recreation room with television, ping pong, and other games will be provided for the girls.



Other useful features will be two large storage rooms, one especially for clothes, and washing and pressing rooms on each floor. A complete matron's apartment will be situated on one side of the dormitory.

This building, the first construction in the college's expansion program submitted to the Governor, is the result of many persons' interest and work. Now that their efforts will soon be realized in this valuable new dormitory, they deserve gratitude and recognition for enabling Longwood to adequately accommodate more students and for giving the physical plant a more modern and attractive appearance.

The order of rooms according to the main floor plan below is as follows:

1. Dating Parlor
2. Dating Parlor
3. Stairway
4. Matron's Living Room
5. Matron's Bedroom
6. Utility Room

CONGRATULATIONS are in order for Nancy Hughes. Nancy is engaged to Herb Goodman. Herb teaches at Farmville High School.

Anne Crain received a diamond last weekend from Bob Allen. Bob attends MCV.

Betty McAden wears a "sparkler" from "Skeeter" Ballard. "Skeeter" attends Duke University and is a Phi Delta Theta.

Congratulations also to Susie Barr. Susie is pinned to Bobby Kendall. Bobby is an SPE at University of Richmond.

Alice Chestwood wears a Chi Phi pin next to her heart. She is pinned to Hubert Stallard.

Lynne Higginbotham is pinned to Bob Pence. Bob is a Sigma Chi out Hampden-Sydney way.

Lexington

If you were looking for a party last weekend, Lexington would have been a good bet as Washington and Lee was having parties, and it was dance weekend at VMI. Longwood girls seen on the VMI campus were Betty Griggs, Norma Jean Johnson, Mary Linda League, Gin Kuyk, Carol Mathews, Linda Moore, Jane McCorkle, Ginger McLemore, Jean Parrott, Rosie Price, Robin Reardon, Ellen Callaway, Ann Rountree, and Jeanne Vestal.

Betty Brown attended parties at Washington and Lee, and Gretchen Lemon attended the Southern Conference Track Meet at VMI.

University of Richmond parties were thoroughly enjoyed by Wayne Boyden, Mary Ellen Moore, Joan Lee Thomas, B. J. Spruhan, and Eleanor Stradly.

Randolph-Macon

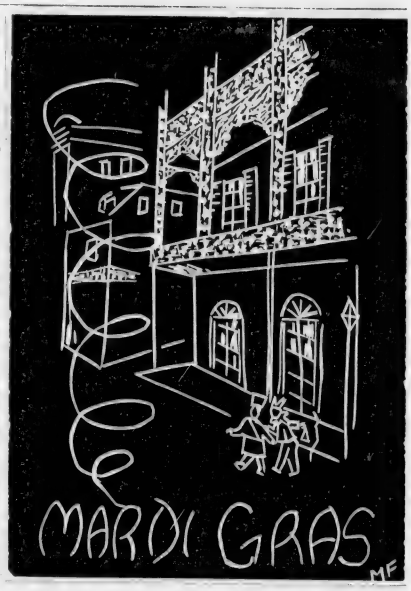
Judy Carr, Nancy Childress, and Shirley Shepherd really had a "blast" at Randolph-Macon. Ann Harding attended dances at Annapolis, and Iris Hines traveled to U. Va. for parties. Annabelle Gwaltney spent an enjoyable weekend at Hargrave Military Academy.

I think I'd be correct in saying that the girls who stayed on campus thoroughly enjoyed the Hampden-Sydney Combo which played in the "Rec" Saturday night.

Players To Depict Salem Witchcraft

By RENE WEIMER

January 22, 1953 marked the first presentation of "The Crucible" in New York City. There it boomed as one of the most forceful, emotional stories ever written by Arthur Miller. Now on March 28, 29, and 30, Longwood Players will make its attempt to bring you this outstanding play.



The cast is as follows: Jo Ann Sloop, Charter Wells, Anne Jenkins, Molly Workman, Norrish Munson, Gloria Kratzsch, Calle Johnson, Deanne Hogge, Vicki Brinkley, Fred Stabler, Flo Soghoian, Charles Bailey, Jim Jordan, Donna Boone, Dwight Flie, Lindsey Witt, John Lynn, W. G. Ward, Dr. James Wellard, Elaine Weddle, Ben Morgan, and Nancy Brubeck.

The late 17th century is known for the persecution of witches in Massachusetts. The play concerns this and brings the dark days of Salem into reality. We learn how the belief in witches was so plausible. See how the power of the imagination of a child turns a community into chaos. See how the nonconformist, John Proctor, is hounded to death. See how the "spirits" enter the people and cause the innocent to be brought to trial.

There is significance to this play because it was written unlike most—it is about something important to all of us. The vigor with which it was written will capture you. A crucible or a severe test is portrayed.

The mysteries of the night provided the background for the talent show presented yesterday, February 19, in assembly. The man in the moon, the Milky Way, and the stars lent their magical effect in producing the background for the various acts. Talent from every class filled the auditorium.

Talented students displayed their skills in dances, vocal selections, dramatic monologue presentations, and piano selections.

From The Bleachers

By Patsy Powell

Let's take a quick look at the week-end basketball scores around the Old Dominion and the nation.

The University of Richmond, playing without the services of two of its regular starters, trimmed Villanova, 65-64, in a nip-and-tuck close-the-minutes rally, Saturday night.

Roanoke College's Maroons racked up their 10th consecutive victory Saturday night. They took another step toward the state Little Eight Basketball championship by topping Richmond Professional Institute. The Green Devils went down under a score of 74-65, at the RPI gym.

The Norfolk Division of William and Mary, VPI turned back the Medical College of Virginia five by a score of 80-51. In a close match Washington and Lee found reason to brag about its basketball five as W and L skimmed by Kentucky Wesleyan 73-70. William and Mary went down as Virginia Tech walked off, the proud victors of a 94-83 match.

At Chatham, Saturday afternoon, the Fork Union Blue Devils jumped to an early lead over Hargrave and were never topped as they defeated the Cadets, 94-74.

In out of state play, it was Duke, turning on a second-half spurt, to drop favored Wake Forest, 75-64, and moved into third place in the Atlantic Coast Conference race.

Maryland, with a 56-49 victory before 7,000 fans in Reynold's Coliseum, Raleigh, ended North Carolina State's five-game winning streak. The Terps took the lead before the half and were never passed as they boasted their Atlantic Coast Conference score to 8-4.

Pennsylvania State's five topped West Virginia, 80-65, and East Carolina went down under pressure from Elon, 66-52.

'Boswell Interesting,' Declares Abbott During Recent Lecture To Students

By Henrietta Dollins

Dr. Claude C. Abbott, noted United States lecturer and formerly a faculty member of the University of Durham in England, spoke to an interested group of Longwood students on "James Boswell", February 14.

Dr. Abbott was in Scotland in 1930 when he discovered many valuable papers of Boswell; a total of one hundred and eighteen of Johnson's letters to Boswell were found. Dr. Abbott relates that only scattered material was uncovered the first three days in the attic; however, on the fourth day of searching, one-third of all Boswell's papers now in existence were discovered.

"It is impossible to read Boswell's matrial and to think of him as a small man, for he was a man of rich interest, independent mind, and was a helpful friend," the speaker continued.

"Boswell can't tell the whole truth, but does remarkably well. There are a few above his portraiture; Boswell loved humanity and was a true student in human nature."

In 1762, Abbott continued that Boswell perfected an excellent method for recording rapid conversation. He recorded his notes in his mind, making it unnecessary to take notes in company.

Toward the end, Boswell lost his knack for taking conversation, but it would be ungrateful, Dr. Abbott felt, to end on a note of defeat because of Boswell's great eagerness in living, and literary importance.

Longwood Downed By Madison Team

Madison College of Harrisonburg handed the Longwood basketball team its first defeat of the season on Saturday, Feb. 16, as the Longwood six went down 63-46 in the first of two games.

In the starting positions for Longwood were Nancy Richardson, Jackie Waller, and Jo Maxey, as forwards and Willie Taylor, Loretta Kuhn, and Margaret Dowdy, as guards. Delo Dove saw action as a substitute in the fourth quarter, as Willie Taylor and Jackie Waller changed to guard positions.

The Longwood team revenged their first defeat by downing the Madison team, 34-31, in the second game of the afternoon.

Starting at guard positions were Carole Wolfe, Evelyn Skalsky and Violet Scott. Gayle Cunningham, Carolyn Obenchain, and Nancy Andrews saw action as forwards. After half time, Mat Fadley, Delo Dove, and Lou Heier played forward positions and Joyce Tharrington and Claudia Whipple substituted as guards. The fourth quarter saw Jerrye Edwards and Ruth Raney in action.

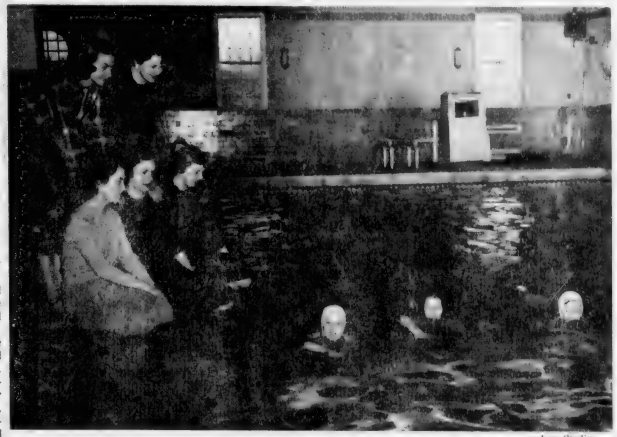
This was the first home game of the season and an enthusiastic group of students was on hand to arouse the spirit of the team. These students were led in cheering of the recently chosen cheerleaders.

In the next game of the season, Longwood will meet Lynchburg College, in a home game on Feb. 19. On Feb. 21, the team will go against a team from William and Mary.

Five Cheerleaders Chosen For Games

To lead the student body in cheering Longwood's basketball team to victory in the coming games, five freshmen, Arlene McKay, Cris Wilson, Barbara Rossiter, Carol Matthews, and Ruth Hawkins, have been chosen as cheerleaders.

A committee of five physical education majors, three seniors, one junior, and one sophomore, chose the five girls from among seventeen that tried out.



Ruth Hawkins, a home economics major from Blackstone, has been chosen as head cheerleader. Tryouts were held February 11.

Students Exhibit Art

Water-color paintings by Jeanne Saunders and Nancy Lenz are on display in the art gallery of the Art Department.

These paintings are the results of a course entitled Studio Painting taught by Mrs. Janice Lemen. This course is offered to graduates and advanced under-graduates. The pupils choose their own course of study.

The exhibit on display now will be showing until February 22.

COMMITTEE CHAIRMEN and swimmers begin work for Spring water pageant.

Swimmers Plan "South Sea Sonata"

By Patsy Powell

Longwood is promised a tasty plum pudding of a production by the H20 Club, now planning its spring water pageant, 'South Sea Sonata".

Based on the immortal music of Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein, 2nd. "South Sea Sonata" will portray, through synchronized swimming to the music of "South Pacific", a day on a south sea island.

To Portray Three Moods

Probably no musical show in the history of the American theater has aroused the high expectations that "South Pacific" did from the very first notice of its conception. The swimmers will use the music from this famed show to portray three types of moods during a day on an island. A gay mood accompanying dawn fills the morning and early afternoon with moments of happiness. Romance and the varying moods of affection blossom during the late afternoon and lead to the conclusion as the island fades at sunset.

"South Sea Sonata" will be presented at three performances on March 7 and 8. It includes one duet and several group numbers.

Swimmers Named

Swimming in the "Happy Talk" number will be Penny Pond, Norma Redmon, Linda Vess, Betty Griggs, Mary Ellen Moore, Jean O'Connell, Sue La Fontaine, Mary Anne Barnett, and Betty Burks Keith.

Ginny Herre, Donna Brotherton, Louise Heir, Loretta Kuhn, Nancy Andrews, and Frances Patton will portray sailors.

Chosen as girls are Cass Connor, Barbara Ensmann, Sally Tilson, Sara Hackworth, Ellen Callaway, and Carol Matthews.

Anne Edmunds and Nancy Donaldson will swim in a duet, and Kitty Green, Mary Lou McNabb, Susie Barr, Mary Kay Browning, Lynn McDade, Barbara Callicoat, Tipi Waugaman, and Mary Miller will display their diving abilities.

Chosen as islanders for the pageant are Ann Norfleet, Amanda Dillon, Elaine Weddle, Norma Jean Johnson, Emily Umbarger, Billie Jo Altizer, Dale Preddy, Martha Elder, Arlene McKay, Myra Brush, Barbara Wilson, and Ginger McLemore.

The chairmen of committees for "South Sea Sonata" are Amanda Dillon, Props; Ellen Callaway, Backdrops; Kate Krehbiel, Lights; Anne Rountree, Sound; Linda Vess, Publicity; Sara Hackworth, Programs; Jackie Pond, Tickets; and Mary Miller, Costumes. Mary Beth Pichnich will narrate the pageant.

Ann Jeter, the chairman of the production, will be assisted by Janet Lloyd.

LOUIE, THE LOUSE

He strolled through a keyhole into my house,
A dignified, well-bred upper-class louse;
He smiled in a most superior way
And said, "Man has just about seen his day.
If you'll take my advice for what it's worth
Treat insects nice, they'll inherit the earth!
Try to be beyond reproach
In your dealings with the roach . . .
Bedbugs, ants and spiders, too.
Don't forget . . . WE'RE WATCHING YOU!"

Reed and Barton Contest Now Open

Your opinion may be worth a $500 scholarship in Reed and Barton's "Silver Opinion Competition" in which valuable scholarship awards totaling $1050 are being offered to duly enrolled women students at a few selected colleges and universities.

Longwood College has been selected to enter this competition in which the First Grand Award is a $500 cash scholarship; Second Grand Award is a $250 scholarship; and Third, Fourth and Fifth Awards are $100 scholarships.

In addition there will be 100 other awards with winners having the option of receiving a $25 Savings Bond or a "starter set" of sterling silver, fine china, and crystal with a retail value of approximately $45.

In the "Silver Opinion Competition" an entrant is asked to name her favorite china pattern, her favorite crystal and the sterling silver design she likes best. Then, in her own words, she must tell why she has chosen the three particular designs. She can use as few or as many words as she likes. There is no set limit.

Entries will be judged on the basis of interesting opinion rather than on literary techniques. Closing date is midnight, March 31.

Miss Melinda Franklin is the Student Representative who is conducting the "Silver Opinion Competition" for Reed and Barton at Longwood. Those interested in entering the "Silver Opinion Competition" should contact Melinda Franklin at Tabb 209 for entry blanks and for complete details concerning the Competition rules.

Alumnae Welcome Students

Welcome! That is the sign painted all over the Alumnae House. This sign is not only meant for the alumnae, but for the students as well.

An invitation is being extended to each and everyone to visit and to become acquainted with the Alumnae House. One of the day's most pleasant surprises will come when you accept this invitation. Soon after your arrival you will become aware of a comfortable "at home" feeling and this is as it should be, for soon this will be your "home at Longwood."

The Alumnae Association has been working very hard repairing and furnishing the house. Most of the furniture, rugs, and several chandeliers were gifts from members of the Alumnae. Some of the Colonial furnishings have a fascinating history concerning General Lee, for he slept in one of the beds during his campaigning in Virginia.

It is also a wonderful place for overnight guests. Alumnae spend the night free, while non-alumnae are accommodated at extremely reasonable rates.

The House is open all day, so why not visit it soon and begin to "feel at home" in your "home on the campus." You are most welcome.

Moore To Be Relieved

Practice and has taken frequent short post-graduate courses, including seven months at Harvard Medical School.

When asked why he studied medicine, he said that reading the adventure book of Swiss Family Robinson and seeing the way a doctor could take care of all sorts of emergencies delighted him; but probably what motivated him more strongly toward a medical career was what seemed to him at that time the little attention paid to babies and elderly people.

During his fifty years of medical practice, Dr. Moore has seen medical science successfully advance in both of these fields, and has seen development of other fields—Prenatal Care, The Well Baby Clinic, Public Health Work, College Health Service, Geriatrics, etc., and the unbelievable advances in medical and surgical diagnosis and treatment.

Served In World War I

In World War I, he served with the ambulance section of the 80th Division. Overseas for eleven months, he saw front line action in both Argonne Drives.

When asked what he feels has been the most important accomplishment in Longwood's Medical Department during his tenure, he replied, "the carrying out of the program of the American College Health Association as far as possible with our personnel and facilities." This program was based on an intensive study of the needs of college students by medical experts. We received help from members of the program committee of the Association. I would like also to recognize the able assistance of Dean Savage in helping with the medical blanks.

"The objective of the program is to make the college health service a part of an educational institution, realizing that education without physical and mental health is worthless.

"This program centers around the fact that the college student is in the most important age of life and dangers because it is a formative and transitional period from the protection of home to the adjustment of group life in a larger world of many contacts."

Health Service Commended

When Longwood became a member of the American Association of University Women, Mrs. Anne Hawkes, Chairman of the Committee on Standards and Recognition, who spent considerable time evaluating our work, wrote Dr. D. S. Lancaster, Longwood President, as follows: "The Committee has asked me to commend you on the excellent health program which your college provides for the students."

The doctor, who lives at Hampden-Sydney, leads an active community life and is a Mason, a member of the Lion's Club and an elder in the College Presbyterian Church, member of Sigma Chi Social Fraternity, and a member of Omicron Delta Kappa, honorary leadership society.

Following in their father's path, three of his sons are practicing physicians today. A fourth son is an instructor at Fishburne Military School. Dr. Moore also has two granddaughters and a grandson.

Recalling various incidents occurring in the Longwood infirmary, Dr. Moore, who has a fine sense of humor, can chuckle over some of the lighter problems he has faced there. He "thinks very much of the students" and says it has been "perfectly delightful" working with the girls, who treat him like an old friend, accepting advice and help with many problems; besides caring for them in sickness.

Longwood sincerely regrets Dr. Moore's resignation and in view of all he has accomplished at the college, extends to him gratitude and recognition for his fine service.

Library Features Many Art Exhibits

Longwood's library features many interesting and educational exhibits during the year. Set up attractively by different groups, these displays highlight various people, places, art, and other subjects.

Present library exhibits include a display of calendars made by Keisuke-Serizawa, the incomparable artist in the realm of stencil dyeing in Japan; Burgundy, one of a series of exhibits on the Provinces of France which are being arranged by Genevieve Laloux; the regular exhibit from the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts, the California Water Color Exhibition; a display of books on education in recognition of the Centennial of the National Education Association; and a display of gifts from the French "Merci Train."

Gifts To College

The "Merci Train" was a trainload of gifts collected by the French people from all over France to send to America as a token of appreciation for what the U. S. had done for them in World War II. These articles were distributed to colleges and museums as a permanent gift. Longwood's share varies from a pair of wooden shoes to several yards of fine handmade lace, including a handwritten letter of thanks.

Atwood Chosen Head Of Campus Elections

Camille Atwood has been elected chairman of major and minor elections for the coming year here at Longwood. The major nominations will be presented to the student body on the first Tuesday in March and elections will be held the following Thursday. Minor nominations and elections will be held the following week.

Major offices include the presidents of Student Council, House Council, Athletic Association, and Y.W.C.A. Minor offices include the Vice Presidents, Secretaries, and Treasurers of the above organizations, Freshmen Councilor, and Dining Hall hostess.

The nominating committee is composed of the four retiring presidents and the chairman of major and minor elections.

Participating in the symposium will be Dr. Marvin W. Schlegel, Longwood professor of history; Miss Spotswood Hunnicutt, supervising teacher of social studies at Matthew Whaley School, Williamsburg; and Dr. Lawrence Burnette, Jr., field editor and representative, Charles Scribner's Sons.

Graduate and undergraduate course work in Southern and Virginia history, Southern literature, and geography and geology of Virginia and the South is also a part of the Institute's current program.

Longwood College, a pioneer in both private and public education since its founding in 1839, has enjoyed a long tradition of leadership and scholarship in the field of Southern studies.

The second oldest institution for the higher education of women in the South, Longwood has grown from a small female seminary to a college which offers ten baccalaureate degrees and two masters degrees.

Students Attain Spiritual Values As Religious Emphasis Week Ends

Longwood's annual Religious Emphasis Week has been throughout this week, having begun on Sunday, February 24. Religious Emphasis Week, sponsored by Longwood's Young Woman's Christian Association, will be concluded tomorrow morning. The theme has been "Consistent Christianity," and the guest speaker has been Dr. William B. Ward, of Richmond, Virginia, who has been giving nightly addresses centering around the theme.

The first address of the week was entitled "This Disturbing Christ." After classifying the title and explaining why Christ "comes as a disturbing element into the lives of all persons who have not completely accepted Him," Dr. Ward summarized his talk by saying that "It's because He loves us that He comes to disturb our lives"—that in disturbing and therefore changing our lives He "brings us the joy, peace, and power that can never be disturbed."

Student Preparation Noted

Upon arriving at Longwood, Dr. Ward seemed surprised and very pleased with the careful planning and preparation on the part of the Y.W.C.A. for the time that he was to be with us, and indeed much preparation had taken place. Besides the nightly talks by Dr. Ward, many other activities have increased student participation in Religious Emphasis Week and given students more opportunities to benefit from this religious experience.

Silent morning meditations have been held in Jarman Hall each evening this week at 7:45 in which Dr. Ward has given his main addresses. Singspirations and worship services have also been included in these evening services.

Social Hours Climax Evenings

Each night an informal social hour has been held in the Y.W.C.A. Lounge where refreshments have been served and students have been given the opportunity to chat informally with Dr. Ward. These will be climaxed tonight at 10:00 with a "Coke-tail party" in the Y Lounge. Dr. Ward also spoke to the student body at their weekly assembly on Tuesday.

Personal Conferences Held

Dr. Ward has also held personal conferences with those students who wished to talk with him privately each day this week. The Y.W.C.A. Cabinet has also arranged to make the A. A. Council room into a temporary prayer room which has been open for the week. A suggestion

Council of Higher Education Aids In Enrollment Question

Virginia's new Council on Higher Education, a state agency charged with the responsibility of developing and operating a sound, vigorous, progressive and coordinated system of higher education among state institutions had its first impact on Longwood College last week.

The Council is a supervisory agency created by the 1956 General Assembly to guide the development of Virginia's 10 state educational institutions. Particular emphasis is placed on the responsibility of the Council for orderly and coordinated development in the next two decades when these institutions may expect a doubling of present enrollments and related problems of the first educational magnitude.

The impact on Longwood, minor on this first occasion, came from the campus visit last week by Council members, who are headed by Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, as chairman.

Visits Made First

To adequately promote and coordinate higher education in a time of spiraling enrollment, growing construction and curricula demands, the Council first is visiting the 10 institutions in a data-gathering tour; seeing the present facilities first hand to compute more intelligently how facilities and offerings must fit in, and where, and how soon.

A full campus tour, conducted by President F. G. Lankford, Jr., was made by council members, Tuesday at Longwood, sixth institution on the group's visitation. In the group was Dr. Paul H. Farrier, executive secretary to the Council and formerly dean of admissions at Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

The visit here, and at the other stops, will provide the group a better insight into one of its next important jobs—studying the institutions' budget requests for the 1958-60 biennium, which will be submitted to it by August 15.

Dr. Lankford said after the visit that much was accomplished by the group in so far as Longwood's facilities and policies are concerned. In agreement with other presidents, Dr. Lankford sees a need for the Council.

"The new agency should be seen in its proper light," he said. "We do not think of it as a negative, forbidding, restrictive, brake-setting type of operation. When we remember that the 1955-56 enrollments in these institutions was 30,189 and that good authority expects them to be 67,483—or double—by 1969-70, we realize the necessity of sound, coordinated leadership in one agency able to comprehend the whole state situation," he said.

Among Longwood programs on which the Council was briefed were the following, Dr. Lankford said: present and expected enrollments; admissions and scholarship requirements now raising the general level of student ability; a quantitative and qualitative study of the faculty; the graduate program and off-campus field class services; the food system; and the present plan of converting former dormitory facilities into classrooms as new ones are made available.

Trio To Perform In Artists' Series

The Mozart trio, the third attraction presented in the Farmville-Longwood College Artists series, will sing in Jarman auditorium March 4 at 8 p. m.

Three Pittsburgh Opera society singers conceived the idea of the Mozart trio several years ago when they were rehearsing "The Marriage of Figaro."

Research at the Library of Congress, where the complete works of Mozart are available, built up the trio's unusual repertoire.

In 1955, the trio appeared in Ireland, England, Luxembourg, Holland, Belgium, Norway, Spain, Portugal and Italy for the Mozart bicentennial celebrations.

They have appeared at Norfolk and Richmond in Virginia, as well as New York City, Washington, D. C., Austin, Texas, and Salt Lake City, Utah.

The three artists combine voices for a full evening of the best and most colorful music from the pen of the great European master. His varied compositions have enthralled the world of music for generations.

Members of the trio are Joseph Collins, baritone; Lee Meredith, soprano, and John Yard, baritone.

The final concert of the artist series will feature the Budapest String Quartet scheduled here for April 8.

Date Set, Plans Begin On Frosh Production

Freshman Production will take place on Friday, April the fifth. Try-outs will be held this week. Co-chairmen are Amy McFall and Carolyn DeHaven. Committees have been set up with their chairmen as follows: scenery, Addie Richardson and Barbara Bishop; Lighting, Pat Cleveland and Mary Linda League; props, Mary Dawn Perry and Marie Messick; music and dance, Sylvia Phelps, Barbara Simpkins, Norma Johnson, Joanie Garner. Other committee chairmen are: costumes, Helen Wente and Jane Denton; make-up, Joan Kidwell and Pat Reys; sound effects, Jean O'Connell and Donnie Brotherton, publicity, Rene Weimer and Jane Crawford, and stage manager, Mary Beth Baldwin.

1957 Senior Personalities Revealed

—Agee Studio

Carolyn Clarke and Jo Davis will appear in the 1957 "Virginian" as Senior Personalities.

Carolyn Clarke and Jo Davis have been elected Senior Personalities for the 1957 Virginian.

Featured in the annual as the two senior girls having the best personalities, school spirit, and service to Longwood, Carolyn and Jo meet these qualifications successfully.

They were nominated with six other senior girls by a committee composed of a representative of each publication, a member at large of the junior class, and two faculty members. The list was then voted upon by the student body.

Jo, from Basset, is a history and social science major. Since transferring from Averett Junior College she has become well-known at Longwood for her qualities of leadership and service in several activities.

Jo was co-chairman of the Senior Dance and chairman of the campus mock election this fall.

A member of Alpha Kappa Gamma, she also belongs to the Cotillion Club and is on the Wesley Foundation Council. After graduation this spring she plans to teach in high school.

Carolyn is a history major from Lynchburg. She has given Longwood four years of service in different activities.

Co-chairman of Circus and recently selected chairman of May Day, Carolyn is also active in church and choir work. She is a member of Alpha Kappa Gamma and is president of her social sorority, Zeta Tau Alpha. She also holds membership in the Cotillion Club.

Cooperation Commended

A friendly and willing spirit of cooperation has always been a prevalent and distinguishing quality of the Longwood atmosphere. It may safely be said that Longwood students, as a whole, readily assume and share the many responsibilities which are involved in campus life. As is always the case, there are some who shirk even the smallest responsibilities, but it is the overall effect of "give and take" and "share alike" that is to be commended.

Each time there is a meeting of any group, be it a small committee or a major organization, the cooperation of each member is asked by attendance of the meeting. If the group has a function or responsibility on campus, or if a special project is undertaken by the group, cooperation comes even more fully into play.

It takes a great amount of cooperation to comply with a rule, produce a play, plan a dance, entertain a visiting group, or stage a May Day. Even the success of an everyday class lecture depends, at least in part, on the cooperation of the students of that class.

The type of cooperation with which I am primarily concerned at this point, however, is the tremendous amount of cooperation which is required for printing a publication, and, in particular, for printing The Rotunda. It is the cooperation shown by the 1956-57 Rotunda staff that I would like to commend.

On each Wednesday night the publishing of the paper begins from literally nothing but a news list. It is by the cooperation of the news staff that this list has appeared in print as news stories each week. It is by the cooperation of the editorial staff that the regular features have appeared so regularly.

In addition to the stories, the pictures, the advertisements, and the headlines are all products of the staff's cooperation.

The circulation and distribution of the newspaper is a task which requires continuous cooperation. The business side of The Rotunda entails much work which is never evidenced in print.

It would be fitting also to commend our faculty advisor, who has always been on hand to hear our problems and offer us advice. Every publication needs the support and cooperation of an interested faculty advisor. This year we were also fortunate in having a special faculty committee to work towards ironing out some of the difficulties which arose and to secure some much-needed improvements around our office.

Perhaps the greatest amount of tribute is due to our printers, The Farmville Herald, who have constantly worked with us in producing a finished product in time for supper each Wednesday night. Their willingness to help and personal interest has made our coming out every week this year a possibility rather than an aimless dream.

The Rotunda could not be published without the help of the many staff members, nor could it be printed if the staff helped only when they felt like it or wanted to. As the new staff takes over the responsibility of printing The Rotunda, I would like to offer my inadequate, but sincere thanks to each and every member of the 1956-57 staff and all of those connected in any way with the newspaper's publication.

Chapel Courtesy Checked

It seems that each year the matter of student behavior during assembly programs is brought to the attention of the students. Perhaps through this small reminder we can individually check our chapel habits before it is necesary for someone to call us down openly.

Each time the problem arises, students are asked to remember that the Tuesday assemblies are presented for the benefit of the students and that the programs are carefully selected and planned to make the one regular time when all of the student body is collected in one place as worthwhile as possible.

It is almost impossible for students to imagine individually how they appear as a whole to the speaker or the performers during an assembly. The people who are writing, those who are whispering, the ones who are asleep, and the students who are engaged in the various other occupations which occupy the hour are magnified tremendously when one person looks out over 800 people from the stage.

It is doubtful that students mean any direct discourtesy by their inattention just as it is doubtful that every member of the student body is expected to thoroughly enjoy every assembly program during the year. However, out of courtesy to the speaker or speakers, if for no other reason, behavior should be checked and closer attention during the programs should be sought.

Fry's Comedy To Be Staged For Virginia Drama Festival

By PAT LEAKE

On March 2, the Longwood Players of Longwood College will journey to Richmond to present Christopher Fry's well-known comedy A Phoenix too Frequent at the first Virginia College Festival of Drama.

The festival will be held at the Virginia Museum in Richmond, and eight other colleges will be represented. These colleges are: Mary Washington, Hollins, R. P. I., William and Mary, Mary Baldwin, Clinch Valley, University of Richmond, and the University of Virginia. Each college will present a play, and each will be judged and evaluated by the well-known Director of Educational Theatre, Alan Schnieder. Saturday night a dinner will be given at which the famous New York Scene Designer, Jo Mielziner will speak. The Museum will also be featuring an exhibit on his work.

Boone Has Leading Role

The cast and crew of A Phoenix too Frequent directed by Mr. David Wiley, is as follows: Donna Boone will portray the witty and humorous maid, Doto. Donna has appeared in several major roles since being with the Players and they include Frederico De Lorca's Blood Wedding, Thornton Wilder's The Skin of Our Teeth, and she now has a major role in the Players forthcoming Spring Production The Crucible by Arthur Miller.

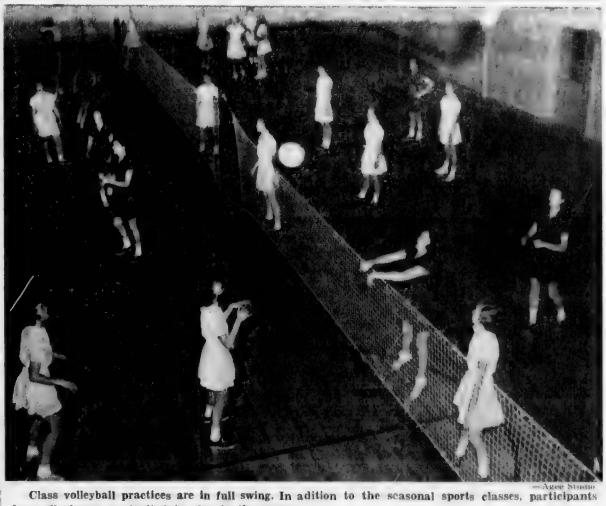
Amy McFall will portray the devoted widow, Dynamene, and Mr. Garnet Smith will portray the role the Tegeus-Chromis, the youthful warrior. Both are freshmen, and have both had major roles in their first acting in college. Amy portrayed the seductive Sabina and Garnet the part of Mr. Antrobus in the Players' fall production of The Skin of Our Teeth.

Mr. Fry's play is written in comic verse drama and has been acclaimed as one of the playwright's most brilliant works. The action is based upon Petronius' story of the Ephesian widow who was determined that she and her maid would die upon her husband's tomb. She is diverted from the thought of death by Tegeus-Chromis, a young and handsome soldier whose conversation introduces the conflicts of the body in opposition to the mind. He also produces the complex thought of love with love in the widow and himself.

Poetry, paradox, and wit make this play one of the outstanding comedies of all time—one which you the student of Longwood should not want to miss. The public is cordially invited to attend the Festival and Longwood College must be well-represented



Drama Conference Attended By Five

On Friday, February 15, Mr. David Wiley and five students of his Drama Class attended a Conference of the Virginia Speech and Drama Association at the University of Virginia in Charlottesville.

The students who attended the Conference were the Misses Donna Boone, Pat Leake, Cat Ozmon, Vicki Brinkley, and Pat Walton. During the course of the day, they attended various lectures, demonstrations, and a luncheon. They met many well-known persons of the Speech and Drama Association among whom were: James M. Helms, in charge of Virginia Drama News; J. Jeffrey Auer, Speech Expert and Chairman of the Conference; Sidney Freeman, Sweet Briar's Director; Professor Karl R. Wallace, guest speaker from the University of Illinois, and the famous author, William Faulkner.

The students also attended a lighting demonstration, and saw a one-act play "Sunday Costs Five Pesos" by Josephina Niggli. This was a high school play after which judges from various colleges in Virginia discussed the values of the production.

The girls attended this conference to observe the various projects and work which the Association is trying to improve Speech and Drama in the high schools and colleges of Virginia, and they profited much by this experience.

Class volleyball practices are in full swing. In adition to the seasonal sports classes, participants from all classes are invited to play in the games.

Tryouts Are Held For Summer Stock

"Thy Kingdom Come," Kermit Hunter's outdoor Biblical drama based on the life of Paul, needs some 50 cast members of all ages for this coming summer season.

This latest of Hunter's work is the only summer-long outdoor Biblical drama in America. It is being produced by the Roanoke Valley Drama Association, Inc., a non-profit group whose proceeds go to charity and is financed through the sponsorship of 10 local Lions Clubs.

Ten Week Run

"They Kingdom Come" opens June 23 for a ten-and-a-half-week run through Labor Day. It will play six nights weekly in Sherwood Amphitheatre on U. S. Highways 11A and 460 in the Roanoke Valley.

"Most actors and singers will double in several roles," G. Dean Goodsell, director, announced before try-outs began. "They must all be able to sing and dance, read music at sight, and move gracefully.

"Changing from a dancing girl in Herod's palace to a Philipian missionary, or from a high Priest to a mob-member, requires our cast members to be both versatile and attractive while in motion."

Rehearsals To Begin

Three weeks of intensive rehearsals will precede opening night. First tryouts—called successful by executive director, Jack E. Andrews—brought some 50 persons to the Hollins College Little Theatre near Roanoke. Try-outs were also held February 15 at the University of Virginia's Cabell Hall in Charlottesville. The next try-outs will be at the University of Louisville in Louisville, Ky.

Final try-outs are scheduled for 1 p.m. on Saturday, March 30, at Hollins' Little Theatre. Each person trying out for the cast should be prepared to do a one-minute reading, song or dance. Their voices must "carry" well because voices will not be mechanically amplified during presentation of the drama.

Of the many dancers needed, only four must be men. The script calls for no women in speaking parts. But a 16-voice choir—to sing both acapella and with taped orchestration—will include both men and women.

From The Bleachers

By Anne Keziah

Up in Blacksburg Friday night, Virginia Tech swamped VMI, 80-42, to clinch the Big Six Championship and run its winning streak to six games. This is the Gobblers' first league title since 1948 and their longest winning streak since the 1950-51 season when they won seven in a row. This win also gives Tech a 10-4 Southern Conference league mark.

In Williamsburg, Washington and Lee snapped a two-game losing streak, bombarding William and Mary, 80-58, in a Southern Conference title. The victory enabled W & L to hold second place in the conference standings with an 8-3 record.

Richmond Professional Institute's Green Devils, putting a smashing climax to their most successful season, connected on 51 per cent of their first-half shots and overwhelmed Randolph-Macon, 87-62, Friday night. This win gave the Green Devils an over-all record of 13-9 for the season.

The University of Virginia basketball team, fighting to avert an Atlantic Coast Conference cellar finish and first-round tournament meeting with North Carolina, defeated seventh-place Clemson, 85-71, Saturday night. It was the third ACC win in 13 games for Virginia, which has one league game left.

La Salle spurted in the last five minutes Saturday night to defeat Richmond, 60-52. The Spiders' loss was their ninth against 13 victories.

Tigers Triumph In Roanoke Thriller

Hampden - Sydney's relentless second-half scoring, plus domination of the rebounding boards after intermission, gave the Tigers an 81-64 win over Roanoke in Gammon Gymnasium Saturday night before a gleefully howling home throng.

The outside scoring of freshman guards, Leon Hawker and Vernelle Martin, the polished hooks of Center Russ Holcomb and the effective side court work of Warren Carter and Horsley Putt broke a 44-40 half-time edge in favor of the Tigers wide open. The after-intermission advantage was 37-24 for H-S C.

Bill Toomy, classy junior guard, got 22 points for Roanoke but after that the visitors' damage fell off to Charlie Bruno's 10.

Hawker High-Scorer

The H-S C scoring was: Hawker 24, Martin 21, Holcomb 16, Carter 10, Putt and Shepherd 4 and Humphreys 2.

Roanoke lost ace forward Dick Sperger, who sustained a bad nose injury in a rebound scramble in the early minutes of the game. Sperger, leading Maroon player, had seven points when he was forced to retire.

Hawker and Martin contributed to the throttling of Roanoke's second-half attack with a dribbling and ball-stealing act that brought a standing ovation in the last minute.

'South Sea Sonata' To Set Gay Moods With Island Effect

The H20 Club will present its spring water pageant, "South Sea Sonata," at three performances on March 7 and 8.

Under the direction of Ann Jeter, assisted by Janet Lloyd, "South Sea Sonata" will portray, through synchronized swimming, a day on a south sea island. The immortal music of the great broadway play, "South Pacific," will be used throughout the pageant, which will include one duet and several group numbers.

Three Moods Set

The swimmers will portray three types of moods during a day on the island. A gay mood accompanying dawn fills the morning and early afternoon with moments of happiness, romance, and the varying moods of affection blossom during the late afternoon and lead to the conclusion as the island fades at sunset.

The committees for props, lights, and backdrops, under the direction of Amanda Dillion, Kate Krehbiel, and Ellen Callaway, respectively, are working hard to give the pool a typical South Sea atmosphere.

It is hoped that all students will attend one of these three performances, as this production promises to be a great one.

We Don't All Speak U. S.

Nothing makes an American feel more like a stranger in his own land than to strike up a conversation with a man from another part of the country— and suddenly realize he can't understand what the guy's saying.

A Texan driving through Brooklyn who stops and asks a native for directions can hardly believe his ears. Surely this must be a different language.

In a way it is. Brooklynese is one of many regional American languages. There are so many, in fact, that some bright publisher ought to come out with a verbal Baedecker that will guide the hapless tourist safely through all the strange accents of his homeland, from Maine French to Pennsylvania Dutch.

A step in this direction has just been taken by the Charleston (S. C.) News and Courier. It has published a "Dictionary of Charlestonese," by columnist Ashley Cooper, to help outsiders understand a form of English handed down since 1670 in the venerable port city which is to the Old South roughly what Mecca is to the Moslems.

Here are a few typical examples of Charlestonese and how they can be translated by the trained ear:

Abode—Wooden plank.
A boot—Approximately.
Balks—A container, such as a match balks.
Barter—Something to spread on bread.
Beckon—Meat from a pig, often eaten with algs for brakefuss.
Caller—Part of a shirt that goes around the neck.
Cane chew—Aren't you able to, i. e., "Cane chew talk like a good Charlestonian?"
Garner—A man who tends to flower beds.
Granite—"He was granite a pardon by the gouv-ner."
Hail—The abode of integrationists, some damyankees and other evil spirits.
Harmony—Cooked grits.
Hominy—What number?
Ice cool—The institution of learning which stands midway between grammar and college.
Jell—Place of confinement for criminals.
Lawn—Not short.
Lucid—Leggo it.
Mine eyes—Salad dressing.
Minuet—You and I have dined.
Pastor — Field where cows graze.
Poet—To transfer a liquid, i e., "poet from the pitcher to the glass."
Sex—One less than seven.
Tin sin stow—The foive and doyme.
Vertigo — What happened to him?
Yawl—Mode of address used by N'Yawkers when visiting in the South.

Wynne Supervises Experience Study Desirable For Prospective Teachers

DR. JOHN P. WYNNE

Directing the Study of the Qualities of Experience desirable for prospective teachers, Dr. John P. Wynne, professor of education here, recently attended the meeting of the Association of Colleges for Teacher Education in Chicago. At this convention the committee decided to prepare an experimental edition of the study taking into account the criticisms and suggestions that have been submitted.

Heads National Group

During the last two years the ACTE and the Philosophy of Education Society have been sponsoring a study of the qualities of experience, headed by Dr. Wynne. Under Dr. Wynne's direction, a preliminary manuscript has been prepared and submitted for criticism and suggestions to individuals representing a wide variety of interests throughout the country.

The manuscript explains the idea of the qualities of experience and defines the qualities found through systematic study to be desirable. A selective group of educational philosophers and teacher education specialists is reviewing this study.

The manuscription will be revised later and prepared for wider distribution. Techniques for studying and cultivating desirable qualities of experience will be developed for use by interested individuals in institutions preparing teachers.

Serving on the committee with Dr. Wynne are Karl W. Bigelow, of Columbia University; William F. Bruce, of State University of New York Teachers College; Franklin H. McNutt, of the University of North Carolina; and G. Max Wingo, of the University of Michigan.

Philosophical Association

While at this convention Dr. Wynne also attended a meeting of the Co-ordinating Committee of Cooperate Problems of Teacher Education. This committee consisted of representatives of fifteen national organizations interested in teacher education. Dr. Wynne represented the members of the American Philosophical Association.

Since the committee is now working with the standards committee of the National Council for the Accreditation of Teacher Education, Dr. Wynne presented at the Chicago meeting an analysis of the various relationships in the field of accreditation. This is a follow-up of his meeting with the co-ordinating committee and a standards committee of the council which met in Washington last October to discuss the problem of accreditation with the South Atlantic Philosophy of Education Society.

Organizes Society

The South Atlantic Society is one of the constituent members of the Southern Humanities Conference. Dr. Wynne, as the regional representative of the Philosophy of Education Society, had the leadership in the organization of the South Atlantic Philosophy of Education Society. Dr. Wynne also participated in the negotiation which led to affiliation of this society with the Southern Humanities Conference.

The following eight names were accidentally omitted from the past issue of the Rotunda in which the current Dean's List was announced. They are Ellen Webb, of Wardtown; Sylvia Webb, of Rocky Mount; Joanne White, of Richmond; Bobby Scott Williams, of Farmville; Ellen Willis, of Rice; Molly Workman, of Norfolk; Sylvia Wright, of Portsmouth; and Mary Younger, of Blacksburg.

"Jacobus Rex" Named Theme For '57 May Day

(Agee Studio, Farmville, Va.)

Plans for May Day are now underway by the committee chairmen. Seated left to right are Anita Heflin; Jeanne Saunders; Sue Taylor; Gayle Peoples; Carolyn Clark, general chairman; "Weedie" Norman; Amy McFall; and Nancy Quarles. Standing are Carol King, Kate Krehbiel, Lillian Rosson, Nancy Brubeck, Carol DeHaven, Helen Young and Jean O'Connell.

Dell To Echo Period Of Gay Colonial Life

"Jacobus Rex" is the theme for May Day set for May 4 in the Longwood estate dell, according to Carolyn Clark, chairman of the festival.

So named in honor of King James who was King of England in 1607, the afternoon festivities will be a pageant, as authentic as possible, of the early days in American history.

The pageant will cover the period of history between the years of 1607 and 1619. Highlighting the program will be various illustrative dances of this period, including Indian and pioneer dances, performed by students in physical education classes. Patti Parker, a senior from Newport News, will dance in the opening scene.

"Jacobus Rex" will also feature such high spots in American history as the arrival of women on the scene and the first council meeting in the New World.

The main characters in the pageant will include John Smith, Pocahontas, Powhatan, and John Rolfe. The students who will portray these characters have not yet been selected.

Concert Planned For Dell

Following the May Day pageant, a concert featuring an orchestra to be selected will be given in the dell. This orchestra will play for the May Day Dance the same evening here at the college.

"We will need everybody's support for both the concert and dance," Carolyn said.

Campus Elections To Place Students In Major Offices

Nominations for presidents of the four major organizations have been announced this week. Elections will be Thursday, March 7. The nominations are as follows: Student Government— Frances Patton, Lucia Hart; Y.W.C.A.—Mary Ann Foster, Annette Crain; House Council—Ellen Callaway, Sue Taylor; A.A.—Carole Wolfe, Nancy Richardson.

The polls will be open for the final voting from 1 until 6. Freshmen will vote on the second floor Rotunda; sophomores, on the landing between second floor Student and Tabb; juniors and seniors, on first floor junior. The town students will vote with the sophomores.

The nominations were chosen by the retiring president and the committee from her organization. They were then approved by the chairman of the nominations committee, editors of the three publications, Miss Gleaves, and Dr. Lankford.

Longwood Production Wins Acclaim At Drama Festival

By Bet McLoughlin

"A fine example of youthful talent showing how well a student group can work together in producing an effective literary production" was the comment aimed toward the Longwood Players' "A Phoenix Too Frequent," presented last Saturday at the College Drama Festival in Richmond.

Nine plays with material from Shakespeare's plays to original ones were given during the day by various colleges and universities throughout the state. Each play was analyzed and criticized by a well-known director of the Broadway theater.

Schneider Acts As Critic

Acting in the capacity of critic for the nine plays of the Festival was Alan Schneider, director of nearly 100 productions in professional, community, and university theatres. He recently directed the television production of "Oedipus The King."

On Broadway, Mr. Schneider has directed "The Glass Menagerie," with Helen Hayes. He was chosen to stage the "Saulte to Frances" production of "The Skin of Our Teeth," with Miss Hayes, Mary Martin, and George Abbott. In addition he is responsible for "Anastasia" with Viveca Landfords and Eugenie Leontivitch, and "The Remarkable Mr. Pennypacker" with Burgess Meredith.

Choice of Play Commended

Longwood's contribution to the Festival was Christopher Fry's "A Phoenix Too Frequent" under the brilliant direction of David Wiley. The cast included Amy McFall as Dynamene, the wife; Donna Boone as Dido, the maid; and Gainet Smith as Tegus-Chromis, the soldier. In his analysis and criticism of the Longwood production, Mr. Schneider remarked, "This is what you might call 'Southern Fry.' " In his praise of the material, he said, "I am delighted when you pick really worth-while literary, adult plays . . . The material overcame any particular details or inadequacies in training or experience."

He felt that the scenery and characters on stage could have been more confined; however, he was delighted to find one play which showed closeness to the audience by coming outside the

Carter Selected To State Position

Last Saturday at the annual Virginia Intercollegiate Press Convention meeting at Roanoke College, Ella Carter was elected to serve as Vice-President for the coming year.

Tony Lash from Virginia Military Institute was elected President. Secretary-Treasurer for the association is Edith Gray from Radford College. Mel Bell from Virginia Tech will manage the public relations.

The Ring-tum Phi, the Friday edition of the newspaper of Washington and Lee University, was given the first place award among the college newspapers. This publication is edited by Tom Litzenburg, Jr.

Winning the second place was the Richmond Collegian from the University of Richmond. The VMI Cadet won the third place award.

Among the college yearbooks, The Colonial Echo of William and Mary recived the first honor. Mary Washington's The Battlefield was rated to the second place. Third award went to The Ripples from Bridgewater College.

Speaker for the opening banquet was Samuel Sharkey, N.B.C. News Editor. Mr. Sharkey discussed ways a college newspaper could become more interesting by exploring all possible news sources on and off the campus. The duty of a college publication is to give both sides to any issue, that is, he said, "See the story from both sides of the fence."

At the critique session David Thornton, editor of The Salem Times-Register, gave criticisms of newspapers from various colleges.

Taplin's Study Of Elizabeth Browning To Appear Soon

Dr. Gardner Taplin, author of recent book, THE LIFE OF ELIZABETH BARRETT BROWNING.

By LINDA DOLES

Touring Italy in the Brownings' footsteps is just one of the many exacting but exciting expeditions necessary in writing The Life of Elizabeth Barrett Browning.

Dr. Gardner Taplin, Longwood English Professor who has just completed this book, carried on many other research investigations during the eight years he worked on it, accomplishing a comprehensive study of this great woman poet. He is now happy to "have the satisfaction of seeing this book come out."

Being published by the Yale University Press, "The Life of Elizabeth Barrett Browning" is scheduled to appear this month. At the same time there will be a special English edition published in London.

In Yale's Spring Catalogue Dr. Taplin's book was described as follows:

Most Comprehensive Study

"Although Mrs. Browning was in her own day considered one of the greatest poets of the age and perhaps the greatest woman poet of all time no full-length study of her life and works has been written within the past fifty years. This book is by far the most comprehensive study which has yet appeared, and promises to be the definitive treatment of the subject. Among other sources, the author has drawn his information from hitherto unpublished letters in the Wellesley College Library, from marginal notes in the books once owned by Mrs. Browning, from her corrections and revisions on sheets sent to the printer, and from critical reviews appearing during her lifetime."

Dr. Taplin was interested in this remarkable British poet after becoming acquainted with her most important collection of unpublished manuscripts in the Wellesley College Library.

Native of Massachusetts

Born in Newton, Massachusetts he attended public school in the adjoining college town, Wellesley, and went on to Amherst College, a small liberal arts school in Massachusetts.

In graduate work at Harvard he was fortunate to be able to study under Dr. L. Kittredge, one of the greatest Shakespearean scholars in the world.

An interesting incident occurred when the wealthy collector, Arthur Houghton, Jr., of Steuben Glass per-

Not All Peaches and Cream But—

As the college year neared the midway point, many editors found themselves seriously thinking and writing about their proper function on a campus. Assuming my new position as editor of this paper, I would like to now present what the Rotunda staff considers its duty to the college.

This weekly publication will attempt to give news about Longwood to Longwood, which it is doing. The policy of the Rotunda is to be simple, informative, and interesting journalism. Anyone feeling cheated because we don't crusade day-by-day to get the campus trash cans painted will continue to be disappointed. The paper will continue to lack the "explosive material," and the crusading, banner-waving which numerous other colleges' newspapers have had. With our own college publication both the audience and the information are more limited, which they should be.

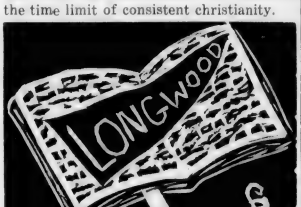
However, if a pertinent and explosive situation should come at any time, the news will be handled neutrally by presenting both sides of the situation by interested people and with a minimum of opinion on the part of our editorial staff. This, I consider, is the real duty of journalism which the Rotunda will attempt to carry out. It is not an editor's job to take sides.

Letters to the editor will be welcomed and appreciated. These letters are your means of voicing student opinion. However, each letter will be given careful consideration; and if it does not voice bias or any evidence of misunderstanding, the letter will be printed in the paper. Should a letter of a student's misunderstanding be received, the editorial staff will attempt to clarify the letter.

The new staff will attempt to present to the readers a general coverage of all the activities on this campus. It is not always possible in every issue to give all the news which should be printed. Most of the staff members are also active in other extra-curricular activities as well as their curricular activities. However, the staff will devote serious consideration, much time and work to bring you the news in each paper. The work is not all peaches and cream with the pressures of meeting deadlines and headline counts. But the staff feels honor in its service task of covering the news on this campus.

Finally, but most important, as new editor, I would like to emphasize the fact that this is your paper. Your interest, efforts, and considerations will be welcomed.

Ella Carter, Editor



You Set the Time

Religious Emphasis Week is over, and a special committee appointed by the president of the YWCA has begun the task of evaluation. This committee will consider the quality of planning and preparation on the part of the "Y" Cabinet, the support and participation of the student body, the choice of a speaker, and attendance at the various activities. As vital as these matters are, they are not the most accurate units for measuring the success of a Religious Emphasis Week on our campus.

Dr. Ward expressed the effect which he hoped our Religious Emphasis Week would achieve when he said, "God forbid that any one of us of should reach the end of this week without having learned to love God better and without having become more 'consistent' Christians."

Surely, the most reliable measure of the success of Religious Emphasis Week is the degree to which we achieved our purpose, which is "Consistent Christianity."

Dr. Ward stressed the fact that if we would be consistent Christians, we must incorporate Christianity with every phase of our lives. We cannot limit it to church and Sunday School. Is it not just as true that we cannot restrict Christianity according to time? To limit emphasis on Christianity to one week alone is to defeat completely the purpose of the bringing the speaker to our campus. Consistent Christianity means being consistent far past one week, one month, or one year. It implies the Christian living here on our campus at Longwood and in all the years ahead. You alone set the time limit of consistent christianity.

The success of last week, then, depends not upon Dr. Ward, not upon the "Y" Cabinet, but upon us as individuals. If the programs were successful, it will be reflected by the lasting quality of our response.

—Anita Heflin, Membership Chairman YWCA

Paris In the Springtime

Is not Spring essentially the same everywhere? The awakening of nature and people to a more active and brighter life. Is not Spring a revival in the joy of living?

The first sign of Spring in Paris is a gentle and sweet breeze which dissolves the last clouds, and dries up the last pools left by the winter's cold rains. There may be occasional showers in the spring months ahead, but they will only brighten the roads and clear the sky. The dark days are over. Eager tourists view the magnificient Eiffel Tower against a background of blue skies.

Now there will again be water swelling in the fountains, boys sailing their boats on the Luxembourg or of the Tuileries, and expectant fishermen along the banks of the Seine. The streets which looked deserted in winter are crowded as the spring walk becomes a newly discovered pleasure. There is not enough place in the pavement for the little girls playing hop-scotch, for the chairs on the "terrasses" of the cafes, for the ladies looking at every shop window, and for the old people chattering on the benches. The sparrows and pigeons quarrel for crumbs.

The benches of the parks are occupied by studying students, mothers doing their knitting, and of course, loving couples. He speaks while she rests her head against his shoulder. She observes the growth of the buds, of the leaves. Is she not computing when the chestnut tree will light its white and pink candlesticks? They take a row on the lake of the Bois de Boulogne.

Paris is no more made of dark stones. It is a pool reflecting the colors of the sky. The trees are green, the windows are blue, the houses become yellow and pink with spring. Paris is a flowing prism—Paris lives under the sign of the rainbow.

Movie Review

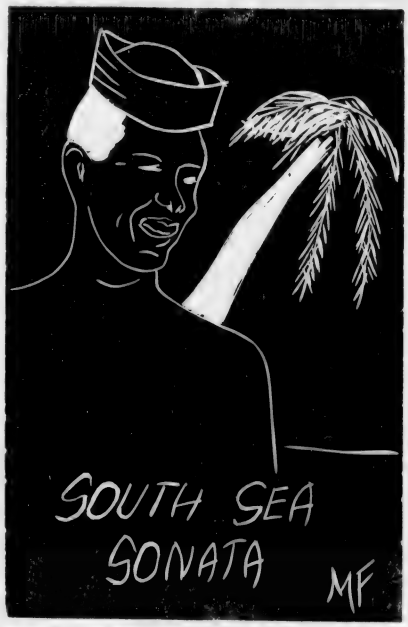
By BET McLOUGHLIN

Now showing at the State Theatre here, "Three Brave Men," is a moving drama of a man's good name. This movie is based on some Pulitzer Prize-winning articles by Anthony Lewis, and on actual events. It is the story of a family man, played by Ernest Borgnine, who was employed by the Naby for twenty-two years and suddenly discharged as a security risk.

People in his home town of Riverview, Maryland, had a grudge against him and informed the government that he was a Communist.

Borgnine made a couple of mistakes in the past, unwittingly subscribed to a Communist-backed newsletter, attended a political meeting, but he let his subscription lapse and attended no more meetings when he discovered their politics.

However, at a Navy hearing presided over by Frank Lovejoy and with corss-examiner Nina Foch, friendly witnesses can't produce real evidence and Borgnine's character is not enough proof. Although he is cleared, the Secretary of the Navy played by Dean Jagger still considers him a security risk. The fight continues until justice is restored.



The three brave men, Borgnine, Milland, and Jagger, by their love of truth and justice secure future protection for the innocent.

Letter To Editor

A dance always calls for teamwork, and it takes two teams to do the job; one to decorate and one to clean up afterwards. It always seems that the first team receives the credit, but we'd like to say thanks to the second team.

The second team is the Freshman team, our sisters. The Juniors wish to express their deepest appreciation to the girls who did the terrific job in cleaning up the gym after the Junior Dance.

Although the play was spontaneously humorous, there was "no sense of the characters trying to be humorous . . . Each character accomplished to a greater or lesser extent what they set out to do."

Mr. Schneider found Doto's performance delightful. She set the key for the play, and he was "very impressed" with her whole performance. He said that Dynamene was very charming and amusing when he believed her, but at times she was not so convincing and rather hard to believe. Despite these shortcomings, he was very delighted with her performance.

"My one criticism of the directing was perhaps, at the moment of the discovery of their (Dynamene and Tegeus) love for each other, the transition was too important and large to go about it as quickly and as casually as they did," Mr. Schneider said.

Around the World

In Tense Mideast and a New Climax

Four months ago on a Monday night the crisis of the Middle East exploded—October 29, 1956. Israeli jeeps, half-tracks and planes dashed over Egypt's Sinai Peninsula. A new climax came last Friday in the U.N. when Israel announced her forces would pull out promptly from the last ground they had overrun. But Israel's Mrs. Meir announced the following day that the movement was being held up pending "clarification" of just where the U.S. stood.

What's the Suez Question All About?

The assault on Egypt began first when Israeli forces swarmed over the Sinai Peninsula. French and British troops occupied the northern end of the Suez Canal; Egyptians blocked the canal at both ends. Then Syria cut the major pipeline from Iraq's oil fields to the Mediterranean.

With pressure for withdrawal coming from United States condemnation, in Soviet threats against the attackers, and by votes of the U.N. General Assembly, the situation moved on as British, French, and Israeli forces began withdrawing on Nov. 26. By Christmas, the British and French had evacuated their forces from Egypt. Attention focused on the Israeli as they were withdrawing slowly and blowing up Egyptian military positions as they pulled back. Today Israeli holds the center of the world stage.

Vice President Nixon departed last week on a journey that is being tagged as a major effort by the U.S. to gain Africa's good will. He will be the President's emissary on an 18,000-mile, twenty-two-day tour that will take him to eight African states. Africa is a vast storehouse of minerals and the greatest untapped labor possibility in the world. The continent is stirring with racial and national tension.

Another step is moving forward to place the British Empire into position as the British Commonwealth as the African colony on the Gold Coast today becomes the independent state of Ghana.

European youth is reported to be "jumping to the Rock 'N' Roll beat." While a London magistrate termed a group of teen-agers who had been dancing to the Presley beat, a group of "barbarians," a noted educational British magazine recently published an artille "There's Nothin Wrong With Rock 'N' Roll."

Sports Summary

To wind up the college basketball season, let's take a quick look at the results of the week-end games.

At Williamsburg, the University of Richmond made use of their free throw accuracy to down William and Mary 82-73, in what was the last game of the season for both teams. The Spiders, who finished the season with nine conference wins against seven defeats and a 14-10 over-all record, stand fifth among Southern conference teams. William and Mary finished with a 7-11 conference record and 9-17 over-all.

South Carolina's five outscored their arch rival Clemson, Saturday night, 115-85. This was the final college game for the nations leading individual scorer, South Carolina's Grady Wallace.

In Annapolis the Midshipmen topped the Army five, 58-47. Navy's team remained in front for all but about one minute of the game, and the Cadets never came close to a lead after the first six minutes of play.

All eyes turn now to the annual Southern Conference Tournament, which opens tomorrow at the Richmond Arena. The opening round of tournament play will find Furman meeting Richmond, West Virginia tackling either Davidson or George Washington, Washington and Lee facing the Citadel, and Virginia Tech going against William and Mary.

Victory of 4-2 Held by Team

Longwood's varsity basketball team rounded up its 1957 season Saturday with a 4-2 record, while the second team remained undefeated.

Losses to Madison College, in the second game of the season, and Sweetbrier, in the fifth, were the only setbacks suffered by the varsity six. Longwood downed Roanoke College, Lynchburg College, William and Mary, and Westhampton.

Losing only one member of the team, Longwood's hopes for the 1958 season are high. Four juniors, twelve sophomores, and two freshmen expect to return for future action.

Water Pageant To Open Tomorrow Night

(Agee Studio, Farmville, Va.)

By PATSY POWELL

Coconut trees, grass skirts, and sarongs promise interesting moments as parts of the H2O Club' spring water pageant, "South Sea Sonata," opening tomorrow night at 7 p.m. in the college pool.

As the pageant begins, South Sea Island girls swim to the music of "Happy Talk" and "Dites Moi," awaiting the return of a group of sailors. Six ruddy sailors appear to the tune of "There Is Nothin' Like a Dame," swim in a number with six island girls, and disappear as "I'm Gonna Wash That Man Right Outa My Hair" provides the music for an additional number, performed by the island girls.

Adding to the romantic atmosphere of the pageant, Anne Edmunds, portraying an above-average sailor, and Nancy Donaldson, as his girl, swim to the tune of "Bali Ha'i."

As the romantic duo disappears, a group of cliff dwellers arrive to present a show for the islanders. This number exhibits the diving abilities of the swimmers to the tune of "A Wonderful Guy."

Other numbers of "South Sea Sonata" will be set to the music of "This Nearly Was Mine," "Younger Than Springtime," and "Bloody Mary."

South Sea Atmosphere

Mary Miller and her committee have outdone themselves to provide appropriate costuming for "South Sea Sonata." Sarongs of yellow and red and others of blue and yellow, plus grass skirts and leis add to the South Sea atmosphere. The sailors appear in blue and white sailor outfits, and Anne Edmunds swims in a red and white sailor costume.

Ann Jeter, chairman of the pageant, is being assisted by Janet Lloyd. The music will be provided by recordings of the Rodgers and Hammerstein score from "South Pacific."

It is hoped that the student body will attend "South Sea Sonata" at one of the three performances. The pageant will be presented at 7 p.m. tomorrow and at 7 p.m. and 9 p.m. on Friday. The production promises to be a great one.

Longwood Downs Westhampton, 56-44, As Basketball Team Ends '57 Season

The Longwood basketball team, playing their last game of the season Saturday, March 2, downed Westhampton College, 56-44. Spirited by their previous loss at the hands of Sweet Briar, the team played with an eager desire to come up with a victory.

Longwood took the lead in the first quarter and remained in front throughout the game.

The starting line-up found Willie Taylor, Margaret Dowdy, and Loretta Kuhn at guard positions and Nancy Richardson, Jackie Waller, and Jo Maxey as forwards. Evelyn Skalsky substituted in the second half for Willie Taylor.

Proving to be as successful as the first, the second game was the sixth straight win for the undefeated second team.

Violet Scott, Carole Wolfe, and Evelyn Skalsky started as guards, and Delores Dove, Louise Heler, and Gayle Cunningham began in forward positions.

In the second half, Carolyn Obenchain, Jerrye Edwards and Mate Fadley substituted as forwards, and Ruth Rainey and Claudia Whipple held guard positions.

Taplin

mitted Mr. Taplin to read a set of unpublished Browning letters in his Fifth Avenue office.

Then after six years at Indiana University he resigned "to devote myself to completing my book." He returned to England and lived mostly in London, writing the first part of the book.

In a year he came back home "clutching a portion of my manuscript under my arm." He went to Boston to have ready access to the Harvard and Wellesley libraries and also gave English lectures at Boston University. Publication arrangements were made and within six months the book was ready for submission to the Yale Press.

Since he had lived in every section of the United States but the South, Dr. Taplin came to Virginia in September to join Longwood's faculty.

The energetic author has already planned to begin another book and hopes to go to Europe this summer to gather material for his subject, the influence of Italian culture on American culture during the nineteenth century, concerning literature and fine arts.

Likes "Southern Hospitality"

Happy to be "seeing what it's like in the South," Dr. Taplin likes it here and the southern hospitality and charm agrees with him. He had heard of Longwood from a Harvard friend, and after visiting the campus last April it "seemed very nice and springlike after wintery Boston," and he "resolved that Longwood would be the next place to teach."

His recreation preferences being as varied as his travels, Dr. Taplin likes concerts dances, and movies, and also enjoys roller skating or bowling.

A Tight Squeeze?

At a royal showing of tight dresses in London fashions, they had to cut the protocol. Why? The dresses were too tight.

Because of fear of ripping out of their dresses, models could not curtsey before Queen Mother Elizabeth and Princess Margaret.

Sixty dresses were paraded last week when Queen Mother and Margaret, actress Vivien Leigh and several socialites visited Hamilton House to see what had been sewed up for the summer ahead.

Princess Margaret preferred one dress called Femme du Monde. It was a black cocktail dress so tight the model did not dare bend over in the usual homage to royalty. In fact, some models could only manage to nod their heads.

But you told me to crack the door!

PIANIST WALTER EDWARD URBAN prepares for coming recital.

Parker, Adams To Combine Talents

Two former Longwood students, James Parker, of Farmville, and Jane Adams, of Charlottesville, are combining their talent to bring up the curtain on Shaw's play, "Saint Joan," opening tomorrow evening in Cabell Hall at the University of Virginia.

Parker is directing the play being presented by the Virginia Players. Jane will play the role of Joan of Arc.

Present graduate assistant at the University, Parker was graduated from Longwood last year.

A leading star on the Longwood stage in Jarman Hall, James Parker will be remembered among his many performances for his portrayal as the preacher in the production, "Dark of the Moon" for which he received the Little Oscar Award.

Jane is now a junior student at the University of Virginia.

"Saint Joan" will be playing on March 7, 8, and 9. Plans are now being made for students here to represent the director's and leading star's former Alma Mater.

Faculty Recital To Feature Urben For Second Program

By Carolyn Stonnell

A faculty recital featuring Walter Edward Urben, pianist, will be presented in Jarman Hall on Tuesday, March 12 at 8 p. m.

Second recital of the year for Mr. Urben, he has centered his program around the three B's (Bach, Beethoven and Brahms) and Chopin. The selections were chosen to cover the standard piano literature.

To Play Chopin's "Polonaise"

First on the program is the "French Suite VI in E Major" by J. S. Bach. This is a series of eight stylized dances. Following Bach's composition, Mr. Urben will play the "Polonaise in A Flat Major," "Opus 53" by Frederick Chopin. The "Polonaise," made famous by the movie, "A Song to Remember," is a very animated, tempestuous, exciting work.

After the intermission Mr. Urben will play the "SSonata in F Sharp Major," "Opus 78" by L. van Beethoven. The "Sonata in F Sharp Major" was preferred by Beethoven over all the thirty-two sonatas which he wrote. This sonata is unusual in it's structure because it has only two movements whereas usually a sonata has three or four.

Selections by Brahms

The Brahms compositions which appear last on the program were among the last piano pieces he wrote before his death. There are three Intermezzi, Opus 119, No's. 1 ,2, and 3, also "Rhapsody in E Flat Major," Opus 119, No. 4.

Mr. Urben has studied at some of the better music conservatories and under the instruction of some of the most noted men in the field of music. He received a Bachelor of Music degree from the Conservatory of Music College and a Certificate in Music Education at the University of Illinois. While at Indiana University Mr. Urben studied under Anis Fuleihan who now heads the National Conservatory of Music in Beirut, Lebanon.

Another celebrated musician, with whom Mr. Urben studied, is Carl Friedberg, formally head of the Juilliard School of Music in New York. Mr. Friedberg was associated with such well known musicians as Toscanini, Clara Schuman, Lizt, and others. Mr. Urben also studied under Harold Bauer, a well known concert pianist and teacher.

A Native of California

Mr. Urben has been associated with several other colleges and universities before coming to Longwood. He taught a year at Indiana University, one semester at Louisiana State, one year of public school Music at Susanville California, and was assistant in music at the University of Illinois for a year.

Besides teaching Mr. Urben has toured his home state of California several times giving piano concerts. He has also played several recitals in New York City.

Alumnae To Meet Saturday For Founders' Day

Broadway Comedy Playing by Barter

"The Rainmaker", the romantic Broadway comedy hit about a Dust Bowl Cinderella's learning self-confidence from a glib tramp, will be presented by the world famous Barter Theatre of Virginia in Jarman Hall this evening at 8 p. m.

The play was conceived by N. Richard Nash after a trip through the drought-ridden Southwest during the summer of 1950. It appeared in play form for the first time in 1951 although its first performance didn't take place until the summer of 1953 when it was presented in abbreviated form as a television play on the Philco-Goodyear Television Theatre.

Hit on Broadway

Shortly thereafter Nash was commissioned by Mrs. Ethel Linder Reiner and Mrs. Hope Abelson to rewrite the television script for Broadway. On October 28, 1954, these producers presented "The Rainmaker" at the Cort Theatre in New York. It was an immediate hit.

Lizzie Curry is the rancher's gawky daughter resigned to spinsterhood until a roving con-man teaches her to believe in herself.

Setting In Southwest

The setting of the play is in a ranch house in the Southwest at a time of a damaging drought. The family of a father and two sons are not only worried about a lack of rain, but also a lack of suitors for Lizzie, the daughter of the house.

The answer to both the problems seems answered when a grandiloquence spouting rover turns up and promises to produce a fine rainstorm for a mere hundred dollars.

"The Rainmaker" is the fourth in a series of five Community-college Artists Series. Tickets for this presentation may be purchased at the box office on the night of the performance, and season tickets will be honored.

Officers of Major Organizations Assume Duties As Campus Elections Reach Climax

Coyner Views Retirement After Years of Service

MARTIN BOYD COYNER

Sixty-four years of service is the combined total time devoted to Longwood College by one family. This will become a reality with the retirement of Martin Boyd Coyner, this summer, who has been a member of the staff for forty-two years. His wife, Mrs. Ruth H. Coyner, who retired last year, supervised for five years, students of Longwood College who were doing their practice teaching in the Farmville Elementary School, and served as alumnae secretary for eighteen years.

Notes Faculty Preparation

Mr. Coyner has noted many changes take place during his stay at this college. The greatest, perhaps, in faculty preparation. When he came to Longwood in 1911 as an associate professor of education, there were only four members of the entire staff who had doctorate degrees, four who had masters, six who had bachelors, three who were licentiate of instruction, and fourteen who held no degree or certificate. Today, of the teaching staff, twenty-one hold doctorates, seventeen have one or more years of work beyond the masters, eighteen have masters, and two have the bachelors degree.

"A thing of great vitality came about when we changed from a two to a four year college." Student and faculty morale improved and a strong sense of "esprit de corps" developed which has remained and grown to the present. This is due in part, Mr. Coyner believes, to the development of strong friendship bonds not possible in two years.

Upon retirement, Mr. Coyner is looking forward to doing some of the things he has not had time to do in the past. He will spend his summers puttering around the house raising flowers and vegetables, and the winters, doing some "non-scientific writing".

In addition to his teaching at Longwood College, Mr. Coyner has taught in the Jefferson School for Boys in Charlottesville, Washington and Lee University, Madison College, extension classes in Petersburg, Lynchburg, and Camp Pickett for the University of Virginia, and also Randolph Macon Woman's College.

During World War I he served in the psychological service of the Medical Corps in the United States Army. In this capacity he administered and scored intelligence tests

Branch Chosen To Attend Festival

—Acee Studio

Gale Branch, shown above, was recently selected to represent Longwood at the annual Shenandoah Apple Blossom Festival in Winchester.

Gale Branch, a senior from Norfolk, has been selected to represent Longwood in the 30th Annual Shenandoah Apple Blossom Festival to be held in Winchester, Virginia, on May 2 and 3.

Gale is one of the forty representatives from colleges and universities in Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania, and the District of Columbia which make up the Court of Queen Shenandoah XXX for the Apple Blossom Festival.

Customary Tradition

Gale was selected to represent Longwood by a committee of faculty and administration who made their selection on the basis of personality, attractiveness, character, and contribution to the school. It is customary at Longwood that a senior represent the college.

Gale will spend two days in Winchester at the Festival, which will include the coronation, pageants, parades, fireworks, dances, and contests.

Active In Organizations

Gale, an English and French major, is President of Student Standards Committee, Secretary of Pan-Hellenic Council, and a member of the college choir, Beorc Eh Thorn honorary English society, Cotillion Club, and Pi Kappa Sigma social sorority.

The Spirit of Founders' Day

(Editor's Note: The Alumnae Issue of The Rotunda on March 9, 1927 carried the following article which was given by Miss Jennie Tabb. Presented at the Founders' Day, Miss Tabb's discussion of "The Spirit of Founders' Day" was reviewed in The Rotunda as "a talk that went straight to the heart and settled there. Only those who heard Miss Jennie give it can appreciate it fully.")

It is impossible to define the spirit of an occasion. There is an intangible something that permeates the air, gives life and color to the activities and leaves in the hearts of the participants a warmth and glow that cannot be described.

A short time ago I heard someone remark casually that the spirit of Founders' Day seemed to be a mercenary spirit: this chance remark set me to thinking and led me to the conclusion that it is far indeed from the correct estimate.

When mother at home has a birthday, the children who are scattered return to celebrate it; those who cannot come send a word of love and a little gift—a gift that is more precious if time and labor have gone into it.

Our College was born on March 7, 1884; so, we celebrate today her forty-third birthday, and the twenty-fifth birthday of her president (Dr. Joseph Jarman). She was only a girl of seventeen or eighteen when he adopted her, and see what a woman he has made of her!

In the very early days of his administration, he conceived the idea of a beautiful building that would be for the use and pleasure of the students. For at least sixteen years he has been planning and laboring for this dream (Student Building) which has now become a reality and stands as a monument to his faith.

Is it not fitting that students and alumnae should find joy in planning, in working, and even in making some sacrifice, to help lift from his shoulders the burden of the tremendous work he has so cheerfully assumed?

Words of love are sweet, but deeds of love are sweeter; and he who publishes abroad his love, and in the hour of need serves not, knows not the meaning of the word.

And so, today Alma Mater stands with outstretched arms to welcome her returning daughters, and rejoices that those younger ones who are still with her have caught the enthusiasm for their older sisters and are willing to work to the very limit of their ability to serve her and to help lighten her burdens. This expression of their love gives her fresh courage to begin a new year, in the confidence that she has loyalty and support in all her undertakings.

The Students Speak

Major and Minor Elections

To every person who had anything to do with the success of the major and minor nominations and elections from moving the bulletin board or sitting at the polls, to those of you who voted — my heartiest thanks. Without the help and co-operation of everyone, I am sure the two weeks of nominations and elections would never have been the success they were.

Major and minor elections are over now and the newly elected officers will soon assume their new duties. As your officers for '57-58 begin to take up their respective duties, I hope you will support them in all the things they ask you to do, just as you co-operated with me during the past elections.

Congratulations to those of you who have been elected to serve as officers in your school for the coming year and my heartiest thanks again to each of you in the student body for helping to make our elections a success.

Camille Atwood, Chairman for Student Elections

An Organization Dissolves

During the past two years a committee composed of members of the Student Council and the Student Standards Committee has been studying the purposes and functions of Student Standards as an organization on this campus. It appeared evident that either the organization should be reorganized or it should be dissolved, because its activities, while necessary to the campus, were not extensive enough to justify the existence of such an organization.

After much consideration, the committee found that those duties at the time handled through Student Standards could easily be delegated to other existing organizations without overloading them. In fact, these additional assignments should serve them as a strengthening factor. Fewer and stronger organizations, it was decided, could work much more effectively and could maintain more membership interest than could a situation of scattered and distributed responsibilities.

In our regular February meeting, with these observations before us, the Student Standards Committee voted to disband upon the expiration of the terms of office of the present student members.

The recently posted, revised constitution of the Student Government Association shows that the calendar and activities chairmen shall have standing committees under the council. Other jobs shall be assumed by the House Council and other organizations.

Role as Judge Leads Wellard To Spotlight

by JUDY ECKSTROM

One of the main attractions of the forthcoming play, "The Crucible", given by Longwood Players, will be the performance of Dr. James Wellard in the role of the judge. Everyone on the Longwood campus is familiar with Dr. Wellard from passing him in the halls of the English department to reading his latest novel, The Memoirs of a Cross-eyed Man.

Dr. Wellard has always been interested in acting but from the point of view of the writer. At the University of Chicago, where he obtained his Ph.D. degree, he directed and acted in various plays.

Dr. Wellard is enthusiastic about Arthur Miller's "The Crucible". In his words, "It is a wonderful play and most dramatic." It contains the archaic language of the Pilgrims which has been difficult, but he believes the actors will be able to put the meaning across to the audience. They will also enjoy the costumes of the Pilgrims. "It will be quite a good evening's entertainment."

Enjoys Work With Players

In speaking of his role as the judge, Dr. Wellard stated, "When I told Longwood Players that I was interested in the play, I never imagined that I would be given such a large part". He is enjoying his part, nevertheless, which involves political connotations. In working with the Players, he has become acquainted with many of the students on campus. Dr. Wellard is impressed with the work of the Players, and in his opinion, they are a fine group. "Mr. Wiley is energetic and patient with all concerned."

In the spring, Alpha Psi Omega will present a one-act play by Dr. Wellard in their series of one-act plays. Dr. Wellard is now in the process of polishing his play and is greatly interested in the final result.

Around the World

Negotiations between Egyptian and United States officials indicated Egypt intends to confine the 2,600 United Nations troops to the frontier zone between Gaza and Israel. Egypt so far has given no signs of stationing military units into the strip. If such a movement is made, another Israel invasion seems in view.

The primary goal of most Middle East maneuvering—oil—began moving through piplines to the Mediterranean last week. This was practically overlooked in the hassle over the Gaza strip.

Students at Havana University attempted to assassinate Cuba's President Batista. Although Batista escaped, forty persons were killed in the uprising.

The 16th National Convention of the Communist Party of the United States being held last week brought forth the following comment by J. Edgar Hoover: "A study of the convention's deliberations discloses that the Communists are still the masters of 'The Big Lie.' Their double talk, duplicity, and semantic gyrations make them the most dangerous and most proficient masters of propaganda in the civilized world."

"No chimpanzee is going to make a monkey out of me. There are some purists, not myself, who won't exhibit in the show because it also displays crafts. I don't want to be hard-nosed. Arts and crafts, yes; chimpanzees, no." This comment came from Charles Modecke, an artist who protested the entrance of the chimpanzee's finger-painding drawings in a sidewalk show at Berkeley, Calf.

Finding of the Virginia Education Association recently showed that 73 per cent of the state's teachers hold college degrees. This shows improvement over former records.

Have you questioned your femininity lately? An actor who recently returned from Japan said of Japanese: "They really give a man a build up. They light your cigarette, hold your coat, and open the car door for you."

Glorious Life of Saint Joan Portrayed Vividly by Adams

By MARGIE LAYMAN

George Bernard Shaw's "Saint Joan" was presented in Jarman Auditorium on March 14 by the Virginia Players.

Joan, the patron saint of Longwood College, was played by Jane Adams, a former Longwood student. Miss Adams did an outstanding job of depicting the maid, showing child-like faith in her visions. In both appearance and speech, Miss Adams clearly characterized the strength, faith and courage of Joan. In the scene in the cathedral at Rheims, Miss Adams' face showed an ethereal expression as though she had really received advice and strength from heaven. Also, in the trial scene, Miss Adams did a good job of showing the great importance of her decision and seemed torn by the choices she had. She realistically played the part of a woman who could live on an equal basis with men and lead the life of a soldier.

Of the other characters, the Dauphin was the most outstanding. He had the weakness which is characteristic of Charles and played the part of a fool without seeming ridiculous.

The Earl of Warwick, another character who should be mentioned, did a fair job. He, perhaps, overplayed the role with so much loudness that he seemed to drown out other players on the stage with him. He had some merits, however, and must be given credit.

The play as a whole was very good, and it was an especially outstanding production for a college group. Some of the minor roles were less in character, but most of them were very effective. The costumes added to the production and the limited scenery proved effective.

The chronicle play was directed by James W. Parker, a 1956 graduate from Longwood College, who is now doing graduate work at the University of Virginia. Dorothy Rector, former president of the Longwood Players, was also on the staff of the production.

'Theory of Limits' Given By McShane

Dr. E. J. McShane, Professor of Mathematics at the University of Virginia, spoke to the students of the mathematics and science departments on March 14.

Dr. McShane is the regional consultant for Virginia and West Virginia for the Science Teaching Improvement Program of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Dr. McShane demonstrated the use of his General Theory of Limits, and he mentioned the Theory of Games. He also spoke of the shortage of mathematicians and physicists and urged students to enter these fields.

Recital Tomorrow Set for Students

The second of a series of student recitals will be presented tomorrow afternoon at 4 p.m. in Jarman Hall by the Music Department. The recitals, which are presented on alternate Thursday afternoons during this semester, are given by applied music students in piano, voice, organ, and band and orchestral instruments.

This Thursday the concert will feature the pianists, Adair Camp, of Arlington, and Roselyn Epps, of Wakefield.

The vocalists who will participate are Carol Carson, of Covington, and Karen Potts, of Alexandria.

Featured at the organ will be Anne Presson, of Seaford. There will be instrumental solos by Carole Gonder, of Alexandria, and Dot Marshall, of Nokesville.

In the near future, the Athletic Association will place games in the Sophomore, Junior and Senior Recs. These games, such as Scrabble and cards, are for the enjoyment of all. The Athletic Association will appreciate the co-operation of all students in the care of these new games.

They are not to be removed from the Recs.

VAFCW Meeting To Convene Here

Representatives from approximately twenty-four colleges will visit Longwood March 29-30 to attend the annual conference of the Virginia Athletic Federation of College Women.

Registration for delegates will be held on Friday afternoon, and the group will attend the Longwood Players' production "The Crucible", Friday night.

The group, which will be staying at Longwood House during their visit, will center their thoughts around the theme, "On-the-Campus Recreation." Saturday morning the delegates will hear Miss Cynthia Mendenhall, Recreational Supervisor, East Carolina College, Greenville, North Carolina. Following this will be a banquet at Longwood House.

Three Longwood students are among the state officers of the Virginia Athletic Federation of College Women. Annie V. Weaver is the Conference President, while Jeannie Vestal and Jeanette Puckett serve as Treasurer and Corresponding Secretary respectively.

Students Perform For Dance Forum

Five modern dance students, Pat Altizer, Joan Dorsey, Carol Lash, Dot Marshall, and Ellen Trader and Mrs. Emily K. Landrum, Associate Professor of Physical Education, attended the 11th annual Arts Forum held at Woman's College, Greensboro, North Carolina.

Miss Anna Sokolow, internationally known artist, choreographer and dancer, led students from 12 southern colleges in a Master Class, which exemplified a modified approach to Martha Graham's techniques, particularly in relation to the contraction-release principal of total body movement. Miss Sokolow was one of the original members of Martha Graham's first concert group, and assistant to Louis Horst, outstanding teacher of dance composition, for a period of nine years.

Led again by Miss Sokolow, the afternoon session was given over to students from eight colleges, who presented their own compositions or choreography.

Longwood Scores High

Longwood's "Grief", a trio study using Barber's Adagio for Strings to excerpts from Maguire's, "The Root", scored high in relation to sustaining an audience, or projecting the group feelings of sorrow and making use of basic principles of dance choreography or composition. Pat Altizer, Carol Lash, and Ellen Trader danced, with Pat and Carol taking credit for the choreography.

Other colleges represented were Madison, Woman's College, Sweet Briar, Virginia Intermont, Duke University, Meredith and Winthrop College.

All college groups were told to delve deeper into their works, spending more time than was allowed for those presented. Dance teachers came to the rescue of their students and a resultant give and take, and most lively discussion ensued well beyond time allowed for the afternoon session.

Green And Whites Lead Cup Race

By PATSY POWELL

Green and white classes pushed their color cup lead to twenty points in class volleyball games completed Monday. The Sophomore-Senior duo added ten points to the tin won during the class hockey games.

Volleyball Games

The tournament began with the classes meeting in the college gymnasium on March 11. By scores of 13-11 and 17-4, the Sophomores downed their unlucky sisters of the Senior class.

The Class of '60 lost their first game to the Juniors, 11-7, but came back in the second game to hand their sister class an 11-9 defeat.

The second day of the tournament, March 13, saw the Seniors split the two games with their Freshmen rivals. By a score of 12-7 the green and whites took the first game, but the Freshmen bounced back to hand the Class of '57 a 14-8 defeat and claim the game for red and white.

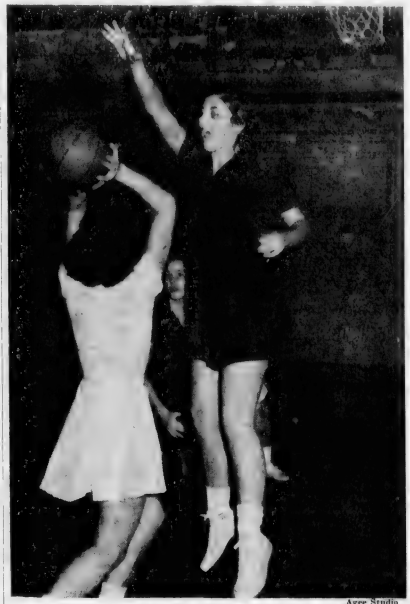
Victory came again for green and white as the Sophomores, remaining undefeated, topped the Juniors twice by scores of 23-2 and 14-10.

Meeting for the final games, March 18, the Sophomores clinched the points for green and white by downing their Freshmen rivals, 18-3 and 16-8. In the other games of the day, the Seniors fell, by scores of 16-7 and 11-9, to the Class of '58.

Doris Kesling and Elaine Weddle are the class volleyball co-chairmen for the Athletic association.

Basketball Games

Five points towards the color cup white classes and five points to the red and white classes at the completion of intramural basketball play, yesterday.



In the first games, played March 12, the Freshman and Junior classes called it even and tied at 24-24. The Sophomores did not treat their sister class so kindly, Racking up 37 points against 4 points for the losers, the Class of '59 did not allow their rival Seniors to score after the first quarter of play.

Meeting on March 14 in the college gymnasium, the Freshmen handed the Seniors a 30-23 defeat. The Sophomores redeemed their colors by downing the Juniors, 33-22.

The final games of the tournament found the Juniors going against the Seniors and the Sophomores meeting the Freshmen. By a 38-19 score, the red and whites triumphed, much to the dismay of their rival Seniors.

Finding a win necessary in order to tie in the race for the ten basketball color cup points, the Class of '59 brought glory to green and white by downing the Freshmen, 34-15.

The red and whites, however, won their first points towards the 1957 Athletic Color Cup, while the green and whites ran their total number of points won to twenty-five.

A bench and sundial combination placed on our campus in 1928 by Kappa Delta, first of the four national sororities founded at Longwood, is a convenient meeting spot for modern KD's Lisa Buchanan, Shirley Hauptman, Betsy Ruckman, President Lucia Hart, Carolyn Waugaman, and Sarah Hackworth shown above left to right.

Longwood Claims Title-Mother of Sororities

Longwood College—mother of sororities.

Just as a small college in Oxford, Ohio, now named Miami University, has become known as the mother of fraternities, Longwood College and Farmville may lay a similar claim to their sister groups.

Of the 32 sororities listed by the National Panhellenic Conference, four were founded at Longwood. Several groups were founded at the University of California, but most of those have merged and are no longer active as independent groups. Thus Longwood's record stands as having been the founding place of more national sororities than any other college.

It was back in 1897, the year of the Turco-Greek war and the year that Eugene V. Debs formed the Social Democrat party, that a group of girls sitting around a dormitory room at Virginia State Normal School decided to start a sorority. October 23, 1897 was the date.

Kappa Delta First

There weren't any sororities at Longwood then, and Mary Somerville Sparks, Julia G. Tyler (now Mrs. James S. Wilson, of Charlottesville), Lenore Ashmore, and Sara Turner (now Mrs. Arthur M. White, of Norfolk) laid the foundations for Kappa Delta.

From those beginnings came a national organization of 91 chapters and 41,000 members. Mrs. W. M. Holladay, of Farmville, was the first national president of the organization.

Nearly another year went by, a year in which the Curies discovered radium, before a second group, Zeta Tau Alpha, was founded October 15, 1898.

ZTA Spreads

From those beginnings as the first sorority chartered in Virginia, ZTA has spread to 81 chapters and 30,104 members.

Next in line were Sigma Sigma Sigma, founded by eight students in 1898, and Alpha Sigma Alpha, founded November 15, 1901. Mrs. J. L. Jones, of Shepards, was a charter member of the latter group and also it first national president.

The year 1912 brought tragedy to the nation with the sinking of the Titanic and sorrow to Longwood when Kappa Delta and Zeta Tau Alpha were required to give up their charters.

Sororities in liberal arts institutions and those in teachers colleges came to a parting of their ways. Sigma Sigma Sigma and Alpha Sigma Alpha elected to remain in the teachers' college group, and the other two chapters resigned their charters so that their national organizations could affiliate with the National Panhellenic Conference.

Gamma Theta Fills KD Void

Gamma Theta, a local organization, was formed to fill the void left by Kappa Delta, and Mu Omega was organized to take the place of Zeta Tau Alpha.

In 1947, the two women's Greek organizations re-united, making it possible for KD and ZTA to go back on campus at Longwood. With all the ceremony of a child returning to his birthplace, they did so in 1949.

Members of the four national organizations have taken an active interest in Longwood College throughout the years. Kappa Delta placed a memorial bench and sundial on the campus, Zeta Tau Alpha, a plaque in the Rotunda and Sigma Sigma Sigma, a clock in the Rotunda.

When money was being donated for Jarman Hall and the organ, the sororities were among the first to give. Kappa Delta supports six beds at the Crippled Children's Hospital in Richmond and Zeta Tau Alpha maintains the health center at Currin Valley.

Over 100,000 students and alumnae across the United States and in Canada look today to Virginia and to Longwood, to their Alpha chapters and "home."

Kappa Delta Leads In Grade Averages

Kappa Delta with its 1.90 mark holds the highest scholastic average among the sororities for the past fall semester. Theta Sigma Upsilon maintains the second place with a 1.88 average.

Other sorority averages are Zeta Tau Alpha, 1.84; Alpha Sigma Tau 1:835; and Delta Zeta, 1.833.

Sigma Sigma Sigma shows a 1.747; Alpha Sigma Alpha, 1.744; and Pi Kappa Sigma, 1.61.

Stage Set For 'The Crucible' Tomorrow Night

"There be a thousand names. Why do they choose mine?" pleads Donna Boone, as Elizabeth, to Fred Stables, playing the role of John, in "The Crucible."

Story of Witchcraft Planned For Play

A story about Salem witchcraft will be unfolded in the Longwood Players' and Hampden - Sydney Jongleurs' performance of Arthur Miller's drama, "The Crucible," which will open tomorrow evening at 8 p.m. in Jarman Hall.

Directing this play is David Wiley, assisted by Patti Parker Dobyns. Hailed as one of Arthur Miller's most outstanding plays, "The Crucible" is based on actual records concerning the great witch hunt during the 1690's.

Salem, 1692

In spring, 1692, the witch trials were in full swing at Salem, Massachusetts. The play opens with the suspicion of witchcraft while the townspeople begin to gather anxiously in the home of the Reverend Parris, played by Charter Wells, whose daughter may be a possible victim.

Abigail Williams, played by Molly Workman, in order to avoid whipping for dancing in the woods, confesses that Tibuta, played by Anne Jenkins, conjured spirits down on them. She names several of the townspeople as witches.

The next scene is in the home of John Proctor, portrayed by Fred Stables. It is evident that there is disharmony between John and his wife, Elizabeth, played by Donna Boone. Elizabeth is summoned by the court on the suspicion of witchcraft.

Inside the courtroom Deputy Governor Danforth, played by Dr. James Wellard, hears the testimonies in behalf of the accused witches. This courtroom scene expresses Miller's idea on personal freedom.

Playing the roles of several village women are JoAnn Sloop, as Betty Parris; Vickie Brinkley, as Mary Warren; Deanne Hogg, as Mercy Lewis; Norrish Munson, as Suzanne Walcott; and Flo Soghoian, as Rebecca Nurse.

Hampden-Sydney Students

Hampden-Sydney students having roles in this play are Jim Jordan, Charles Bailey, Dwight File, Lindsey Witt; and Johnny Lynn, of Longwood.

Serving as stage manager for "The Crucible" is Pat Walton. Lighting is being handled by Lynn McDade and Vickie Brinkley. Working on sets and props are Sandra Stevens and Carol Lash, respectively, and Ann Wheeler, make up.

Managing costumes is Becky Jones. Kate Krebbiel is serving as display designer. In charge of programs is Mary Leigh Deane, and front of house, Carol Carson. Pat Leake is director of publicity.

'Band of Tomorrow' to Play For Annual Cotillion Dance

The annual Cotillion Club dance which will be held in the main "rec" on April 6, from 8-12 p.m. will feature Buddy Morrow and his 15 piece "Band of Tomorrow." "Sea Isle" is the theme.

BUDDY MORROW

The decorations will represent a French cafe. Highlights of the evening will include a figure led by Sis Brown. After the dance there will be a party for members of the club.

Plays With Shaw, Duchin

Having wide experiences on his way to the "top," Morrow played first with Artie Shaw's orchestra. After leaving Shaw, Buddy joined the orchestra of the late Eddy Duchin for a short period. Then he went with Vincent Lopez for a tour of theatres and hotels to the West Coast. Then the famous Paul Whiteman offered him a job with his band.

His next step was to join Tommy Dorsey's orchestra in a featured role. Several years later Buddy Morrow joined the Jimmy Dorsey orchestra where he was featured on the trombone at all the leading spots and locations from coast to coast.

Over 2000 disc jockeys voted Buddy Morow the No. 1 most promising band in the country in the 1951 Annual Billboard Magazine Disc Jockey Poll. Buddy drew such a big vote that no other band was near him.

Although a trombone similar to the one Buddy Morrow owns could be bought on the open market for $500, the one he uses has been insured for $10,000 because of the special materials used in the horn which was custom made.

The RCA Victor records that made a hit for Morrow are "I Can't Get Started," "Stairway to the Stars," "Dragnet," and "Got You on My Mind."

Musician's Philosophy

His philosophy as a band leader is: "Do not try to educate the public from the bandstand, instead play the type of music that they want to hear."

Dance chairman for the Cotillion Club is Delores Grimstead. The decorations are being made by Sara Gayhart and her committee. In charge of the figure and program is Sis Brown, while Anne Wayne Fuller has been in charge of getting an orchestra. Traci Faison and Louise Norman are serving on the party and clean-up committee, respectively.

Officers of the Cotillion Club are Barbara Roller Hardie, president; Sandra Dyer, secretary-treasurer; Anne Wayne Fuller, business manager; and Dr. Robert T. Brumfield, advisor.

Meeting Attended By Men Students

Fred Stables, Bernard Warren, and George Redd represented Longwood at the Tenth Virginia Industrial Management Conference held at Washington and Lee University and Virginia Military Institute.

Over 500 business men were delegates at this conference representing business concerns over the entire state.

Pairing Roommates

This the time of the year when the various administrative heads of colleges grow grey and jittery — particularly the Deans of Women in our women's colleges. They are preoccupied — gazing off into space with a glassy stare, eating little and sleeping less.

Why? Because they are trying to pair roommates for another year; and it calls for the wisdom of Solomon, the patience of Job — in other words, it calls for a Ph.D. in human personality.

The bases of determining roommates vary with the different colleges. Some place their students according to academic and social backgrounds, others according to geographical location, having learned from experience that students from different sections of the country will stick together anyway.

There are many causes of incompatibility between roommates, and, it is here that the ability to adapt to various human personalities meets its hardest test. There is the case of one roommate who retires early, the other late; one wants the window up, the other down; one wants to smoke, the other is allergic to smoke. There is the roommate who spends all of her time with other friends, abandoning her roommate. Perhaps most troublesome of all is the roommate who "borrows" anything from a safety pin to a formal dress, many times without permission.

Here at Longwood it has been our policy for many years to pair roommates and suite mates who are congenial and understanding, a situation which is fairly well determined at the close of the Freshman year. The student who has learned to be tolerant in her attitude and ethical in her conduct toward her roommate in college has already traveled a long way on the road to getting along with people wherever she may be later on in life.

One Dean of Women has said: "Go more than half way in being friendly; show an interest in your roommate's doings; wear your own clothes and buy your own toothpaste."

The room blanks will be available soon, so please read carefully the following instructions:

Pick up room blanks on April 1. The freshmen are to receive these blanks from Miss Gleaves' office; the sophomores, from Mrs. Jones' office; and the juniors, from Mrs. Eva's office. Fill in the desired information and return it to the same offices by April 4.

If you are not returning to Longwood in September, please state that fact on the room blank and hand the blank back to the office.

HAPPY ROOMMATE HUNTING TO YOU!

Mrs. Beulah Eva
Junior House Mother

It Must Have Been Sunshine

Longwood students have changed colors lately—all these red-faced girls mean one thing—the sun season has opened. Everyday from ten to four girls stream to the roof over the dining hall armed with blankets, pillows, cards, baby oil, sunglasses, portable radios, and sometimes books. Like a slice of Coney Island minus ocean and sand is the only way to describe the ensuing scene.

This is the way spring fever effects Longwood. And usually the sun-soaking pays off, for girls get plenty of fresh air and relaxation, and have good suntans when summer arrives.

However, there are a few troubles. Classes and spring research papers have an annoying way of interrupting sunbaths. There is plenty of time ahead to get a tan without using class cuts or stolen time from work or term papers. Besides, getting "burned up" only makes skin peel; a slow tan will look better and last longer.

While relaxing on the roof don't forget all about meals. Every girl wants a slim figure to go with her suntan but eating irregular and skipping meals does not help. Three well-balanced meals a day in the dining hall will make you feel and look healthy just as the sun makes you tan.

Remember to be properly clad when going to and from the roof around the Rotunda and on the roof entrance.

Although it's true that the ultra-violet rays the sun produces make the skin tan and that they are usually present even on cloudy days, it is unwise to stay out on chilly days. Spring colds do not make good substitutes for spring fever.

So take your sun in small doses (with plenty of suntan lotion or oil) without neglecting classwork and fight that spring fever.

L. D.

P.S. Don't be litter-bugs — remember to keep the roof clean.

Exciting Memories Recalled By Grads

Two members of the class of '47 recalled exciting memories of college days when they again visited the campus on Founders' Day this past weekend. They were the '47 May Queen and her Maid of Honor—Mrs. Nancy Whitehead Patterson and Mrs. Gwen Ackiss Thompson.

A former May Queen, Mrs. Patterson found it "just wonderful to be back with her class after ten years." Mrs. Thompson, the Maid of Honor in May Day, and also queen of the Mardi Gras here at Longwood said that the class seemed to be very much the same after they had a chance to settle down in the dorm for a midnight chat.

Recalling May Day, 1947, the Maid of Honor immediately exclaimed, "How could I ever forget—it rained!"

"Twelve be already hanged . . ." from "The Crucible"

Students Predict Bergman, Brynner '56 Oscar Winners

Suspense rises tonight as movie enthusiasts await the end of the races for the Academy Awards.

According to a poll taken here on campus, indications are that students expect Ingrid Bergman to win an Oscar for her performance in "Anastasia."

For the best actor, Yul Brynner and Kirk Douglas rate the same place in the students' opinion.

"Around the World in 80 days" was selected the students' first rate movie. Their favorite song from the year's motion pictures was "True Love."

Best Actress

Winning the Oscar in 1944, Ingrid Bergman, a Swedish actress, returns after her performance in "Anastasia" after eight years from the film capital to perhaps walk away with the 1956 Oscar. Sentiment soars high after Miss Bergman's return to the screen.

Carroll Baker's impressive role in "Baby Doll" has been cited as a possibility for receiving the first place honor. Deborah Kerr, the motherly personality, presents only a small challenge for her role in "The King and I." Nancy Kelly, the mother of "The Bad Seed," holds a possible chance at the Oscar Award. Playing the role of the spinster of "The Rainmaker," Katherine Hepburn promises only small hopes for receiving the first honor.

Best Actor

The choice around the nation for the best actor seems to be Kirk Douglas for his role in "Lust for Life." The disadvantage facing him here is the fact that the movie wasn't considered a big hit.

Running the close race with Douglas is Yul Brynner who starred in "The King and I." But Brynner's role here was not new to him since he had played this role several hundred times on the stage before doing it on film. A musical is seldom considered for a first rate movie, but Brynner did make quite a hit himself as a new screen star.

Best Movie

The clever movie, "Around the World in 80 Days," has amazed its audiences. "The King and I" also held great approval from its audience. "Giant" and "The Ten Commandments" could win for their size, but considering artistic acomplishment, the two movies may be questioned. "Friendly Persuasion" has been highly favored by many movie fans.

Supporting Actress

For the best supporting actress, Dorothy Malone will run a close race for her role in "Written on the Wind," but Mildred Dunnock is also being praised for her work in "Baby Doll." From "The Bad Seed" comes the possibility for Patty McCormack and Eileen Heckart to win an award.

Supporting Actor

An award may be in store for Don Murray as the best supporting actor. Murray holds this chance from his dramatic role in "Bus Stop." Again "Written on the Wind" may bring the best supporting actor as well as actress with Robert Stack's mad scenes. Anthony Quinn is a current choice for his work in "Lust for Life."

"The Rainmaker," Colorful Comedy, Plays For Responsive Audience

By LINDA DOLES

Richard Nash's "The Rainmaker" completely captivated a large audience in Jarman Hall last Wednesday evening with its ribald humor, fascinating characters, and colorful and romantic plot.

The play, a success on Broadway when first produced, was presented by the Barter Theatre of Virginia which has been touring the southern states, and was brought here for the Artists' Series.

The colorful stage setting and effects added to the delightful story of the Curry family and their problems with the drought and an unmarried daugher.

Directed by Howard Hunter and acted excellently by the experienced Barter players, "The Rainmaker" lived up to its expectations and provided a humorous and romantic entertainment.

Marcie Hubert gave a lilting, energetic performance as the plain, skeptical daughter, and Mitch Ryan as the suave, handsome con-man, the Rainmaker, also did a good job. The other characters were equally impressive in their Western-character roles.

Since the play was so thoroughly enjoyed by the Longwood audience it is hoped that more of this type entertainment can be brought to the campus in the future.

Around the World

President Eisenhower concluded meetings with Britain's Prime Minister MacMillan last week achieving their aim of restoring British-American unity on international problems. Important subjects were the Middle East problems of the Suez, the Gaza strip; the British plans to reduce military units, to recognize Communist China, and European free market and atomic pool plans.

Switching over to atomic weapons as part of their plan in cutting military costs, the British are planning to get atomic artillery shells and small tactical A-bombs from the United States.

Vice President Nixon returned to Washington from his 20,000-mile good-will tour of Africa. One of the main discoveries is the critical nature of the Arab refugee problem. The Arabs were forced to flee their homes in Palestine during the 1948 fighting.

A valuable ally of the United States was lost last Sunday at the death of President Ramon Magsaysay of the Philippines. Although much anti-Americanism prevails there, Magsaysay was pro-American, and an anti-Communist leader who strengthened democracy in the republic.

Noted for the earthquake of 1906 in which 600 persons were killed, San Francisco felt their effects again last week when a series of earthquakes rocked a 150-mile area. No persons were killed, but damage ran into the millions.

According to survey conducted for a religious magazine, only one scientist in seven believes Christ rose from the dead. Dr. A. C. Ivy of the University of Illinois Department of Chemical Science said on the other side of the question: "The scientist who is true to the philosophy of science can doubt the bodily resurrection of Christ, but he cannot deny it. Because to do so means that he can prove that it did not occur."

Evidence linking cigaret smoking and lung cancer was reported last week by a study group of seven scientists. They claim that lung cancer occurs five to 15 times more frequently among cigaret smokers than among the non-smokers and that a direct relationship exists between the incidence of lung cancer and the amount smoked.

Jamestown Festival to Open April 1, Beginning 350th Birthday Celebration

The opening of the Jamestown Festival is scheduled for April 1, bringing an excited air over the Williamsburg - Jamestown - York area.

Stanley Leads In Dedication

Following the dedication of Jamestown Festival Park and the opening of the festival on April 1, the park and exhibits will be open to the public. Playing important roles in the dedication are Governor Stanley, British Ambassador Sir Harold Caccia, Secretary of Commerce Sinclair Weeks, and Secretary of the Interior Fred Seaton.

From April 1, with the music and ceremony, there will be a steady succession of special events there in the historical setting until the celebration ends on Nov. 30. The historic reconstructions and restorations, new roadways and information centers which have been set up cost about $25,-000,000 in celebrating this anniversary year.

Queen to Visit Scene

Both the Queen of the nation that fostered Jamestown and the President of the nation that it contributed to founding are expected to come to this tidewater island to help celebrate the birthday. President Eisenhower is due there this spring, probably in May. The visit of Britain's Queen Elizabeth II is not yet settled, but is semi-officially indicated for next October.

Between Festival Park and the James River, on a stretch of a quarter mile, lie a reproduction of Chief Powhatan's lodge and, as a major attraction, a complete exact reproduction of the original stockaded Jamestown settlement. Riding at anchor just below the village are duplicates of the three tiny sailing vessels, the Susan Constant, the Godspeed and the Discovery, that brought the original colonists to the shore. Visitors will be able to board one of the boats. Indians, soldiers and civilians, in costume, will portray the life there 350 years ago.

"The Founders"

On May 13, the actual anniversary date of the landing at Jamestown, a new music drama by Paul Green, "The Founders," will be given its first performance in the new Cove Amphitheatre in Williamsburg. It will be played at matinees every weekday except Monday to Oct. 19. The new structure is adjacent to the Matoaka Amphitheatre where "The Common Glory" will be performed also.

Fund for Painting Recently Enlarged

Miss Gleaves has announced that the Pan-Hellenic Association has given a cash donation to the fund for the purchase of paintings by Virginia Artists. The purchasing committee hopes to select a painting from the 1957 Virginia Biennial Exhibition at the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts in Richmond. This exhibit will continue through April 28 in Richmond.

Everyone connected with the college has the opportunity of enjoying the paintings in Longwood Collection. This opportunity has been provided by such donations of groups and individuals who are interested in adding to the aesthetic quality of our background.

Virginia Art Seen In Library Exhibit

"Virginia by Virginias" is the art exhibit theme now being shown in the college library.

The paintings in this exhibit were among those commissioned by the Ford Motor Company and reproduced in the March 1956 special Virginia issue of its magazine, Ford Times.

Articles by noted Virginians accompany the reproduced paintings which illustrate many facets of historical and contemporary Virginia. In anticipation of the Jamestown Festival, several paintings depict events to be re-enacted at the scene of the earliest American colony. Virginia's great plantations, Jefferson's architectural masterpieces and numerous scenes of modern Virginia's countryside are represented.

All were painted by Virginia artists whose reputations were well established. As works specifically commissioned for illustration, all were painted with careful regard for the limitations of magazine reproduction.

Sports Federation To Convene Friday

Friday afternoon, representatives form approximately twenty-four Virginia colleges will arrive at Longwood to attend the annual convention of the Virginia Athletic Federation of College Women. While visiting on our campus the group will be staying at Longwood House.

Highlights of the week-end activities include the Longwood Players production of "The Crucible" to be attended Friday night.

Saturday activities will include a talk by Miss Cynthia Mendenhall, Recreational Supervisor at East Carolina College, and a banquet at Longwood House.

According to Annie V. Weaver, Conference President, the group will center their thoughts around the theme "On-the Campus Recreation."

College Purchases Shrubery, Trees

Longwood College has purchased some shrubs and trees from the Greenbrier Farms in Norfolk. These verdures, consisting primarily of evergreen shrubs with some shade trees, will be planted by the company within the next few weeks.

Under the advisement of the Grounds Committee, the greeneries will be scattered throughout the campus at strategic locations. Dr. Robert T. Brumfield, Mr. R. E. Merritt, Mrs. T. H. Hardy, Mrs. Barrye Wall, and Mrs. J. H. Cocks constitute this committee. Chairman Brumfield stated that the approximate cost is seven hundred dollars.

Plans are underway to put permanent plantings at the Dell at Longwood Estate, thus making it a natural amphitheater.

The greenhouse is being used for propagation of plants. Furthermore, a new nursery is being developed to replace the one that is to be removed for the new dormitory.

AKG Donates Holly Tree

In adding to the beauty of the campus even more, Alpha Kappa Gamma is giving a large holly tree. This is intended to be planted in front of the Rotunda to replace the maple tree, which was lost during a storm last summer.

AKG President, Jo Hillsman said that the tree is paid for with money taken in during Circus. The balance of the money will be contributed to the paintings of Longwood.

Competition Promised As Colors Vie For Cup

By PATSY POWELL

Now that spring has slipped up on us, let's take a look at what is available in the line of spring sports at Longwood.

Archery

In the field of archery there is plenty of opportunity for everyone to participate. Color cup competition, which will be held in the near future, is open to all students who have attended the eight practices necessary in order to shoot. Practices are held on Monday and Wednesday afternoons at 4. Five color cup points will go to the color that wins the class archery matches.

Two inter-scholastic archery matches are scheduled for this year. A team of five will be chosen to compete with Westhampton in a home game on May 11. The team will also match skills with a team from William and Mary College, on May 16, in Williamsburg.

Students from Longwood will have the opportunity to compete for honors in the Women's International Telegraphic Archery Tournament. Competition will be held here and scores will be sent to the national organization for a rating.

Tennis

For those who are interested in the sport of tennis there will be competition between the red and whites and the green and whites for the color cup points to be awarded to the tennis winner. According to manager Carol Wolfe, the singles tennis tournament and the doubles tournament will be played in the near future.

Longwood's tennis team will challenge Westhampton in a match to be held here May 11. William and Mary will be Longwood's second rival in matches to be played in Williamsburg, May 16.

Swimming

Students are also urged to support their class colors by participation in the color cup swimming meet. Events for which points can be earned are the relay races, breast stroke, bobbing and the pajama relay.

Wisket and Softball

It is also time to start practicing for wisket and softball. Eight practices are necessary in order to represent your colors in either of these sports. There are many other recreational activities available for those who desire to participate.

Color Cup

As of the present green and whites are leading their red and white rivals in the race for the color cup. The sophomore - senior duo holds 25 points to 5 points held by their freshman and junior challengers. There is, however, still to be competition in tennis, swimming, softball, wisket, and archery. Members of all classes are urged to attend the required number of practices and support their colors, so that Longwood can see a real race for the 1957 color cup.

President, Council Assume AA Duties After Installation

In an impressive service Monday night, the Athletic Association Council for the school year 1956-57 was installed. In addition to the four officers elected by the student body, the managers of the various teams and individual sports assumed their new duties. It is the aim of this council to provide a well-rounded program for the students, which will bring about social, as well as recreational, benefits.

"ALL HAIL, ALMA MATER" sang Miss Mary Douglas Finch, '22; Dr. Lankford, college president; Mrs. Mildred Davis, '22; and Nancy Lea Harris, '57, at the close of the Founder's Day session Saturday. Miss Finch, who gave the address, was introduced by Mrs. Davis, chairman of the Founder's Day committee. Nancy Lea, Student Government president, also had a part in the program.

Class of 1907 Awarded Cup At Founders' Day Session

There's nothing half so pleasant as coming home again, nearly 300 Longwood College alumnae found Saturday as the 2's and 7's had their reunions at the 73rd Founder's Day.

The Jarman cup for the best attendance went to the golden anniversary of the class of 1907, which had 55 percent of its 13 living members on hand. The 35th anniversary class of 1922 was on the program, with Miss Mary Douglas Finch making the Founder's day address, and the classes from the 2 and 7 years held special reunions.

Alumni heard Miss Finch describe her years of teaching in Kobe and Hiroshima, Japan, and Dr. Frances G. Lankford deliver a state of the college address. They also dedicated a parlor at the alumnae house, and elected officers.

President's Appeal

"Longwood's greatest need now is faculty housing," Dr. Lankford told the alumnae. He stressed the importance of such housing facilities in obtaining top flight faculty members.

The University of Virginia has constructed a faculty village, and Hampden-Sydney College is considering plans for faculty buildings. No state funds are available for such buildings, according to Dr. Lankford. He suggested that the alumnae adopt faculty housing as their next project.

He outlined a plan whereby alumnae would contribute $5.000 a year toward such a building program.

The alumnae association's big project has been the renovation and furnishing of the alumnae house. Sost of the project is expected to top $20,000 before it is completed.

Parlor Dedicated

A parlor in the alumnae house, furnished by relatives of Miss Minnie Vaughn Rice, was dedicated Saturday morning.

Taking part in the ceremony were Mrs. Pollard English, a niece of Miss Rice, and her family, of Richmond. Dr. T. M. Simpson, retired dean of Randolph-Macon College in Ashland, was the speaker. Mrs. Francis Simkins of Farmville, accepted the donation on behalf of the alumnae association, and Dr. Lankford accepted on behalf of the college.

At the business meeting of the association on Saturday afternoon, Miss Elsie Stossel, of Richmond, was named the new president.

Memorials Planned

Announcement as made of plans to have a portrait of Mrs. Ruth H. Coyner painted for the alumnae house. Mrs. Coyner, who retired last year, supervised Longwood students practice teaching at the Farmville Elementary School and served as alumnae secretary for 18 years.

A library is to be established at the alumnae house in honor of Miss Mary Clay Hiner, retired Longwood English professor, who taught at Longwood for 30 years.

Lankford Speaks to Local Rotarians Of College's Vital Role in Community

The already vital role Longwood College plays in the educational and economic life of the community may double in significance under the impact of doubling student enrolments, Dr. F. G. Lankford, Longwood president, pointed out in an address before the Rotary Club.

"The future of Longwood College is inevitably bound up with increasing numbers of students," Dr. Lankford said, reviewing Virginia statistical studies which show enrollments increasing by a steady crescendo from now until 1970.

Assuming that Longwood maintains its present percentage of Virginia's college enrollment (835 of 16,924), Dr. Lankford showed that the college here in all probability may have 1,674 of the state's 33,750 college students expected in the 1969-70 session.

The college president sees the Longwood student body growing by annual increments of about 50, a rate of growth which it has experienced since the 1954-55 session.

Follows U. S. Pattern

"Statistical studies show that in the next 14 years the U. S. and the Virginia enrolments at the college level will just about double. We anticipate Longwood's getting her proportionate share of the state and national numbers," he said.

While the doubled enrolments do not necessarily mean double plant facilities and faculties, they do mean great increases and most certainly hard thinking and work to make more efficient use of existing plants, the Longwood president said.

For the community of Farmville, Dr. Lankford sees in the increasing number of students: (1) increasing financial assets through increased payrolls and capital expenditures for new buildings and improvements to existing ones; 2) increased commercial transactions such as food purchases and fire, accident and student hospitalization insurance, and (3) long-term assets in such things as faculty homes (21 members now own Farmville residential property.)

To Emphasize Teaching

"Whatever the future demands of Longwood in meeting our share of the vast problem, there are two things that we intend to preserve: our emphasis on teacher education and our selective admissions program," Dr. Lankford said.

"We consider our role in the development of Virginia teachers big, important and vital. We are satisfied with and proud of that role," he declared.

In place of doubling present facilities probably the most expensive way to handle the problem, Dr. Lankford pointed out several of the projected ways of meeting the issue:

Year-round operation of colleges on a tri-semester basis; branch colleges established by mother institutions already existing; community junior colleges in heavy population centers; closed circuit TV and fuller use of present facilities.

"Competing for Longwood's share of new facilities and a larger faculty will provide one of our and the community's challenges now," the president said.

Faculty Follies Friday

VOLUME XXXVI | Longwood College, Farmville, Va., April 10, 1957 | No. 17

—Agee Studio

Beginning practice for May 4 festivities are Pat Jones, Carol Wolfe, Jo Davis, and Flo Sogholan who will play the major roles in the pageant.

Leads Selected For May Pageant

Jones to Hold Role As Play Narrator

Pat Jones, a senior from Waynesboro, has been chosen narrator of the 1957 May Day Pageant, "Jacobus Rex, 1607," on May 4.

The script written by Anita Heflin and Jeanne Saunders will feature Pat costumed in typical seventeenth century dress. She will portray this character similarly to the narrator in the "Common Glory."

Holding leading parts in the May 4 program will be Carol Wolfe, as John Smith; Dixie Hillard, as John Rolfe; Jo Davis, as Powhatan; and Flo Sogholan, as Pocahontas.

The cast will also include seven councilmen.

The pageant will portray dramatic events during the period from 1607-19. They will re-enact the happenings familiart events as the wedding of Pocahontas to John Rolfe, the coming of the first women to Virginia and the ritualistic dances of the Virginia Indians and the early settlers.

The Collegians from East Carolina will play for both the concert from 4:30 until 5:30 in the Dell and for the May Day dance the following evening at 8 o'clock.

The Collegians, known also as the "Best Band in Tarheel Land," have provided music for many occasions. Some of their engagements have been at the Casino at Nags Head, the Memorial Auditorium and the Sir Walter Raleigh Hotel in Raleigh, the Azalea Festival and the Harvest Festival in Wilmington, and the Presidents' Ball in Elizabeth City.

The price for the concert will be one dollar per couple and fifty cents stag. The dance will be $2.40 per couple.

"Since this is the first time Longwood has had a concert during May Day week end, I hope we will have the support of the entire student body," commented Carolyn Clark, chairman of May Day.

Brubeck To Head Longwood Players

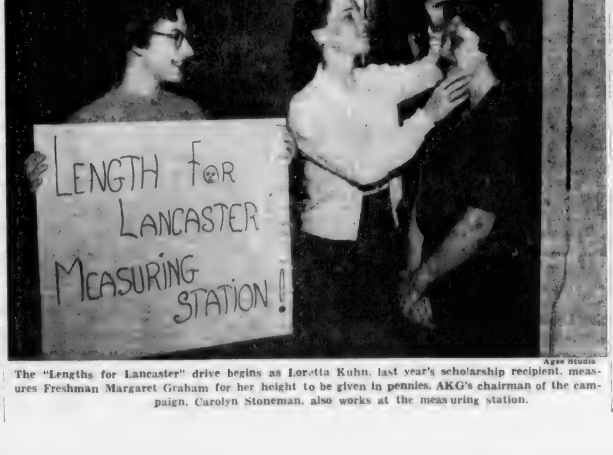
Longwood Players have been keeping activities underway since their past production of Arthur Miller's "The Crucible" with the election of new officers and the voting for the Little Oscar Awards to be presented near the close of this semester.

Heading the dramatic club as its newly - elected president will be Nancy Brubeck, sophomore from Staunton. Serving as vice president will be Hannah Haile.

Other officers are corresponding secretary, Ann Wheeler; recording secretary, Carol Lash; technical director, Pat Walton; and treasurer, Virginia Londeree.

This club, which is sponsored by David Wiley, has presented two full-length productions this year, the fall play being, "Skin of Our Teeth." Among their other activities, the Players have given a series of one-act plays and sponsored a play, "A Phoenix too Frequent," at the state college drama festival in Richmond where they claimed high praise and favor for their "worthwhile literary, adult play," according to critic Alan Schneider, who termed their play, "Southern Fry."

Longwood Players also award a $200 scholarship to a student who has shown among other qualifications a valuable interest in dramatics on this campus. Their first scholarship was given last year to Flo Sogholan.



Freddy Stables, a senior from Crewe, is the club's past president.

Faculty Show Coming Soon

On Friday, April 12, at 8 p.m. Jarman Hall's curtain will open and the spotlight will be focused on the annual Longwood College faculty talent show. Sponsored by the Student Government Association, the talent show will be held to raise money for the Dabney S. Lancaster Scholarship Fund. All proceeds will be donated to this fund.

Nancy Lenz, chairman of the talent show, has announced that the general theme of the show will be "Life at Longwood," depicting the Freshmen and Rat Day, the radio shows, May Day, and many other aspects of the college life.

Admission will be 35 cents.

Agee Studio

The "Lengths for Lancaster" drive begins as Loretta Kuhn, last year's scholarship recipient, measures Freshman Margaret Graham for her height to be given in pennies. AKG's chairman of the campaign, Carolyn Stoneman, also works at the measuring station.

Dance Group To Perform

Orchesis members and apprentices with students from the second semester modern dance class will perform for visiting high school students on Saturday, April 13 at 1 p.m. in Jarman Hall.

Six works will be staged as problems in "learning how to dance," with each being done as a class problem in which the idea or theme behind it will be demonstrated by one or two different groups, after which the audience will be asked to comment upon what they saw. After discussion, what was understood or misunderstood (not clear), the dance will be further broken down into its simplest essentials. The dance will then be shown in costume with lighting further enhancing the work. The audience will be given opportunities to comment or ask questions after the work has been given in its final theatrical form.

"Landscape" a group work to Guion's, Prairie Dusk, as a space study of the pioneer woman will open the program. Two groups of four students each will perform. Pat Altizer, Joan Dorsey, Carol Lash and Dottie Marshall will make up one group. Wayne Boyden, Charlotte Jewel, Jean O'Connell and Sally Parrott will make up the second group.

"Seascape," a second space work as a study of the sea, to music from Britten's opera, "Peter Grimes" will be danced by Carol Lash, Joan Dorsey, Dottie Marshall, Nancy Knowles, Ellen Trader, and possibly Charlotte Jewel and Wayne Boyden.

"Pref" as a completed work based upon the emotion of sorrow uses Barber's Adagio for Strings and excerpts from Magruelre's poem, The Root, with Pat Altizer, Carol Lash and Ellen Trader as dancers.

Two lullabies based upon basic dance techniques, ethnic dance form and abstractions of contemporary social dance patterns will make up the third and fourth studies. Oriental Lullaby, to music of Tansman, will be dance by Wayne Boyden and Pat Mitchell with members of the class demonsrating various approaches to the problem. A static yet satisfyingly serene quality pervades here.

Thomson's music will be used for an approach to a contemporary (in feeling) Tango Lullaby. At this stage Pat Altizer's movement which

SGA President Speaks

Student Goverment Is For You

A point that needs to be stressed is the fact that each of you is a member of the Student Government Association of Longwood College.

This editorial is being written as an effort to assist you, the students, to understand the purposes and activities of your Student Government, and the responsibility you have acquired by being a member of Longwood's Student Government.

Student Government holds the important position of being an elected, representative body on our campus with the general responsibility for the welfare of each student. By having a group such as this organized and supported, it allows for a Council to meet the needs of the students, and also provide a place where suggestions can be effectively presented and analyzed.

It is the purpose also of having a council such as this to help provide for an environment which will stimulate the intellectual growth of the student body. This includes all phases of college life-academic, athletic, cultural, and social affairs, for each of these contributes to the forming or growth of a well rounded student.

Another purpose of your Student Government is the contributions through its programs and activities in making Longwood a much better place in which to live. Only through understanding and cooperation with all students, faculty, and administration can Longwood be such a place. This relationship has been improved by the meetings that the Council has had with the personnel of the college.

The meetings every Tuesday night are held for the purpose of planning programs to benefit the student body or working out problems for the betterment of the students and the college. The most important responsibility being the enforcement of the Honor Code.

All through the year, the Student Government sponsors other activities, starting at the beginning of the year with the orientation program for freshmen and new students; continually enforcing the handbook rules, written by the Council; sponsors an assembly program, a rec dance, and also sends delegates to the National S.C.A. Convention.

Above are a few of the activities performed by the Student Government and as members of this association you are responsible for supporting these activities in order for them to function properly.

Being a student at Longwood, there are other new responsibilities that have been upon each of you. Though you are limited by necessary rules, you are given a new freedom which you are experiencing for the first time. That freedom of making your own decisions, using your own judgment. The Student Government hopes to inspire each of you to use your judgment in the very best way.

As students of Longwood, the Student Government requests your fullest cooperation and understanding for the never-ending task of making your college life one of much satisfaction.

Time To Evaluate

A Fine Job, Nancy Lea Harris

Ordinarily it is not a policy of this newspaper to "play up" any one organization or one person. But readers can be assured that when praise of an organization or person is justified, our staff will not hesitate to show worthy thanks. Good work speaks for itself; but when a job is constantly well done, there is a tendency for its results to be taken for granted.

On the other hand, if an organization or leader fails to carry out proposed purposes and objectives, those responsible and others around them will probably be aware of the situation without our calling attention to this fact. Certainly it can be assumed that college students or all active on our campus are capable of realizing their responsibilities or any duties they might accept when they become members or leaders in any group.

The Rotunda commends Nancy Lea Harris, outgoing president of the Student Government Association, for her fine work and tireless effort in a job well done. With her name, the word "duty" takes on significant meaning. Heading the Student Council this year, Nancy Lea has continued to hold the Student Body's respect for its leaders and the action they have taken in carrying out their duties.

Among the more recent tasks the outgoing members of the Student Council have begun is the Evaluation Analysis For Student Organizations. This can be a most helpful and necessary study since most of the organizations are now selecting new members and bidding new members. Before they begin their new duties it seems that a time for evaluation of the purposes of the organizations is indeed essential for a successful year ahead, including improvements which might be made. Serious thought should be given to analyzing the purpose, objectives, meetings, membership, activities, and contributions the organization has made to the college. After considering these matters, each organization should ask itself the pertinent and final question which the analysis form presents": Has the organization justified its existence on the campus?

It is our opinion that a valuable analysis will be made by the former president and sponsor of an organization with the new leaders present to study the situation. A purposeful evaluation of any group for work and improvements during the year should not be made by resorting to a dusty student handbook to copy a resume of the organization.

Longwood students are to be commended for excellent work this year in both curricular activities. However, for any organization to continue or begin to do good work, it seems necessary that its new officers and members feel a purpose and new challenge before them.

A vote of thanks to the Student Council for taking this step by which organizations as a result may take added steps to progress.

Between Book Ends At LC

Among the recent books added in our Library is Dr. Gardner B. Tapin's The Life of Elizabeth Barrett Browning which came from the Yale University Press last month. Until Dr. Taplin's biography of the poet, there has not been a basic book sufficiently full and informative to permit studies and interpretation to go forward. Dr. Taplin's life of Mrs. Browning is a "contribution to Victorian scholarship of primary importance," says Harvard professor of Victorian literature, Howard Mumford James. It was from James that Dr. Taplin received his "first inspiration to write the book."

The week's number one best seller among fiction books is The Scapegoat by Daphne du Maurier. Critics say that this book may be Miss du Maurier's greatest book. A contemporary practitioner of the old craft of story invention, the author has given a destined popular book in which a frankly contrived device is made to serve the ends of a substantial study of mixed motivaties and intermingling of good and evil in human character. A novel of suspense and mystery, the story is filled with a sense of mounting excitement, and it has been praised for its human significance.

Number Two best seller on the nonfiction list this week is the Nun's Story by Kathryn Hulme. The book depicts the convent life in a biographical form. Due to an unhappy love affair and other reasons, Gabrielle Van der Mal (fictitious name) entered a convent in Belgium. Working there 17 years, she attempted to discipline her analytical and independent mind. Finally, she accepted the bitter fact that conv.nt life with its chain of authority was not suited for her so she was released from her vows.

"Reading this book will be a rich experience for all but the most earthbound psychiatrists," says the Library Journal.

According to Kirkus, it is a "quite fascinating story of dedication and self-denial of the life with walls and its self-effacing strictures, of the inspirational ideal here tempered by an understanding of personal fallibility."

Bruce Catton, author of the Pulitzer Prize winner, A Stillness at Appomattox, has now written another historical book. This Hallowed Ground, a story of the Union side of the Civil War.

This Hallowed Ground is military history. But it devotes far less attention to fine points of strategy and tactics of the art of war than do many military histories. Catton's writing is down to earth as a definition of that art which he attributes to Grant. The art of war, Grant said, was "to find out where your enemy is, get at him as soon as you can and strike on him as hard as you can and keep moving on." . . . "Changes of focus, abundance of new illustrations and exceptional stylistic ingenuity make this new work fresh and distinctive. Reading it is sheer joy." B. I. Wiley, New York Times.

Beginning at 4 p.m., the meet will include competition in nine events. The events in which the classes will clash are bobbing, the 50 yard relay, the 25 yard breast stroke, the pajama relay, the 50 yard free style, the 25 yard back crawl, and diving. Those entering diving competition will be asked to execute three dives; one plain, one jacknife, and one optional choice.

In order to participate in the swimming meet a student must have attended four recreational swimming periods. No contestant may enter more than three events. Everyone is urged to support her class colors by participation in the annual swimming meet.

Colors Match Abilities In Spring Sport's Race

By VIOLET SCOTT

Last week the semi-finals for the tennis tournament again got under way with Carole Wolfe defeating Linda Vess 6-2; 6-2. One more semi-final match is scheduled to be played and then the finals will determine a champion.

As a result of bad weather, the tournament is a continuation of the matches scheduled for this past fall. It is the hope of the tennis manager that the remaining matches can be completed by April 13, in order that the color cup points for tennis can be awarded to the winning classes.

Plans are now being made for the competition in doubles tennis matches. Those interested in trying their luck in doubles play should sign the list on the Athletic Association's Bulletin board or see Judy Holderman.

Softball, wisket, and archery also add points toward the color cup. Softball practices are held on Mondays and Wednesdays at 5 p.m., and wisket practices are held on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons at 5. Eight practices in either sport or in a combination of the two sports will enable a person to be eligible for the class team. Archery practices are held on Monday and Wednesday afternoons at 3. In order to shoot for your class you must have attended eight practices.

Is Longwood being affected by the spring fever or monkey business that occurs on so many other campuses all over the country at this time of the year.

Climb Mount Slater

Spring started right here at Longwood a long time ago with the construction of the dining hall, and since then we have been having the longest Springs recorded anywhere. They begin some time in February when our pale, insipid students start the first climb to Mount Slater for their early transfusions of sun which transform them into berry-brown beauties. When it is Spring at Hampden-Sydney, a young man's thoughts likely turn to how to get the girls off the roof and down on the ground. No place else on earth does a student get her final report with all D's and one A in Sun Tan 400. No place else do teachers have to confine their assignments to rainy days only. That's not all—I understand that this year the A. A. Association is giving an award to the girl with the best Spring Spirit.

In general, Spring has an extraordinary effect on ole L. C. More raincoats and scarves are seen at eight o'clock classes, Seniors begin to do the bop to "Pomp and Circumstances", Freshmen gym classes are being hauled out to Longwood pastures for May Day practice. Another batch of unique reproductions of the Episcopal Church are being produced by Longwood artists. A bunch of arsonists go ape in back of the library with some spooky looking individuals. The raincoat clad droves beat a path up the Willis Mountain trail every Saturday and Sunday afternoons. Tissues are passed out in assemblies, and "Farewell to Thee" becomes the top tune of the campus.

Spring hits Vassar, and Spring hits Yale.
And it hits Longwood like a ton of hail.
It happens everywhere this time of year
But not the way it hits us here.
Notre Dame may have started the football pass,
And Tech is the founder of the quarterly class.
To the barber shop girls
Goes the invention of curls.
Peabody U. (with all on cue) started to sing,
But Longwood College started the Spring.

And after all is done and said, we must conclude that the anthropologist is right—man did stem from the small version of the ape—commonly known as the monkey. We conclude that this explains the monkey business that occurs on the campus every spring.

'TheCrucible' Earns Praise

By H. V. LANCASTER, JR.

The Longwood Players and Hampden-Sydney Jongleurs' presentation of Arthur Miller's tale of witchcraft, "The Crucible," marked another success in a long series of outstanding performances on the college stage. Although the group did not quite measure up to the high standards set by some of their past performances, they did an admirable job with a difficult play; and their efforts were well received by the audience.

The most outstanding performance by far was given by Molly Workman who portrayed the deceitful and opportunistic Abigail Williams. Molly was very convincing as the cruel, selfish villainess who vacillated between the extremes of cold disdain and wild hysteria and whose character was pervaded by an air of self-righteousness.

Much of the success of the play was due to the acting of Fred Stables who played the part of John Proctor. Fred ably portrayed a practical farmer who was at first mildly amused by the town's indulgence in a search for witchcraft, then became indignant over the injustices which were taking place, and finally entrapped when he heroically tried to right the situation; but he somehow failed to convey the finer aspects of John Proctor's inner struggle, which was needed to give depth to the characterization. This may have been due to the brief soliloquies at the end of Act I, Scene 2 and Act II, Scene 2 which were a little too histrionic to be effective. In all other respects, Fred Stables gave a superb performance; and he deserves much credit for a difficult job admirably done.

"The Crucible" was under the capable direction of David Wiley, assisted by Patti Parker Dobyns. The play was a timely and forceful demonstration of what happens when a community is seized with superstition, fear, and hysteria. It happened then; it could happen now.

NEA Makes Survey Of Teachers

The National Education Association (NEA) today made public results of the first comprehensive survey ever conducted on the professional, economic, and social life of the American teacher. Complete tabulations show, among other things, that teachers are heavy voters, that most women as well as men teachers are married, that most are well qualified professionally, and that 72 percent of all male teachers supplement their earnings.

The survey, a 64-page centennial-year project of the NEA Research Division, "makes it possible to replace a number of myths and stereotypes with the facts on today's teachers. It is also possible for the first time to draw a realistic composite picture of the nation's 1,100,000 classroom teachers."

The Man Teacher

The typical man teacher is 35.4 years old, married, and has either one or two children. Most of the men teachers are married — 87.7 percent. The average number of children of married men teachers is 1.8.

He holds a bachelor's degree. A master's or higher degree is held by 42.0 percent of the male teachers.

His total teaching experience is 8.0 years; this includes 4.8 years in the school system in which he is now employed.

His annual salary from teaching is $4374. For the rural man teacher the average is $3671; and for the urban, $4784. His salary from teaching represents 86.0 per cent of his total income.

The typical man teacher devotes 11.3 hours a week to school duties in addition to the regular school day.

An active member in a church, he also belongs to at least one other community organization. He voted in his school community in the most recent election. A total of 84.8 percent of the men teachers voted.

If he could go back to his college days and start over again, it's a toss-up as to whether he would again become a teacher. Of all the men teachers, 53.9 percent say they would teach again. However, 16.6 percent are not sure what their choice would be, and 29.5 percent think they would do something else.

The Woman Teacher

The typical woman teacher is 45.5 years of age, married, and has one child. In addition to the 54.0 percent of women teachers who are married, 11.9 percent are widowed. Only 34.1 percent are unmarried. The average number of children of married women teachers is 1.4.

She holds a bachelor's degree. A master's or higher degree is held by 18.1 percent.

Her total teaching experience is 15.4 years. This includes 7.6 years in the system where she is now employed.

Her annual salary from teaching is $3932. For the rural woman teacher the average is $3165; and for the urban, $4473. Her salary from teaching represents 95.3 percent of her total income.

She is an active member in a church and at least two other community organizations. She voted in her school community in the most recent election. A total of 86.4 percent of the women teachers voted.

If she could go back to her college days and start over, she would again become a teacher. Of all the women teachers, 80.7 percent reported that they would again choose to teach.

Lancaster Scholarship

participation in the Lancaster Scholarship, Alpha Kappa Gamma is again sponsoring the "Lengths for Lancaster" drive to collect funds for the scholarship. This ingenious way of raising money was begun last year by AKG. Chairman of the drive, Carolyn Stoneman, announced that the results of last year's campaign were so encouraging and rewarding that the idea is being used again this year. The object of the drive is to receive from each student her height in pennies. AKG members began the drive Tuesday, April 2, when they distributed a roll of scotch tape to some students.

The drive will last until April 16 when members of AKG will collect the lengths of pennies from students throughout the dormitories. Each student is urged to participate in the "Lengths for Lancaster" drive, and to contribute to the Lancaster Scholarship.

Orchesis Concert

stems from social dance patterns is dominant in the class's choice for the group work. This will be shown as a dance's development in the early stages of dance composition with all members of the class performing.

"Heavenly Grass" a nostalgic study using the singing voice and one basic dance technique to music by Bowles will be the final work. Faye Dula, as the singing voice, sets the stage for action with two groups performing. Mate Fadely, Nancy George and Judy Martin will dance in the first group. Pat Altizer, Joan Dorsey and Pat Mitchell will perform in the second group.

Mrs. Emily K. Landrum, Associate Professor of Physical Education, will direct the program.

All students and faculty members are invited to attend this preview of the dance concert which will be given in early May. There is no charge. Everyone in the audience is invited to participate in the discussion periods allotted each number.

Lancaster Scholarship Awarded to Sophomore

Dorothy Boswell has recently been awarded the Dabney S. Lancaster scholarship for the coming year. The Student Government Association has presented this scholarship for the past three years to a student deemed worthy of receiving it. This year the Dabney S. Lancaster Scholarship was an award of $200 for the academic year, 1957-58. Previous recipients have been Muriel Boswell and Loretta Kuhn.

DOROTHY BOSWELL

Dot, an incoming Junior, is an elementary major from Midway Island. Active in many organizations, Dot has been freshman and sophomore house president and has recently been elected secretary of House Council. She has worked on the Virginian staff for the past two years and will act as assistant business manager for the '58 Virginian.

To Honor Lancaster

The scholarship was established by the Student Government Association in 1955, honoring Dabney S. Lancaster, President Emeritus of Longwood College. Since the purpose of the scholarship is to recognize and assist as large a number as possible, the appointment is for one year only.

Recipient's Qualifications

The qualifications of the recipient of the award included:

1. The young lady must have been at Longwood as an undergraduate student at least one academic year.
2. While scholastic attainment alone is not the sole criterion for receiving the award, the recipient must possess a cumulative average of "C" or above.
3. The need of the student is to be given due consideration.
4. The recipient must give promise of becoming a worthy example of educated womanhood, and she must have demonstrated that she has acquired the spirit of the college.

Members of the senior class who were on the Student Council acted as a screening committee presenting final nominations to the Committee on Final Selection composed of faculty members.

In order to encourage student participation in the Lancaster Scholarship, Alpha Kappa Gamma again sponsored the "Lengths for Lancaster" drive to collect funds for the scholarship. The object of the drive was to receive from each student her height in pennies. Chairman of the drive, Carolyn Stoneman, announced that the results were very gratifying.

The Student Council is making plans to increase the Dabney S. Lancaster Scholarship in the future. It is their hope that in years to come the Scholarship will enable a student to study in Europe.

Where Do You Go From Here?

CONGRATULATIONS, Senior Class of 1957, in completing your four successful years here at Longwood.

The years which you have spent here reflect the improvements which have been made by your help in our college. As you leave, we extend our appreciation to you for the fine work and good example you have set before us as the graduating class.

Although not on campus, there are still many ways you can still be important parts of Longwood College. With the vast number of students applying for admission, you could be most helpful to this college by keeping alert to qualified girls and aiding in our improving quality in our student body at a time when it is challenged by quantity.

You will also soon be welcomed by local Longwood Alumni Chapters in which you can become very active students of Longwood. You are encouraged to act civically, keeping the fact in mind that we are a state institution and that you, as voters, will determine the aid we receive or the future of the college.

Each of you are living examples of that for which Longwood stands. Your lives will reflect either credit or discredit to your school. You are not only Longwood graduates now, but always Longwood graduates. Our very best wishes for the future.

In any case, her conduct, upon return, must be above question.

If a student's sobriety is questioned at any time, an immediate investigation will be made and the matter dealt with severely.

Dating. Young men calling on students must be on the list of approved callers maintained by the college. Such callers are placed on the list if they are approved by the parents of the students on whom they wish to call. The administration approves Hampden-Sydney students. Young men not previously placed on the list, who call unexpectedly on students, may be given tentative approval by the Dean of Women for one call or one weekend; but they cannot call again until the students obtain approval from their parents.

Marriage. If a student is married during the period from the opening of school until commencement, with the exception of the Christmas holidays, she must have permission from her parents prior to the event; and this permission must be reported in writing to the Dean of Women before the marriage takes place. In any case of marriage, during the Christmas holidays or summer vacation, the student must notify the Dean of Women within 24 hours upon her return to college.
